Mr. Forest, Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, laid before the House,—Returns to the foregoing Orders.

The House resumed the adjourned consideration of the Report Stage of Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported with amendments from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Laprise, seconded by Mr. Matte, moved,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by inserting in clause 15, after the words “person who” on line 11 on page 35, the following words:

“being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner”—

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived, on division.

Mr. Woolliams for Mr. McCleave, seconded by Mr. MacEwan, moved,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by inserting in clause 18 after sub-section 7 of section 237 on page 44 the following subsection:

“(8) Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person.”

And debate arising thereon;

Mr. Burton, seconded by Mr. Mather proposed to move in amendment thereto,—That the proposed subsection (8) be amended by adding thereto the following:

“or any member of a hospital staff to assist in procuring such mis-carriage.”

A point of order having been raised as to the relevancy and form of the said proposed amendment;

RULING BY MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER

MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I have considered the points raised, the original point of order raised by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) as to whether or not an amendment to a motion moved under the provisions of Standing Order 75 is admissible, and the point raised by the honourable Member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) as to whether in fact this amendment would follow the criteria long established for the admissibility of amendments, namely, is it consistent and relevant to the motion. My ruling on whether or not the amendment is admissible as an amendment, namely whether it is consistent and relevant to the motion, is that it is. On those grounds I do not think it would be necessary to make any changes in its wording.

On the other point, I realize the importance of the point raised by the Minister of Justice. It seems to me again that Standing Order 75 is very specific. It does provide for debate and amendment.

I listened to the Minister of Justice with a great deal of care, as I always do, but I feel that this particular Standing Order is declaratory and is perfectly clear. Under the circumstances I am bound to rule that the amendment is admissible.

Whereupon, Mr. Burton, seconded by Mr. Mather, moved in amendment thereto,—That the proposed subsection (8) be amended by adding thereto the following:

“or any member of a hospital staff to assist in procuring such mis-carriage.”

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said proposed amendment, it was negatived on the following Division:

JOURNALS

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1969.

2.00 o'clock p.m.

PRAYERS.

Mr. Legault for Mr. Francis, from the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs, presented the Third Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following items listed in the Main Estimates 1969-70:

Votes 1, 5, 10, 20, 25, 30, 35, 38, 40 and 45, relating to the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 9 and 10) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 67 to the Journals).

Mr. Blair, from the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented the Second Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

1. On Monday, March 10, 1969, the House sent the subject-matter of Notice of Motion No. 40 to your Committee. It is as follows:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should give consideration to the advisability of establishing a form of internship program in the House of Commons; the purpose of said program being to better equip outstanding young political scientists, journalists and law school faculty members, with a better understanding of the national legislative process; the participants to be brought to Ottawa for six to nine months of full-time work as assistants to Members of the House of Commons and to be paid a minimum stipend financed by the government and an established grant, competition for the fellowship to be made each year, announced to coincide with the opening of a session.

2. This proposal is the result of an initiative by Mr. Alfred D. Hales, M.P., one in which he was later joined by the Canadian Political Science Association in June 1967. Mr. Hales and the Canadian Political Science Association made a presentation to your Committee setting out in detail a programme for Parliamentary Internships. The programme, while not involved, is set out in the attached Appendix as it was, in part, presented to the Committee by Mr. Hales and the Canadian Political Science Association and is presented in this form so that the Members of this House will have an opportunity to examine and assess it.

3. Your Committee has approved the proposal in principle and commends it to the House, noting that the present proposal does not contemplate any support from public funds. In approving this proposal, your Committee expresses no opinion on whether this project should be continued after 1973 when the contemplated initial private support may cease. It realizes that it cannot commit Parliament or the Government to expenditures now or in the future. Your Committee is of the opinion, nevertheless, that if this project is carried on after 1973 the programme must have a source of private funds representing not less than fifty percent of the proposed annual budget for two reasons. First, while the internship programme will be of benefit to Parliament and its members it will be of particular benefit to the academic community; and second, the members of the Committee felt that there should be no hint of Governmental control over the programme. It is felt that if such control were to come about Canadian scholars would not receive the full benefits from the scheme.

4. Your Committee has been assured by the House Leaders of the various parties that they feel the goals of the programme are sound and that they support them; but they have the same reservation that the Committee has expressed above.

5. The House should know that the Committee does not consider this programme as a solution to the need that Members may have for extra assistance and the programme must be evaluated for its contribution to the education of the interns and the better understanding of the governmental process by scholars and eventually by the public. The Committee is continuing consideration of proposals to supply extra assistance to Members and the Committees of the House and may further report to the House on this matter.

6. It is understood that the Canadian Political Science Association is now seeking to raise the necessary money for the initial three-year period. If this can be found, and the Committee has good grounds to believe it will, with the co-operation of the House, the internship programme could be in operation by 1970.

The General Nature of the Proposal. It is recommended that each year 6-12 young Canadian university graduates be given staff assignments in Parliament lasting from 8-10 months. These assignments will be so designed as to enable students to supplement their academic training with a practical working knowledge of how Parliament functions and the everyday work of private Members of Parliament. Assignments will be carefully designed so that these will be beneficial both to Members in enabling them to perform their duties more effectively and be a valuable educational experience for young people as they proceed toward their chosen occupations.

The Objective of the Programme. The Constitution of the Canadian Political Science Association states that the sole objects of the organization are to advance the study and teaching of Political Science in Canada. In these terms, the participation of the Canadian Political Science Association in such a scheme can be justified only if it has significant academic consequences. We would expect most interns to be drawn from young people who have had academic training in Political Science or from studies like law, history and journalism which relate directly to political institutions. We would also hope and expect that in the selection process some preference—although not a completely overriding one—would be given to applicants who are either engaged in graduate study in those disciplines most closely related to government or indicate that they are about to undertake such studies.

The objectives of this scheme can best be attained by a joint effort on the part of the Canadian Political Science Association and Parliament. Obviously it would be impractical for the Association to contemplate such a venture without participation by Members of the House of Commons. On the other hand, it is not inconceivable that the House could establish and implement such a programme itself with financial support entirely from public funds. However, we would argue that this arrangement would both deny the programme and the academic skills and perspectives that the Canadian Political Science Association can bring to it and expose the scheme to partisan disputes. We would also argue that in its initial years the objectives of the plan can better be achieved through financial support from a private foundation rather than from public funds as the latter would give the Government of the day an ultimate authority over the scheme.

Eligibility. We propose that prior to March 15 of each year 6-12 persons be selected to serve as parliamentary interns beginning in September of that year and extending through to the next June. These would be men and women between 21 and 35 years of age who had recently graduated from Canadian universities and who would normally be Canadian citizens. Some preference, although not a completely exclusive one, would be given to persons whose academic studies had related directly to government and politics.

As with other Canadian arrangements, it would be desirable to select interns at least partly on a regional basis and to choose persons from both linguistic communities. With this broad principle, the Committee in charge of the programme could evolve what they believe to be an appropriate regional-linguistic balance. There is a temptation in establishing such a programme to give a considerable preference to those who have a degree of bilingual competence or even to exclude others completely. We believe such a policy would unduly restrict the range of choice among prospective interns. However, if an intern has not some reasonable degree of bilingual competence, he should be required to take intensive language training, while in Ottawa, under the arrangements provided for other members of the staff services of Parliament.

Internship Programmes. The actual internship programmes will need to be worked out in collaboration with the relevant officers of Parliament and those of the Canadian Political Science Association. The following circumstances and considerations would seem to apply:

(a) Programmes would be designed to serve both academic and parliamentary objectives. From the latter perspective, the intern would need to be assigned duties useful to parliamentarians and not be directly engaged, at least during normal working hours, on his research. On the other hand, these duties must have some relevance to the academic and systematic study of government.

(b) There are several possible kinds of assignments. We would expect that the interns' first week in Ottawa would be spent in an orientation period so they would get an overview of the work of the House of Commons as a whole. Such a period would include time with the Clerk of the House, the Chief Law Clerk, the Chief of the Committees Branch and a visit to each of the main departments of government. While the details of assignments will have to be worked out later, we would anticipate that most will include staff services to private Members or groups of Members and that those Members carrying the heaviest responsibilities such as Caucus Chairmen or Chairmen of Standing Committees would be given preference in having interns assigned to them.

(c) Ideally, an intern would have at least two concurrent assignments during his period in Ottawa. The major difficulty here would be his passing from one political party to the other, although this would be mitigated if one assignment was with some part of the staff of the House of Commons.

(d) Assignments should be made by some process of mutual choice between the parliamentarians directly involved and the interns. Perhaps the Committee of the Canadian Political Science Association and the House of Commons in charge of the programme could design more assignments than there are interns available and during their first week in Ottawa the interns and the relevant parliamentarians could conduct this placement to their mutual satisfaction.

Administration. The administration of the programme would be in the hands of a committee representing the interests involved. It would consist of (a) the Academic Director, chosen by the Executive of the Canadian Political Science Association, (b) a Member of Parliament designated by the Committee of House Leaders and (c) a member of the staff of the House of Commons designated by the Speaker. This committee would be chaired by the Director appointed by the Canadian Political Science Association Executive from among political scientists in Ottawa or in a university within reasonable travelling distance of the capital.

The Committee would have the following responsibilities:

- (a) Designing and executing the selection of interns;
- (b) Designing assignments and ratifying the placement of interns;
- (c) Carrying out the week-to-week operation of the programme.

The Academic Director would have the further responsibilities of:

(a) meeting with interns as a group at regular intervals and carrying out a programme of seminars with them as well. Perhaps as supervising the completion of a written "de-briefing" assignment by each intern in which he will analyse his experience in terms of his contribution to his academic development;

(b) making an annual report on the programme to the Canadian Political Science Association Executive and the general membership of the Association and to the House of Commons through the Speaker.

Financing. The total annual costs of the programme when it is in operation would be about $70,500. If this proposal is accepted, the Canadian Political Science Association at its next Executive meeting in June 1969 will appoint an Acting Academic Director for the next year who will immediately begin planning so that the first interns will arrive in Ottawa for the fall of 1970.

It is proposed that a Canadian foundation provide the complete funding for this project during an initial one-year planning period and for a subsequent three years. The total funds to be found are as follows:

|------------------------------|---|------------|
| July 1, 1969 to July 1, 1970 | — | $ 10,500. |
|------------------------------|---|------------|

Rationale

|-------------------------|-----------|
| Selection travel: | $ 3,000. |
| Director's honorarium: | 6,500. |
| General administration: | 1,000. |

$10,500.

|-------------------------------|---|------------|
| July 1, 1970 to June 30, 1973 | — | $211,500. |
|-------------------------------|---|------------|

|-----------------------------------|-----------|
| Interns' stipends $6,000. × 10 = | $60,000. |
| plus items listed above | 10,500. |

$70,500. × 3 = $211,500.

|-------|------------|
| Total | $221,000. |

At the end of the trial period, the House of Commons and the Canadian Political Science Association could decide either to terminate the programme or to continue it under new financial arrangements. Although some support from public funds might be desirable, we believe that the independence of the programme from the Government of the day would better be secured by at least part of the moneys necessary coming from private sources.

Mr. Trudeau, a Member of the Queen's Privy Council, laid before the House,—Copies of Proceedings of the Second Meeting of the Constitutional Conference, held at Ottawa, February 10-12, 1969. (English and French).

The Order being read for the consideration of a Ways and Means motion to amend the Income Tax Act, laid upon the Table, Monday, April 28, 1969;

Mr. Benson, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), moved,—That the said motion be now concurred in.

And the question being put on the said motion, it was agreed to, on division.

Pursuant to Standing Order 60(11), on motion of Mr. Benson, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), Bill C-191, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act was read the first time and ordered to be printed and ordered for a second reading and reference to a Committee of the Whole at the next sitting of the House.

Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported with amendments from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs was again considered at the Report Stage;

Whereupon, the House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Valade, seconded by Mr. Bell,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word “and” on line 5 on page 43 and the “period” after the word “practitioner” on line 8 on page 43 and inserting the following words: “and,

(e) that those means are employed before the period of implantation.”

After further debate, the question being put on the said motion, pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, a recorded Division was deferred.

Mr. Clermont, seconded by Mr. Comtois, moved,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words “or would be likely to” on line 4 on page 43.

And debate arising thereon;

Mr. Laprise, seconded by Mr. Fortin, proposed to move in amendment thereto,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18, on line 4 of page 43 the words “or would be likely to” and substituting therefor the words “according to medical science”.

Mr. Speaker ruled the said proposed amendment out of order as it was not relevant in that it proposed to amend the Bill rather than to amend the motion now before the House.

And, the question being put on the motion, pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, a recorded Division was deferred.

Mr. Laprise, seconded by Mr. Rondeau, moved,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words “a female person who, being pregnant,” on lines 29 and 30 on page 42 and by inserting the following words:

“...a female person who is married or of the full age of twenty-one years, or a female person who is under the full age of twenty-one years, with the written consent of her parents or guardian.”

And debate arising thereon;

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At 10.01 o'clock p.m., the question “That this House do now adjourn” was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

After debate the said question was deemed to have been adopted.

Whereupon, the House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Winch, seconded by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre),—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 110 the words "and for a limited period not exceeding fifteen days" in lines 10 and 11 on page 120.

After further debate, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived on division.

On motion of Mr. McIlraith for Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton), seconded by Mr. Olson, the said bill was concurred in.

Pursuant to Special Order made Friday, May 9, 1969, Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton), seconded by Mr. McIlraith, moved,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be now read a third time and do pass.

And debate arising thereon;

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), seconded by Mrs. MacInnis, proposed to move in amendment thereto,—That Bill C-150 be not now read a third time, but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, with instruction that the said Committee has power to amend Clause 13 of the said Bill, at lines 33 and 34 on page 31, by deleting the words “in accordance with regulations made by the Governor in Council” and by substituting therefor the following words: “in accordance with any law enacted by Parliament”.

And, a point of order having been raised as to the regularity of the said proposed amendment;

Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled the same not to be in order since it was not consistent with the clause which it purported to amend and also that it was in the nature of an expanded negative as it would, if adopted, be a negative of subclause (a) of the proposed new clause 179A(1).

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton), seconded by Mr. McIlraith,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be now read a third time and do pass.

And debate continuing;

Mr. Caouette, seconded by Mr. Fortin, proposed to move in amendment thereto,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act be not read a third time but that it be referred back to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs with instructions to add a clause providing that clause 18 will come into force after the same has been approved by the Canadian people by means of a referendum.

And, a point of order having been raised as to the regularity of the said proposed amendment;

Mr. Speaker ruled the said proposed amendment out of order in that it was not relevant to the motion then before the House and that it went beyond the contents of the bill being considered and that it introduced a proposal involving expenditure of public moneys.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton), seconded by Mr. McIlraith,—That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be now read a third time and do pass.

And debate continuing;

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

PRAYERS.

A Message was received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate had passed the following Bill to which the concurrence of this House is desired:

Bill S-36, An Act to amend the Foreign Insurance Companies Act.—Mr. Benson.

Mr. Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean) for Mr. Beer, from the Standing Committee on Agriculture, presented the Ninth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Monday, March 10, 1969, your Committee travelled from place to place in the four provinces of western Canada, from April 9 to April 20, 1969. Your Committee sought permission to travel west because it felt a need to augment its understanding of agriculture as it is practised from coast to coast, and thus be more effective in making recommendations for policy and legislative changes. In addition, your Committee wished to meet farmers in their local environments to indicate its real concern for the problems facing them.

There were immediate problems which prompted the request to travel to the four western provinces, all of them associated with grain production. Grain farmers faced unusually difficult harvest conditions in 1968. Then, the severe winter hampered transportation, and grain prices have been relatively depressed. In addition, delivery quotas are at a low level. Also, your Committee wished to take a first-hand look at other facets of the Canadian agricultural industry.

Briefly, agriculture in western Canada may be summarized as follows: Manitoba agriculture is dominated by grains, but there is a considerable investment in livestock production, including beef, swine, poultry and dairy cattle. Specialized crop farming includes sunflowers, small fruits and vegetables. Saskatchewan, more than any other province, depends on grain production, particularly wheat. Alberta has a strong balance between livestock and grain production. British Columbia has an extremely diverse agricultural industry, including a strong tree fruits industry, small fruits, vegetables, livestock of all forms and grain and forage crops.

Your Committee visited farmers, research stations, processing plants, universities, wineries and grain elevators. It met officials in board rooms and heard delegations in town halls that were filled to overflowing. The Committee set a precedent for House of Commons Committees by splitting into groups of two or three to visit 24 different locations in Saskatchewan. The turnout of farmers, representatives of associations involved in the agricultural industry and government officials, was impressive. Your Committee estimates that it contacted more than 18,000 farmers and farm representatives in Saskatchewan alone.

Altogether, the trip included visits to: Edmonton, Kinsella, Lacombe and Calgary, Alberta; Vancouver, Cloverdale, Abbotsford, Agassiz, Victoria and Kelowna, British Columbia; Carlyle, Grenfell, Regina, Punnichy, Nokomis, Saskatoon, Hafford, Humboldt, Shaunavon, Swift Current, Melville, Canora, Weyburn, Assiniboia, Battleford, Kerrobert, Porcupine Plain, Kelvington, Meadow Lake, Glaslyn, Moose Jaw, Outlook, Prince Albert and Tisdale, Saskatchewan; Winnipeg, Altona, Portage la Prairie and Selkirk, Manitoba.

Your Committee held five hearings in: Edmonton, Alberta; Abbotsford and Kelowna, British Columbia; Regina, Saskatchewan; Winnipeg, Manitoba. Details are in the relevant printed Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence.

In reference to wheat, your Committee heard briefs which recommended:

- the strengthening of the International Grains Agreement.
- increased efforts to develop and maintain international markets for wheat.
- a new grading system.
- more research on marketing, grading and variety development.
- a two-price system with a higher price for domestic consumption, a lower price for international trade. Various domestic price levels were recommended.
- a one-year emergency acreage payment to alleviate cash shortage problems of some prairie farmers.
- that the marketing of flax, rape-seed and rye be placed under the Canadian Wheat Board.
- a sales organization for all grains.
- improvements in transportation, including a transportation controller and co-ordinator, efforts to hold the line on shipping costs and more extensive development of a Hudson's Bay route.
- the establishment of terminal elevators in Europe.
- the block system of grain handling.

- a review of input costs, including a study of the efficiency of farm supply industries.
- increased foreign aid, including the establishment of a World Food Bank.
- decreased crop insurance costs.
- government machinery to settle labour disputes that could hamper the marketing of farm produce.
- removal of the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials.
- improved Dominion Bureau of Statistics production estimates.
- free movement of feed grains inter-provincially.
- more effective control by the Canadian Wheat Board of feed grain movements.
- an emergency floor price for export wheat.

In reference to livestock production, your Committee heard briefs which recommended:

- a tariff on live poultry, equal to the tariff on eviscerated or dressed poultry.
- a national marketing board for both eggs and poultry meats.
- continuation of feed freight assistance into British Columbia.
- abolition of feed freight assistance; Alberta hog producers felt that feed, grain freight assistance discriminates against Alberta producers.

In reference to special crops, your Committee heard a number of recommendations from fruit and vegetable growers in British Columbia. They included recommendations that:

- farmer-owned processing plants be given Area Development grants to build storage facilities.
- the revenues derived from jam duties be given to producers.
- anti-dumping measures be made more effective.
- the government take steps to assist the apple producers to retain the United Kingdom market.
- the revenues derived from the duty on canned fruits and fruit products be given to the industry.
- the government not abandon established apple grading nomenclature.
- the government take steps to limit competition from subsidized Australian imports.
- the government step up its efforts to control pollution.
- the government help food processing industries to develop pollution control.
- the government offer Farm Credit Corporation loans to tree fruit farmers that would not require repayment for a five-year term.

In reference to the dairy industry, your Committee heard briefs which recommended:

- that the Canadian Dairy Commission change its policies to alleviate regional problems. In British Columbia and Alberta, dairy farmers said subsidy payments and quota regulations should be changed to promote increased production in these areas where butter is currently being imported.
- that quota regulations be changed to allow new producers to enter the industry without need to purchase quotas.
- that the government create regulations to discriminate against “imitation” milk—i.e. all dairy substitutes.
- a school lunch program.

The egg industry briefs recommended:

- the establishment of a national egg marketing board.
- regulations to control the production of powdered eggs.
- research into powdered egg production and uses.
- changes in feed freight assistance. The recommendations varied according to geographical locations, some asking for more assistance, others asking that the program be scrapped.

There were also recommendations that:

- an import duty equal to 50 cents per 100 pounds of sugar be instituted, a measure to protect sugar beet producers from subsidized imports.
- a conservation dam be built at Sugar Lake instead of Mabel Lake.

After reviewing the briefs and the major recommendations, your Committee feels that the problems and solutions go much deeper than the foregoing suggest.

Your Committee feels that the economic return is inadequate in relation to the commitment in agricultural resources, namely: capital, land and labour. As a result, the agricultural industry faces two associated problems:

1. The world cannot afford to buy all the food Canadian agriculture produces at prices that will ensure adequate profit margins for all Canadians involved in the industry.

2. Farmer returns, as compared to labour returns in the Canadian economy as a whole, are unacceptably low for a large percentage of farmers.

During the tour, your Committee found an overwhelming concern with food production costs and prices. Significantly, there was no mention of the social problems of agricultural communities; there was no mention of direct subsidies geared to people rather than resources or products and there was no mention of a need to mobilize resources—including farmers and their families—out of agriculture.

Your Committee feels that long-term goals, policies and programs are necessary for the solution of the basic problems of the agricultural industry. Many of the recommendations the Committee received are short term solutions geared only to the immediate future. Although your Committee sympathizes strongly with the producers experiencing these problems, it also recognizes that short-term solutions should not be such that they produce even greater problems in the longer term. In general, your Committee feels that any solutions which attract more total resources into the major sectors of the agricultural industry could have long-term detrimental effects.

Your Committee also recognizes that the Federal Task Force on Agriculture is preparing a comprehensive report and is expected to make recommendations for long-term solutions to the problems of Canadian agriculture.

In view of the foregoing, your Committee hopes that the Task Force will place emphasis on solutions that would correct the major problems. Your Committee also considers that the solutions should include proposals that would make transitions, where necessary, as painless as possible for the people involved in the industry. Your Committee feels it would be imprudent to recommend legislative changes of the scope it deems necessary to solve the basic agricultural problems before the Task Force on Agriculture completes its report.

As a result of a resolution adopted during the trip, your Committee recommends to the Government the advisability of the establishment of tariffs or other protective measures that will provide that the tariff rates applicable to the importation of live poultry into Canada be made comparable, weight percentage wise, to those rates already in effect on the importation of eviscerated or dressed poultry.

Your Committee also recommends to the Government the advisability of:

- all out efforts by the Canadian Wheat Board and the Government of Canada to develop and maintain international markets for wheat;
- establishment of a two price system or something in lieu of it;
- establishment of a detailed study of terminal and transportation facilities for all grains;
- establishment of an emergency floor price for export wheat;
- increased efforts to control pollution.

Your Committee further recommends to the Government the advisability of measures for alleviating the critical cash position of farmers in the predominantly grain-growing areas of western Canada.

During the tour, the Committee heard many criticisms of the situations in the dairy and feed grain industries. Your Committee reserves recommendations in these fields until completion of its tour of eastern Canada.

Your Committee feels that the western trip was invaluable in acquainting Members with agriculture as it is practised in the four western provinces. It gave the Members the opportunity to see agriculture first-hand, to recognize its problems in action and to talk to farmers and farm leaders on a person-to-person basis. Your Committee recommends the advisability of further trips of a similar nature in the future.

JOURNALS

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, FRIDAY, MAY 30, 1969.

11.00 o'clock a.m.

PRAYERS.

Mr. Isabelle, from the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs, presented the Ninth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following items listed in the Main Estimates 1969-70:

Votes 1, 5, 10 and 15 relating to the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issue No. 37) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 88 to the Journals).

Mr. Watson, from the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development, presented the Third Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following items listed in the Main Estimates 1969-70:

Votes 1, 5, 10, 20, 25, 30, 33, 34, 35, 40, L40, L45, L50, L55, L60, L65, L70, L75, L80, L85 and L90 relating to the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development; and Vote 45 relating to the National Battlefields Commission.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

In the course of its hearings on these Estimates your Committee held numerous meetings to investigate subjects of concern to Members of the Committee. These included housing, education, employment, friendship centres, the operation of art and handicraft businesses, wildlife and conservation, northern transportation, electrical power generation, transmission and distribution in the North and matters concerning Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic.

Your Committee was empowered to adjourn from place to place. At the end of January the Committee visited the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory for several reasons.

First, the Committee wished to meet with the two territorial councils.

Second, to allow the Members of the Committee to view living conditions in the North and more particularly Indian and Eskimo housing conditions during the winter.

Third, the Committee was interested in electric power generation, transmission and distribution in the North.

Fourth, the Committee was concerned about employment of native people by industries and Government agencies based in the North.

While in the North your Committee saw evidence of vigorous and healthy economic growth in both territories.

Both territorial councils expressed a desire for more responsibility for the conduct of northern affairs, and urged acceleration of the transferral of authority from Ottawa to Yellowknife and Whitehorse.

In the course of a continuing study of matters concerning development of the northern territories and the affairs of Indian and Eskimo citizens, your Committee wishes to record unanimously the following general observations.

JOBS

The Committee has heard evidence, confirmed by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, that 40 to 50 percent of the adult male Indian and Eskimo populations of Canada are unemployed for a portion of each year. At each of the Indian and Eskimo communities which the Committee visited during January, Members found a high level of unemployment.

Factors which the Committee found contributed to unemployment in northern communities included lack of skills needed by employers as well as a lack of appreciation on the part of northern based industries of the public interest in and long term advantages of hiring local residents.

In the Yukon, Committee Members were told that efforts by local officials of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and the Department of Manpower to encourage employment of residents of the Yukon, Indian and white, in the major mining construction projects underway, were often frustrated by the hiring hall practices of the trade unions representing the construction workers. With hiring halls in cities to the south union members from those cities were being employed and Yukon residents were being bypassed for jobs.

Committee Members who visited Coppermine, N.W.T., were disturbed to find that very few of the local working population had been able to obtain work in the nearby Coppermine River mining camp after the initial claims staking period. Workers were brought in 1,000 and 1,500 miles from the south while a large percentage of the Eskimo community at Coppermine, 40 miles away, was unemployed.

The Committee recognizes and welcomes the significant steps which have been taken recently by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development to attack unemployment among Indian and Eskimo people including the various pre-vocational and vocational training programs, the off reserve skill training program, the off reserve technology program, the continuing education program, the adult occupational training program and the on job training program.

However, the gravity of the present unemployment situation cannot be overemphasized and unemployment among Canada's Indian and Eskimo peoples shows little sign of diminishing and in fact it is probably increasing.

The Committee is convinced that in addition to expanding existing programs of adult occupational training, on job training and various on reserve and off reserve vocational courses some new impetus must be given to the attack on unemployment.

The Committee urges that regional conferences be held, bringing together all the elements capable of solving the unemployment problem. These include representatives of Federal and Provincial Departments and agencies directly concerned, organized labour, industries located in the general areas of high Indian and Eskimo unemployment and of the Indian and Eskimo people.

Such conferences would permit:

- (a) the establishment of better lines of communication and co-ordination among all the parties involved;
- (b) the exchange and sharing of information concerning successful employment programs involving Indian and Eskimo people and northern employers;
- (c) underlining the crisis proportions of the Indian and Eskimo unemployment and under-employment problem.

The Committee also urges the Government to exercise more authority in the application of conditions relating to the hiring of northern residents contained in the Northern Minerals Assistance Program. Companies should not benefit from this assistance program unless they can demonstrate clearly that they have made special efforts to engage and train available Indian and Eskimo labour.

EDUCATION

Your Committee recognizes the important bearing academic and vocational education has in preparing Indians and Eskimos of all ages for employment. Your Committee plans to continue its investigations into qualities, policies and facilities of educational institutions and to make a report at some future date.

HOUSING

Much Indian Housing is deplorable to a degree scarcely understood by other sectors of the Canadian population. Inadequate housing is both a cause and an effect of depressed economic conditions and frequent apathy and despair on many reserves. The Committee recommends an accelerated Indian and Eskimo housing program.

ARCTIC SOVEREIGNTY

Your Committee heard evidence indicating that Canadian sovereignty over islands of the Arctic archipelago and to the continental shelf in the Canadian Arctic is well established. However, the extent of sovereignty over waters within the archipelago is less certainly defined. Prompt and positive action by the Government is required to define the extent of Canadian sovereignty.

FRIENDSHIP CENTRES

The Committee considers the operation of Indian Friendship Centres to be of major benefit to Indians entering urban life, but considers the supply of funds for these activities by the Department of the Secretary of State to be grossly inadequate.

HANDICRAFTS

The Committee held two meetings on the subject of native handicrafts and was very impressed with the craft and skill of Canada's native people. The work being done to merchandise the crafts and artistic products of the people north of the sixtieth parallel is progressing satisfactorily. The lack of proper capitalization for Canadian Arctic Producers Ltd. is, however, seriously handicapping that company in its efforts to take advantage of the current market potential. The Government should undertake to remedy this as soon as possible.

The situation with regards to handicrafts in the rest of Canada is less satisfactory. Problems of quality control, distribution and merchandizing are major and it is your Committee's view that steps should be taken to eliminate these problems. A well managed handicraft program would increase the returns to the Indian peoples of Canada.

ELECTRIC POWER IN THE NORTH

Your Committee received evidence of unsatisfactory electrical service in many parts of the North. Some small isolated settlements are saddled with extremely high rates, due to a rigid policy, fixed by law, which obliges each generation unit of the Northern Canada Power Commission to be self-sustaining.

In the Yukon there was evidence of an unusual lack of contact between the publicly owned Northern Canada Power Commission and the privately owned Yukon Electric Company.

Conflicting evidence was heard as to the relative efficiency of the two systems in regard to provision of service at economic rates. The Committee feels a much clearer definition of the roles of private and public power authorities is urgently required.

DAWSON CITY

The Committee was impressed with the tourist potential of Dawson City. The restoration work already completed or underway is well done. Your Committee urges continuation of the development of historic Dawson City as a complex of National historic importance.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 12 to 18, 22, and 23 to 28) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 89 to the Journals).

Mr. Crossman, from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry, presented the Sixth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

In its examination of the Estimates 1969-70 of the Department of Fisheries and Forestry, your Committee held public hearings concerning the annual Seal Hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence which comes under the supervision of the Department of Fisheries and Forestry.

Committee hearings took place on March 27, April 15, May 8, May 20 and May 22, 1969.

The Honourable Jack Davis, Minister of Fisheries and Forestry appeared and the following witnesses were heard and evidence adduced:

From the Department of Fisheries and Forestry:

Mr. C. R. Levelton, Director Conservation and Protection Service;
Mr. M. F. Ronayne, Assistant Director, Information and Consumer Service;
Mr. S. Dudka, Field Supervisor;
Mr. P. Beauchesne, District Inspection Officer;
Dr. D. E. Sergeant, Biologist, Fisheries Research Board of Canada;
Mr. A. A. Arsenault, Information Officer, Secretary of State Department.

Also

Mr. Henri Stadt, Film Producer, Montreal, P.Q.;
Mr. Brian D. Davies, Executive Secretary, New Brunswick Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Fredericton, N.B.
Mr. Tom Hughes, Manager, Ontario Humane Society (S.P.C.A.), Toronto, Ontario;
Mr. André Fleury, President, Production 816, Montreal, P.Q.;
Mr. Serge Deyglun, Journalist, Montreal, P.Q.;
Mr. Uwe Koneman, Cameraman, Montreal, P.Q.;
Mr. Ralph Kaye, Photographer, Fredericton, N.B.;
Mr. Barry MacDonald, Director of Secretariat, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Ottawa.

Your Committee reached several conclusions:

1. That grossly misleading information about the hunt was purveyed to the general public at home and abroad and that some misleading information continues to be purveyed—specifically the unjustified claim that seal herds are facing extinction by present harvesting methods.

2. The Committee considers that shocking irresponsibility was shown by producers of an Artek film of 1964 which included scenes of brutality, the legitimacy of which could not be determined from questioning of witnesses. The Committee also finds that Canadian Broadcasting Corporation showed a degree of irresponsibility in accepting the Artek film for Broadcast without adequately checking its fairness and accuracy.

3. The Committee recognizes a legitimate concern about possible cruel practices in seal hunting. Although in the Committee's opinion, much of that protest was based upon misleading films and other misleading information, it believes that there have been instances of inhumane killing in the past and recognizes that continuous federal supervision of the hunt is required.

4. The Committee considers the credibility of some witnesses who appeared before it to be in grave doubt.

5. The Committee accepts the view of Mr. Tom Hughes of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and others, that use of the club in killing the seal pups is the most humane method presently available to the industry.

6. The Committee finds that the campaign to destroy the pup seal hunting industry in the Gulf of St. Lawrence has caused financial hardship to residents of the region and has severely damaged this nation's reputation abroad.

Your Committee therefore recommends:

1. That seal hunting continue in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, under continuing safeguards as to (a) prevention of cruelty; and (b) preservation of the herds.

2. That the Fisheries Department undertake a program to institute a continuous flow of accurate information concerning this hunt and that this information be provided the public; both at home and abroad.

3. That the Justice Department be advised of unresolved conflicts in the testimony of some witnesses, that the department undertake a thorough investigation of this matter with a view to instituting proceedings in the criminal courts if found advisable.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 13, 14, 21, 24 and 25) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 90 to the Journals).

From the Salmon Arm Recreation Commission: Dr. G. D. Harle.

Resulting from its study of the briefs submitted and from its examinations of representatives of those associations presenting briefs, your Committee makes the following recommendations to the House.

Water Pollution

Your Committee recommends acceleration of water pollution studies specifically in salmon spawning areas.

It further recommends that the Fisheries Act be amended to provide that the Department shall fully control water qualities affecting all marine life and that the Minister make mandatory orders to prevent anticipated pollution from taking place, as well as power by Order-in-Council to make and enforce regulations designed to cause persons to cease and desist the polluting of any waters in Canada.

Native Fishermen of British Columbia

Your Committee recommends that the Department of Fisheries and Forestry pursue attempts to develop new fishing resources for Native Indians; that the Minister be empowered by Order-in-Council to regulate and control the extent of the financing of boat loans and purchases between native persons and fishing companies, and to further provide alternative boat and gear financing for native people in this regard, and that in view of the apparent increased vertical integration of the industry resulting in the closure of canneries, the Government be urged to provide adequate and proper training for persons rendered unemployed by such measures.

Coast Guard

That one authority be established to oversee the protection of the fisheries and Canadian Territorial Waters.

Twelve Mile Limit

Your Committee urges that the Government act as quickly as possible to amend the Territorial Seas and Fishing Zones Act so that a Fisheries Closing Line can be drawn so as to follow the continental shelf.

Boat Licensing and Finance

Your Committee recommends that legislation setting up a Boat Licensing Appeal Board be amended to provide that a majority of its members shall not be government employees.

The Committee heard several witnesses who expressed the fear that the present system of boat licence limitation in the salmon fleet would be accompanied by increased financial control of boats in the fleet by the cannery operators. However, evidence as to whether the degree of vertical integration of the industry was increasing or decreasing was conflicting.

The Committee recommends that regulations be devised which will ensure a continuing flow of accurate information to the Minister of Fisheries as to the degree of financial control of the fleet held by companies and that action be taken by the Minister to prevent any increase of this financial control or any increase in the capacity to catch fish by canning companies.

Spawning Grounds

Your Committee recommends that spawning grounds be fully protected against log drives and other destructive logging methods.

Dogfish Problem

Evidence was presented to the Committee that the salmon fishery is being affected adversely by the dogfish.

We believe that action must be taken to reduce the dogfish population. In our view, it is desirable that as many Canadians as feasible be employed in efforts to establish a viable dogfish industry or to eradicate them.

Marine and Market Research

Although aquatic marine research continues to be of fundamental importance, your Committee is of the opinion that the consumer potential for fisheries products is still undeveloped.

It is therefore recommended that a larger portion of governmental research funds be directed to developing new merchandising and advertising techniques.

Forestry Research

Your Committee heard evidence of some duplication of effort in forestry research by private and governmental agencies. It urges that any such waste of effort be eliminated.

Your Committee also recommends more federal research on forestry west of the Rocky Mountains, an area now insufficiently serviced by federal research agencies.

Shuswap Diversion

There was considerable concern expressed at the Kamloops hearing over the many possible effects of the proposed diversion of water from the Shuswap River into the Okanagan Lake because of inadequate study.

Therefore, your Committee recommends that no major projects such as the proposed Shuswap-Okanagan diversion shall be carried out before comprehensive river basin studies have been completed in the affected areas.

Your Committee further recommends that the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, on behalf of the Federal Government, enter into an agreement with the Province of British Columbia to carry out a comprehensive study of the water needs of the Okanagan Valley which would include the Shuswap-Thompson areas.

Your Committee also recommends that it be empowered to give further study to many active and complex problems arising in the briefs and evidence so ably presented to it.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 15 to 20) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 91 to the Journals).

Mr. Crossman, from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry, presented the Eighth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered Votes 1, 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35 and 40 relating to the Department of Fisheries and Forestry.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 13 to 26) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 92 to the Journals).

Mr. Hopkins, from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works, presented the Fourth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following items listed in the Estimates 1969-70:

Votes 1, 5, 15, 20, 25, 40, 45 and 50 relating to the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources;

Votes 55 and 60 relating to the Atomic Energy Control Board;

Votes 65, 70, L15, L20, L25 and L30 relating to the Atomic Energy of Canada Limited (Research Program);

Vote 75 relating to the Dominion Coal Board;

Vote 80 relating to the National Energy Board; and Votes 1, 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 50, 55 and 60 relating to the Department of Public Works.

Your Committee recommends that as soon as possible the government allocate more money for scientific research projects that are now under way, as well as to continue new programs for the future.

During the Study of the estimates of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, the Committee learned that more and more funds from that company's regular budget will be required to continue the operations of several nuclear power generators until such time as private enterprise is financially capable of taking them over, probably about 1978. In the meantime, these established expenses will be a drain from the research funds of the company and these should be supplemented.

Canada has been in the forefront in nuclear research in the world with emphasis on the peaceful role of Atomic Energy and your Committee recommends that increased financial support be given to research projects in this field.

The Committee commends the government on the establishment of the Inland Waters Centre at Burlington and the work being carried out there on water pollution research. We recommend that this be given full and increased assistance and that other complementary centres be set up where needed.

Your Committee is concerned by the increasing magnitude of air, water and soil pollution and the jurisdictional conflict which hampers the finding and implementing of proper solutions.

Your Committee recommends that the government draft a code of standards for the cleaning up of and the future protection of all Canadian waters; that provincial approval of such a code be sought; and that the federal government provide an enforcement procedure—if necessary by means of an amendment to the criminal code.

Your Committee also recommends that a centre or centres similar to the Canada Centre for Inland Waters be set up to centralize all existing and future federal research in air and soil pollution and to extend and speed up such research so that codes of standards may be drafted to protect the air and soil from pollution.

During its study of the estimates of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, your Committee was informed that there would not be any "Canadian Produced" heavy water available in Canada this year. Your Committee recommends therefore that the words "Canadian Produced" be deleted from vote L20 thus enabling the company to purchase heavy water from non-Canadian sources.

The Committee wishes to state that it has been greatly impressed by the contributions from the Canadian science community and commends all personnel involved in scientific progress in Canada on their achievements.

Your Committee commends these estimates to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 12 to 26) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 93 to the Journals).

Mr. Beer, from the Standing Committee on Agriculture, presented the Tenth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following items listed in the Main Estimates of 1969-70:

Votes 1, 5, 10, 12, 15, 17, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45, 50, 51 relating to the Department of Agriculture;

Vote 55 relating to the Canadian Dairy Commission;

Votes 60 and 65 relating to the Canadian Livestock Feed Board;

Vote 70 relating to the Farm Credit Corporation.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 22 to 27, 33 to 40, and 42) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 94 to the Journals).

Mr. Trudel for Mr. Clermont, from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, presented the Twentieth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to an Order of the House of Thursday, February 20, 1969, your Committee has considered the following item listed in the Main Estimates 1969-70; Vote 25 relating to the Economic Council of Canada.

Your Committee commends it to the House.

Your Committee recommends that any and all future reports of the Economic Council of Canada tabled in the House be referred to this Committee.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 48 to 51 inclusive) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 95 to the Journals).

JOURNALS

OTTAWA, TUESDAY, JUNE 3, 1969.

2.00 o'clock p.m.

PRAYERS.

The honourable Member for Waterloo (Mr. Saltsman), having raised a question of privilege relating to the presentation of the Budget;

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: The honourable Member for Waterloo (Mr. Saltsman), according to requirements of the Standing Orders, gave notice to the Chair of his proposed question of privilege. This has given the Chair an opportunity to review the situation and consider whether there is a prima facie case of privilege.

The honourable Member claims that the decision of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) to deny party representatives access to advance budgetary briefings is a breach of parliamentary privilege. As honourable Members are aware it is a long established practice that budgetary information is made available to the press some hours before the same information is made available to the House. That is always done, I understand, under the terms of the strictest secrecy.

The suggestion of the honourable Member for Waterloo is that if such advance information is available to the press, party officials and other individuals representing Members of Parliament are entitled to the same advantage. The objection taken by the honourable Member to past procedure as it has existed is, of course, of great interest.

There are really two aspects to the problem. The first is whether there should be advance information at all, even to the press. Then if that practice is accepted and continued as it has been in the past, whether this advance budgetary information should be limited to a specific group.

The first aspect of the problem has been raised on a number of occasions, particularly in January, 1961, when Mr. Speaker Michener was called upon to make a ruling on a similar question. The Speaker then said: "I do not find a prima facie right on the part of the House to insist that the government, when it tables the full information shall not give a summary of it to the press . . ."

I would be inclined to come to the same conclusion in the present circumstances. While it may well be that the whole practice should be reviewed by the Executive or by Members, I doubt very much if the way to have or conduct such a review is by way of a specific question of privilege of the type raised by the honourable Member for Waterloo.

In the circumstances my suggestion is that the matter be given some thought perhaps for future consideration when budgets are presented and that a determination be made by the Executive concerning whether there should be advance briefing at all in such circumstances. For the time being, however, I suggest to honourable Members that there is no prima facie case of privilege and that the motion should not be put to the House at this time.

Mr. Reid, from the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, presented the Fifth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Your Committee has ordered a reprint of Bill C-184, as amended.

A copy of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence relating to this Bill (Issues Nos. 29, 31 and 33 to 42 inclusive) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Bill recorded as Appendix No. 96 to the Journals).

Mr. Clermont, from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, presented the Twenty-First Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Pursuant to an Order of the House of February 10, 1969, your Committee considered the subject-matter of Notice of Motion No. 33:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the expediency of introducing a measure providing that the privilege of the Crown in Right of Canada as preferred creditor under federal statutes, such as the Excise Tax Act, the Income Tax Act, the Estate Tax Act, and the Bankruptcy Act, be deleted from those Statutes so that the Crown in Right of Canada be in the same position as an ordinary creditor.

In view of the detailed study of the Bankruptcy Act presently in progress, your Committee feels it would be premature for it to make any recommendations. However, your Committee recommends that those charged with the review of the Bankruptcy Act give consideration to the problems raised by the Crown preference in the administration of bankruptcies and on the basis of statistical evidence adduced determine whether or not such Crown preference acts as a deterrent to the best possible administration of bankruptcies.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 32 and 51) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 97 to the Journals).

Mr. Benson, a Member of the Queen's Privy Council, laid before the House,—Summary of Interpretations and Undertakings concerning certain provisions of Bill C-165, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Estate Tax Act. (English and French).

On motion of Mr. Tolmie, seconded by Mr. Walker, the Fifth Report of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, presented to the House on Thursday, May 29, 1969, was concurred in.

A Message was received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate had passed the following bills to which the concurrence of this House is desired:

Bill S-38, An Act to amend the Loan Companies Act.—Mr. Benson.

Bill S-37, An Act to amend the Trust Companies Act.—Mr. Benson.

The House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Benson, seconded by Mr. Olson,—That Bill C-191, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act be now read a second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

And debate continuing;

By unanimous consent, it was ordered,—That the adjournment proceedings in this day's sitting be suspended and that following the adjournment of debate the House do stand adjourned.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Benson, seconded by Mr. Olson,—That Bill C-191, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act be now read a second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole;

And debate continuing;

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), seconded by Mrs. MacInnis, moved in amendment thereto,—That the word "now" be deleted from the motion and that the words "this day six months hence" be added at the end thereof.

[At 5.00 o'clock p.m., Private Members' Business was called pursuant to Standing Order 15(4)]

(Private Bills)

Bill S-34, An Act respecting Nova Scotia Savings & Loan Company was read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) for Mr. Thomson (Battleford-Kindersley), seconded by Mr. Howard (Skeena),—That Bill S-29, An Act respecting the production and conservation of oil and gas in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, be amended, in sub-clause (1) of clause 4, by deleting the words “not more than” after the words “five members” in line 22 on page 3 of the Bill; and in subclause (2) of clause 4 by deleting the words “one member” and substituting therefor the words “one of the three members in the public service” in line 28 on page 3 of the Bill.

After further debate, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived on division.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), for Mr. Thomson (Battleford-Kindersley), seconded by Mr. Howard (Skeena), moved,—That Bill S-29, An Act respecting the production and conservation of oil and gas in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, be amended, in clause 6, by deleting all words after the word “Canada” in line 40 on page 4 of the Bill.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived, on division.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), for Mr. Thomson (Battleford-Kindersley), seconded by Mr. Howard (Skeena), moved,—That Bill S-29, An Act respecting the production and conservation of oil and gas in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, as amended by the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development be further amended in clause 6, by inserting immediately after the words “affecting such a company” the following words: “or any of its competitors in the oil and gas industry”.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived, on division.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), for Mr. Thomson (Battleford-Kindersley), seconded by Mr. Winch, moved,—That Bill S-29, An Act respecting the production and conservation of oil and gas in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, be amended, in sub-clause (1) of clause 7, by adding the words “and two members who are employees in the public service” after the words “in the public service”.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was negatived, on division.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), for Mr. Howard (Skeena), seconded by Mr. Barnett, moved,—That Bill S-29, An Act respecting the production and conservation of oil and gas in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, be amended by deleting clause 58 thereof and substituting therefor the following:

“(58) This Act shall come into force following a settlement mutually acceptable to the Crown and the people commonly referred to as Indians and Eskimos indigenous to areas now referred to as the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories at the time European explorers or their descendants first visited the areas, and the said settlement relating to lands, resources and other tribal or community property rights of the said people.”

And a point of order having been raised by the honourable Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Chrétien) as to the regularity of the said motion;

RULING BY MR. ACTING DEPUTY SPEAKER

It is suggested that the motion proposed on behalf of the honourable Member for Skeena (Mr. Howard), is not in order in that it is in the nature of a substantive motion which seeks to introduce new questions into the bill.

As stated at page 558, May's 17th edition, a new clause is out of order for many of the same reasons as an amendment and, in particular, will not be entertained:

- (1) If it is beyond the scope of the bill;
- (2) If it is inconsistent with clauses agreed to by the committee;
- (3) If it is in effect a redrafting of a clause which is already in the bill.

Accordingly, the question on the said proposed motion cannot be put to the House.

On motion of Mr. Chrétien, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), the said bill was concurred in at the Report Stage.

By unanimous consent, the said bill was read the third time and passed.

The Order being read for the consideration of Bill C-184, An Act to establish a Canadian corporation for telecommunication by satellite, as reported, with amendments, from the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts;

Mr. Saltsman, seconded by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), moved, —That Bill C-184, An Act to establish a Canadian corporation for telecommunication by satellite, be amended, in clause 3, by deleting the words “together with such persons as are shareholders of the company from time to time”; also by deleting the words “with share capital”; and by inserting the word “Crown” before the word “Company”.

And a question of order having been raised with the interdependency of the foregoing motion and another proposed motion standing on the Notice Paper in the name of the honourable Member for Waterloo (Mr. Saltsman);

Mr. Acting Deputy Speaker suggested that if the foregoing motion were negatived, the other proposed motion would become a nullity. He suggested that if a recorded division were demanded on the foregoing, it should be deferred until the next proposed motion is considered, at which time a decision could be made with respect to the disposition of the other motion standing in the name of the honourable Member for Waterloo (Mr. Saltsman).

And debate arising thereon;

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At ten o'clock p.m., the question “That this House do now adjourn” was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

And debate arising thereon;

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: With the consent of honourable Members may I give a ruling on the question of privilege raised earlier today by the honourable Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath).

Over the dinner hour I have had an opportunity to consider the matter very closely, to look at precedents and to consult learned advisers, whose wealth of experience and knowledge is always of great assistance, as it was in this particular instance.

It is clear that parliamentary privilege includes the right of honourable Members of the House of Commons to exercise their responsibilities and to discharge their duties as members without undue interference. The question is whether the newspaper comments referred to by the honourable Member for St. John's East constitute such undue interference as to be tantamount to a breach of privilege.

Privilege has been defined as the sum of the fundamental rights enjoyed by each House collectively and by members of each House individually without which they could not discharge their functions and which exceed those possessed by other bodies or individuals. May, in the 17th edition of his Parliamentary Practice, page 43, states: “When any of these rights and immunities, both of the Members, individually, and of the assembly in its collective capacity, which are known by the general name of privileges, are disregarded or attacked by any individual or authority, the offence is called a breach of privilege, and is punishable under the law of Parliament.”

Generally speaking, newspaper articles considered to exceed the bounds of fair comment on parliamentary activities have been judged over the years as being in the nature of contempt of court and have been held to constitute breaches of parliamentary privilege. The question is to determine whether in this particular case the article quoted by the honourable Member for St. John's East goes beyond the limits of fair comment, whether it offends the privileges of Parliament, or whether it interferes with the rights and immunities of individual Members in the exercise of their parliamentary duties.

Citation 113 of Beauchesne's 4th edition states that: "An attack in a newspaper article is not a breach of privilege, unless it comes within the definition of privileges..."

Beauchesne then gives the following examples of breaches of privilege: "Libels upon members and aspersions upon them in relation to Parliament and interference of any kind with their official duties, are breaches of the privileges of members."

In paragraph (3) of citation 108 Beauchesne says: "...but to constitute a breach of privilege they must concern the character or conduct of Members in that capacity, and the libel must be based on matters arising in the actual transaction of the business of the House."

Paragraph (4) of that same citation: "Scandalous charges or imputations directed against Members of a Select Committee are equivalent to libellous charges brought against the House itself..."

I indicated this afternoon that when one considers the matter of parliamentary privilege in relation to newspaper comments, two conflicting interests must be taken into account. The first is the privilege of honourable Members to exercise their duties free from undue interference. The second is the freedom of the press in relation to its reporting of parliamentary activities. On this point I should like to refer to a ruling of Mr. Speaker Macnaughton reported at page 4434 of Hansard of June 18, 1964. This ruling reads, in part, as follows: "It seems to me that if this editorial referred in general terms to Members of Parliament none of us, I suppose, would be so thin-skinned that we could not accept some rather healthy criticism..."

At the same time I would suggest that the language used is very strong and might well be considered to constitute contempt of Parliament. Against this there has to be weighed the requirements of a free press reporting and commenting objectively on parliamentary activities.

In view of the language used in the article in question there might have been some support for a finding of a prima facie case of breach of privilege. This would allow the honourable Member for St. John's East to have his motion put to the House. However, there are, to my mind, two serious procedural difficulties which stand in the way of such action.

In his presentation, the honourable Member acknowledged that the matter has to be raised at the earliest opportunity. On this point I refer him and honourable Members to May's 17th edition at page 378 as follows: "A matter of privilege which claims precedence over other public business should be a subject which has recently arisen."

By way of example, the learned author quotes the following: "A matter which occurred during the recess was refused precedence as a matter of privilege because it was not raised at the commencement of the session. Similarly a matter concerning an article in a newspaper published on 6 May was refused precedence because it was not raised till the 14th and a speech reported on a Saturday because it was not raised until the following Tuesday. On the other hand, when special circumstances justified it, the Speaker has permitted a Member to raise a matter on the day following the date of issue of the newspaper containing the article complained of."

In this instance, the article appeared in the Montreal Star of Tuesday, June 3. The question was raised today, Monday, June 9, nearly a week later.

In my view, the fundamental rule that a question of privilege should be raised immediately and without delay should be enforced. I appreciate that in some cases there might be extenuating circumstances, as where a newspaper is published in a remote section of the country, or if the offending article is published in a language other than that of the aggrieved Member. In such circumstances a delay might be permitted. Such mitigating circumstances do not seem to exist in the case now before the House.

The second procedural difficulty comes from the form of the motion proposed by the honourable Member for St. John's East. In my view, the motion should follow the question of privilege as a logical sequence. Such a motion cannot merely ask that the committee investigate whether or not there has been a breach of privilege; it must allege a breach of privilege. It should not simply propose that a matter be investigated to determine if there is or is not a breach of privilege.

This proposed motion is in fact, a simple reference of a newspaper article to the committee, asking the committee to make a finding. That is not a motion of privilege but, in my view, an ordinary substantive motion which, of course, can only be moved in the usual way with the appropriate notice.

In view of the procedural difficulties to which I have alluded, and in spite of my serious misgivings about the allegations contained in the article in question, I have to conclude that the honourable Member's proposed motion cannot be put to the House.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Benson, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale),—That this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the Government.

And on the motion of Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West), seconded by Mr. Harkness, in amendment thereto,—That all the words after "House" be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

"regrets the continuing inability of the Government to curb the relentless increase in the cost of living since 1965, while increasing the hardships of the unemployed, the poor, pensioners, farmers and other victims of the Just Society".

And on the motion of Mr. Saltzman, seconded by Mr. Barnett, in amendment to the said proposed amendment,—That the amendment be amended by adding at the end thereof the following words:

"and its failure to assist these people by granting relief from income tax to all single persons with incomes below $2,000 a year and all married persons with incomes below $4,000 a year".

And debate continuing;

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At 10.01 o'clock p.m., the question "That this House do now adjourn" was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

After debate the said question was deemed to have been adopted.

Mr. Forest, Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, presented,—Returns to the foregoing Orders.

The Order being read for the consideration of the Business of Supply;

Pursuant to Standing Order 58, Mr. McGrath, seconded by Mr. Hales, moved,—That this House condemns the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs for his failure to protect Canadian consumers from the crippling burden of ever-increasing prices and, in particular, from the recent exorbitant jump in food and rent costs, despite this House's allocation of nearly $16 million to his Department for the main purpose of averting such developments.

After debate thereon, proceedings on the motion expired.

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At 10.08 o'clock p.m., the question "That this House do now adjourn" was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

After debate the said question was deemed to have been adopted.

No. 172

JOURNALS
HOUSE OF COMMONS
OF CANADA

OTTAWA, TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1969.

10.00 o'clock a.m.

PRAYERS.

The House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Trudeau, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale),—That Bill C-192, An Act to amend the National Housing Act, 1954, be now read a third time and do pass.

After further debate, the question being put on the said motion, it was agreed to, on division.

Accordingly, the said bill was read the third time, on division, and passed.

Bill C-201, An Act to amend the National Housing Act, 1954, was concurred in, read the third time and passed.

The Order being read for the consideration of Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, as reported without amendment from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry.

And a point of order having been raised by the honourable Member for South Shore (Mr. Crouse) with respect to the regularity of the said Bill.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: I thank the honourable Member for South Shore for bringing this very interesting point to the attention of the Chair and also the honourable Member for Comox Alberni (Mr. Barnett) for his participation in discussion. I thank all honourable Members for their confidence in the Chair in allowing me to reach a decision. The honourable Member for South Shore was generous enough to indicate to the Chair some time ago a point of order which he proposed to raise, and which worried him. This has given me an opportunity to look into the matter.

As the honourable Member for South Shore has pointed out, the Interpretation Act does provide the possibility that in the same session an amendment may be debated to a bill which was debated in the same session. The honourable Member suggests today that to do that and to conform with the Interpretation Act the title of the bill should be amended. I really do not see how a simple changing of the title of the bill would bring this particular legislation within or put it outside the scope of the Interpretation Act. I think the proposed bill must stand on its own merit.

I cannot imagine how a simple change in the words of the title of the bill would make it acceptable or unacceptable. I had some serious reservations initially as to whether it was in order to move at all an amendment to the title of the bill at this stage. I have looked at the precedents and there are very few to support the honourable Member's contention that the title of the bill can be changed in the way he suggests at the present time.

I am quite willing to overlook this slight difficulty that may exist and when we reach the proposed amendment, allow the honourable Member's motion to be put to the House and let the House decide whether or not the title should be changed. However, I have an additional serious reservation in regard to the point of order raised by the honourable Member for South Shore.

The House will have reached a rather late stage in the consideration of this bill. The bill has already received second reading. I am wondering whether it should be said when we have had the bill reported from the committee, that to say that it is not in order and that it should be changed in some material way.

For that reason I would have serious reservations about accepting the honourable Member's position that this bill is not properly before the House at this time. I do recognize that there is a very interesting point, and I assume that the Law Officers of the Crown will want to study very closely the point made by the honourable Member. This would perhaps be of assistance when similar legislation is drafted in the future.

For the moment, and in view of the fact, that we have proceeded this far with the consideration of the proposed legislation I would suggest to honourable Members that there be a submission to the House of the amendment to be proposed by the honourable Member for South Shore.

Mr. Crouse, seconded by Mr. McGrath, proposed to move,—That Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, be amended by deleting Clause (1) of the said Bill and substituting the following therefor:

(1) All that portion of paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of section 3 of the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act following subparagraph (ii) thereof is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

'did not exceed fifty thousand dollars;'

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: The proposed amendment standing in the name of the honourable Member for South Shore (Mr. Crouse) appears to me, as I indicated a moment ago, to be irregular in that it proposes an increase in the amount of a loan that may be made under the provisions of Bill C-195. If the honourable Member for Comox-Alberni will look at the recommendation of His Excellency as printed in the bill, he will notice that it places a limit of $25,000 on a loan to a fisherman.

I bring to his attention that not only cannot the total amount of the expenditure be changed by a motion such as this, but the objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications of the moneys authorized by the recommendation of His Excellency cannot be changed. On this point I would like to refer honourable Members to paragraph 3 of citation 246 of Beauchesne's fourth edition, which reads as follows: "The guiding principle in determining the effect of an amendment upon the financial initiative of the Crown is that the communication, to which the Royal Demand of recommendation is attached, must be treated as laying down once for all (unless withdrawn and replaced) not only the amount of a charge, but also its objects, purposes, conditions and qualifications. In relation to the standard thereby fixed, an amendment infringes the financial initiative of the Crown, not only if it increases the amount, but also if it extends the objects and purposes, or relaxes the conditions and qualifications expressed in the communication by which the Crown has demanded or recommended a charge. And this standard is binding not only on private Members but also on Ministers whose only advantage is that, as advisers of the Crown, they can present new or supplementary estimates or secure the Royal Recommendation to new or supplementary resolutions."

In other words, this restriction applies not only to private Members but also to Ministers of the Crown; they are restricted by the recommendation of His Excellency in the way indicated in the citation which I have just quoted.

It is suggested that for those reasons the honourable Member's motion cannot be put from the Chair. If I may add one more word I should like to say that perhaps the arguments advanced by the honorable Member are the type of arguments which could be considered in debate on third reading of the bill at which time the honourable Member will have all possible freedom to advance his views.

Mr. Crouse, seconded by Mr. McGrath proposed to move,—That Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, be amended by inserting therein the following clause:

(2) Paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of section 3 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

‘(e) the loan was repayable in full by the terms thereof in not more than fifteen years.’

And that Clause 2 of the said Bill be renumbered 3.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: I thank the honourable Members for their views as a guide in connection with the amendments. I wish I were in a position to allow those amendments or motions to be put to the House but I believe that I must be guided by the decisions which have been taken by the Chair from time to time since we introduced this new stage in the consideration of legislative proposals. I think it is basic for us to respect the principle that such amendments moved at this stage should not go beyond the scope of the bill itself. I believe that this type of amendment would normally have been ruled out of order if they had been proposed in Committee of the Whole House, and I think that the same ruling would have to apply when they are proposed at this stage of the consideration of bills.

Again, the arguments advanced by the honourable Member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Barnett) concerning the amendment of the honourable Member for South Shore (Mr. Crouse) can very well be advanced during consideration of the bill on third reading, and I assume that the honourable Members will want to take advantage of that stage of our consideration of this bill to advance his proposals.

However, for the moment I must rule strictly on procedural grounds and to suggest to honourable Members that both these amendments—amendment No. (2) and amendment No. (4), the second one standing in the name of the honourable Member for Skeena—are out of order in that they are in the nature of new legislative proposals and introduce matters of substance which are not covered in the bill itself. These motions propose the deletion of sections in the act which are not dealt with in Bill C-195. Beauchesne's 4th edition, citation 406 in part states: "Amendments are out of order if they are (a) irrelevant to the bill, or beyond its scope . . ."

As I said, I suggest that I must take into account my rulings made in this session with respect to similar proposed motions as recorded, for example, at pages 7604 and 7605 of Hansard of April 16 last.

For these reasons the Chair regrets that the proposed motions cannot be put.

Mr. Crouse, seconded by Mr. McGrath, moved,—That Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, be amended by striking out the title and substituting the following:

"An Act to amend an Act of the present session intituled An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act."

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said proposed amendment, it was negatived, on division.

On motion of Mr. Davis, seconded by Mr. Dubé, the said bill was concurred in.

By unanimous consent, the Order being read for the third reading of Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act;

Mr. Davis, seconded by Mr. Dubé, moved,—That the said bill be now read a third time and do pass.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was agreed to.

Accordingly, the said bill was read the third time and passed.

The Order being read for the second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications of Bill C-207, An Act to authorize assistance to transportation in the Atlantic Region;

By unanimous consent, it was ordered,—That when the said Bill has received second reading, it be considered in a Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Jamieson, seconded by Mr. Davis, moved,—That Bill C-207, An Act to authorize assistance to transportation in the Atlantic Region, be now read a second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said motion, it was agreed to.

Accordingly, the said bill was read the second time and considered in Committee of the Whole and progress having been made and reported the Committee obtained leave to consider it again at the next sitting of the House.

At 1.00 o'clock p.m., pursuant to Special Order made June 13, 1969, the sitting was suspended until 2.00 o'clock p.m.

Mr. Lessard (LaSalle), from the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, presented the Twelfth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

On January 17, 1969, your Committee was empowered to consider and report upon the problems of transportation in the Atlantic Provinces. For the purpose of its inquiry, your Committee was empowered to adjourn from place to place within Canada.

Pursuant to the Order of Reference, an itinerary was prepared and the Committee agreed to a ten day tour of the Atlantic Provinces, and to hold hearings in the four capitals of the Atlantic Provinces only.

The Committee received a total of 105 briefs; however, only 79 of those were heard by your Committee during the 15 sittings held in the Atlantic Provinces.

Your Committee heard 124 witnesses in the 65 hours that it spent in formal hearings studying the transportation problems of the Atlantic Provinces.

I INTRODUCTION

1. During the debate on Bill C-231—National Transportation Act, the Federal Government acknowledged the following:

- (a) the existence of special regional transportation problems in the Atlantic Region;
- (b) it should be the policy of the Federal Government to continue giving that region such preferential treatment as might be deemed to be appropriate.

2. The MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation made certain recommendations concerning transportation problems in the Atlantic Provinces, notably with respect to the Maritime Freight Rates Act and transportation in Newfoundland and between Newfoundland and the mainland. However, it had been unable to review comprehensively Atlantic Provinces transportation problems and recommended that additional studies be carried out for that purpose.

3. In 1965, such studies were initiated by the Atlantic Development Board and the Department of Transport, but the study was not complete at the time the National Transportation Act was being considered by Parliament.

As an interim measure and pending development of an up-dated regional transportation policy, the Federal Government provided in the National Transportation Act that the existing non-competitive freight rates into, out of, and within the Atlantic Provinces which had been frozen under the Freight Rates Reduction Act were to be frozen for an additional two years, to date from the coming into force of the National Transportation Act on March 23rd, 1967.

4. To facilitate development of new policy for Atlantic Region transportation problems, the Federal Government took two steps:

- (i) it requested the Standing Committee of the House of Commons on Transport and Communications to hold public hearings in the Atlantic Region, to review briefs presented by interested parties and to report its findings and recommendations;

- (ii) it urged the Governments of the Atlantic Provinces themselves to consider their regional transportation needs. The Premiers of the Atlantic Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland and Labrador subsequently submitted their brief entitled "The Basic Elements of an Atlantic Provinces Transportation Policy" to the Minister of Transport on March 10th, 1969.

5. The Government of Quebec has made no representations about the Maritime Freight Rates Act nor has it been consulted with respect to the contents of the brief of the Atlantic Provinces.

The Committee recommends that the proposals of the Committee be immediately brought to the attention of the Government of Quebec.

6. The measures set out herein go some way towards meeting the proposals and briefs submitted to the Committee, the recommendation by the MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation, the Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study, and the submissions to the Minister of Transport by the Premiers of the Atlantic Provinces.

II HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

It consists of the following:

- (1) Constitutional guarantees and obligations;
- (2) The Maritimes Freight Rates Act;
- (3) The MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation;
- (4) The National Transportation Act;
- (5) The Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study;
- (6) Ferry and Coastal Steamship Subsidies;
- (7) Other Federal Government Assistance Programmes.

(1) Constitutional Guarantees and Obligations:

Those still in force are in respect of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

(a) Prince Edward Island:

The Order-in-Council dated June 26th, 1873, admitting Prince Edward Island into Canada states in part:

"that the Dominion Government shall assume and defray all the charges for the following service, viz: Efficient steamship services for the conveyance of mails and passengers to be established and maintained between the Island and the mainland of the Dominion, winter and summer, thus placing the Island in continuous communication with the Intercolonial Railway and the railway system of the Dominion".

(b) Newfoundland:

Term 31 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland and Canada stipulates:

"31. At the date of Union, or as soon thereafter as practicable, Canada will take over the following services and will as from the date of Union relieve the Province of Newfoundland of the public costs incurred in respect of each service taken over, namely,

- (a) the Newfoundland Railway, including steamship and other marine services;

- (b) The Newfoundland Hotel, if requested by the Government of the Province of Newfoundland within six months from the date of Union;
- (c) postal and publicly-owned telecommunication services;
- (d) civil aviation, including Gander Airport;
- (e) customs and excise;
- (f) defence;
- (g) protection and encouragement of fisheries and operation of bait services;
- (h) geological, topographical, geodetic, and hydrographic surveys;
- (i) lighthouses, fog alarms, buoys, beacons, and other public works and services in aid of navigation and shipping;
- (j) marine hospitals, quarantine, and the care of ship-wrecked crews;
- (k) the public radio broadcasting system; and
- (l) other public services similar in kind to those provided at the date of Union for the people of Canada generally."

Term 32 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland and Canada stipulates:

"1. Canada will maintain in accordance with the traffic offering a freight and passenger steamship service between North Sydney and Port aux Basques which, on completion of a motor highway between Cornerbrook and Port Aux Basques, will include suitable provision for the carriage of motor vehicles.

2. For the purposes of railway rate regulation, the Island of Newfoundland will be included in the Maritime region of Canada and through-traffic moving between North Sydney and Port Aux Basques will be treated as all-rail traffic.

3. All legislation of the Parliament of Canada providing for special rates on traffic moving within, into or out of the Maritime Region will as far as appropriate be made applicable to the Island of Newfoundland".

(c) New Brunswick and Nova Scotia:

Section 145 of British North America Act pertained to the guarantee re: New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to construct the Intercolonial Railway, one of the conditions upon which New Brunswick and Nova Scotia agreed to enter Confederation. The guarantee was fulfilled and Section 145 was repealed by Section 70 of the Statutes Revision Act of 1893.

While there are no further formal constitutional guarantees, the pledges given prior to, at the time of and since Confederation were implied obligations which were subsequently confirmed by passage of the Maritime Freight Rates Act in 1927.

(2) Maritime Freight Rates Act—1927:

Those pledges referred to in (1) above, were one of the subjects enquired into by The Duncan Commission on Maritime Claims (1926).

The substance of the Commission's findings were cited in the preamble which forms part of the M.F.R.A.

"WHEREAS the Royal Commission on Maritime Claims by its report, dated September 23rd, 1926, has in effect, advised that a balanced study of events and pronouncements prior to Confederation, and at its consummation, and of the lower level of rates which prevailed on the Intercolonial system prior to 1912, has in its opinion, confirmed the representations submitted to the Commission on behalf of the Maritime Provinces, namely, that the Intercolonial Railway was designed, among other things, to give to Canada in times of national and imperial need, an outlet and inlet on the Atlantic Ocean, and to afford to Maritime merchants, traders and manufacturers the larger market of the whole Canadian people instead of the restricted market of the Maritimes themselves, also that strategic considerations determined a longer route than was actually necessary, and therefore that to the extent that commercial considerations were subordinated to national, imperial and strategic considerations, the cost of the railway should be borne by the Dominion, and not by the traffic which might pass over the line; And whereas the Commission has, in such report, made certain recommendations respecting transportation and freight rates, for the purpose of removing a burden imposed upon the trade and commerce of such Province since 1912, which the Commission finds, in view of the pronouncements and obligations undertaken at Confederation, it was never intended such commerce should bear: And whereas it is expedient that effect should be given to such recommendations, in so far as it is reasonably possible so to do without disturbing unduly the general rate structures in Canada: Therefore His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:"

The M.F.R.A. established a "select territory", comprising New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island and also that part of Quebec south of the St. Lawrence and east of Levis and Diamond Junction, Quebec. The M.F.R.A. applied specifically to lines of the C.N.R. in "select territory".

M.F.R.A. also provides that other railways operating into or within the "select territory" were permitted to file tariffs and be accorded treatment similar to the Canadian National Railways. The Province of Newfoundland has been added to the "select territory" when it was admitted into Confederation.

The M.F.R.A. grants reductions in rail rates only for movements within the "select territory" and for export shipments through Atlantic ports, which originated in "select territory" amounting to 20%.

Shipments originating within "select territory" destined to the remainder of Canada (i.e. westbound movement out of "select territory") are accorded a reduction of 30% of that portion of the rate applicable to haul within the "select territory".

No assistance is given under M.F.R.A. to inbound shipments (i.e. into "select territory") from other points in Canada, nor is assistance given on exports by rail to the U.S.A.

The railways are paid an amount calculated to be equal to the reduction in their total revenues resulting from the M.F.R.A. out of the public purse (federal treasury).

(3) The MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation:

After examining the effects of the M.F.R.A.—the MacPherson Royal Commission on Transportation concluded that:

"the objectives which were put forward in 1927 for the policy of transportation rate reduction in the selected Maritime territory, are now incompletely being achieved because of the growth of competition. Furthermore, the availability of competitive services on transportation is being inhibited by the partiality of treatment in restricting the assistance to movements by rail".

After considering some of the representations made to it on the effects of the M.F.R.A., the Commission commented:

"it is significant to note that virtually all the comments made to us on the Maritime Freight Rates Act related to those provisions of the Act which apply to traffic outbound from the Atlantic Provinces... In fact, evidence was presented to us which would indicate that the internal payments made under the Act, which are paid on rail movements only, tend to inhibit the full development of alternate modes of carriage in the Atlantic region. With this contention we are in agreement.

We are convinced that the development of the trucking industry in the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island has now, in spite of the handicap, progressed to the point where the withdrawal of the subvention on intra-Maritime shipments will, in general, bring rail rates to a level which is favourable to the encouragement of traffic. The consequent shift of resources from rail to non-rail investment will be in response to demand for that service from shippers."

The MacPherson Commission supported representations made to it that the subsidy paid under the Maritime Freight Rates Act be extended to all modes of transport.

During its hearings in the Atlantic region, your Committee received recommendations not only by non-participating carriers, but indeed on behalf of the shipping public of the Atlantic region to have the Maritime Freight Rates Act apply to all modes of transport.

Examination of the Maritime Freight Rates Act by the MacPherson Royal Commission, the Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study and this Committee has raised serious doubts about the effectiveness of the Maritime Freight Rates Act in its present form in assisting Atlantic Provinces producers and shippers to compete in the markets of central Canada as was its original intention.

(4) The National Transportation Act:

Section 1 thereof sets out the National Transportation Policy and states in part that,

"regulation of all modes of transport will not be of such a nature as to restrict the ability of any mode of transport to compete freely with any other mode of transport".

It is assumed that this means that in general, and in the long run, rate reductions imposed on and subsidies granted for transportation will be non-discriminatory among modes.

(5) The Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study:

Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study, like the MacPherson Royal Commission, found that the Maritime Freight Rates Act had not been successful in maintaining a rate advantage in favour of the Atlantic Provinces on a growing proportion of their traffic. The Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study found that where competitive rates or agreed charges existed for Atlantic Provinces' movements, the rate was set only low enough to meet the competition, despite the fact that the Maritime Freight Rates Act subsidy is paid in relation to such movements. Thus, Atlantic Provinces shippers get very little, if any, benefit from almost exactly half of the total payment under the Maritime Freight Rates Act or Seven Million dollars; the benefit goes almost entirely to the railways. If, however, all modes were subsidized, the benefit would go largely to the shipper since the railways would have to meet the rates of competitors who also were subsidized.

Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study found that with respect to transportation within the Atlantic region, the Maritime Freight Rates Act, being a subsidy paid only to the railways, has tended to reduce competition by inhibiting the development of alternative transportation modes, especially trucking. It is a frequent complaint of the Atlantic Provinces that trucking has not developed in that area to the extent it has in central Canada, but the fact usually overlooked is that the Maritime Freight Rates Act itself is a deterrent to the development of the trucking industry. Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study also found that the payment of the subsidies on intra-Atlantic Provinces movements has tended to encourage the geographic dispersion of economic activity in that region.

(6) Ferry and Coastal Steamship Subsidies:

Federal assistance for transportation between the mainland and Prince Edward Island and the mainland and Newfoundland is a condition of Confederation.

Federal Assistance for ferry services is based on the principle that rail traffic to and from Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland must be treated as "all-rail" traffic. This means that rail freight rates are to be set as if there were continuous rail lines between the mainland and Prince Edward Island or Newfoundland and that the cost of the ferry service over and above the equivalent of average revenues for the ferry hauls are to be met by the Federal Government. This interpretation was made with respect to Section 4(2) of the Maritime Freight Rates Act, which reads, "traffic moving over the car ferry shall be treated as all-rail traffic".

The Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study recommended with respect to mainland-Newfoundland traffic that all for-hire carriers, including Air Canada, be granted equal subsidies per ton for traffic carried to Newfoundland in order to reduce competitive distortions in the transportation market. The reduction of differences in subsidies paid to carriers is regarded as a desirable long-term goal to the extent that is consistent with minimizing total transportation costs and with maintaining a high level of service to Newfoundland. Subsidies to carriers other than C.N.R. should be kept at a comparatively low rate per ton and gradually increased until a minimum total cost position is reached, taking into account all relevant costs (capital and operating), and all subsidies of rail rates or cost—M.F.R.A., etc.

The present situation is that rail traffic between the mainland and Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island is heavily subsidized by the Federal Government. The effect of these subsidies has been to eliminate all for-hire competition to the rail ferries in the case of Prince Edward Island and to reduce toward the point of extinction all of the regularly scheduled water carriers moving traffic between the mainland and Newfoundland. Some of the smaller for-hire water carriers serving Newfoundland are, in fact, being kept alive by small ad hoc subsidies. These subsidies, however, are on a year-to-year basis and are only large enough to keep the carriers operating. They provide no inducement for the purchase of more efficient vessels with lower unit costs. At the same time, one important carrier offering scheduled services between Montreal and St. John's and Cornerbrook with an efficient side-loading vessel receives no subsidy at all.

The Atlantic Provinces Transportation Study pointed out that the long-term effect of subsidizing rail traffic alone would be eventually to make all traffic between the mainland and Newfoundland or Prince Edward Island into rail traffic, that is, traffic subsidized at railway rates. It is known, however, that water carriers using new efficient vessels can handle some of the Newfoundland traffic at rates of subsidization much below those for the railway.

Between the beginning of 1965 and the end of 1968 in order to provide service for the traffic offering, four additional ferries have been added to the Newfoundland ferry service, one of which is a new ice-breaking ferry. Extensive work has been done to provide loading and ancilliary facilities for these vessels at North Sydney, Nova Scotia, and Port Aux Basques and Argentia, Newfoundland. The four additional vessels have provided increased capacity for highway vehicles and improved freight service.

In view of the Government expenditures of some 78 million dollars on these vessels and terminals, it is believed that the C.N.R. ferry services are now in a position where a high degree of efficiency is possible and that the level of efficiency is likely to be still higher if a reasonable degree of competition from other water carriers is maintained.

(7) Other Federal Government Assistance Programmes:

Analysis of the existing transportation policies and development of new policies and programmes must take into account other Federal Government programmes which have a significant impact on the transportation infrastructure and transportation operations.

The Development Plan for the Lower St. Lawrence, Gaspé and Magdalen Islands of the Comprehensive Development Plan for Prince Edward Island are two such typical FRED/ARDA programmes.

In May, 1969, agreement was reached between the Government of Canada and the Government of the Province of Quebec on the terms of a Development Plan for the Lower St. Lawrence, Gaspé and Magdalen Islands which had as its objective the promotion of economic and social development of the area; the increase of income and employment opportunities; and the raising of standards of living. The Plan provides for the development of a transportation network consistent with the economic and social potential of the area, including, in particular access roads to the mining centres of the area, and, in addition, the development of a regional road network to permit the centralization of population and the development of tourism, fisheries, argiculture, and forestry. The contribution of the Government of Canada to these road programmes could amount to more than ten million dollars. The Plan also requires the development of inter-regional communications links to integrate the area economically and socially with the rest of the province and North America. It, therefore, provides for a searching study of the transportation system of the region and contemplates the development of harbour and other facilities, improvements in ferry services to the Magdalen Islands to promote the economic development of those Islands, and improvements to the Rimouski-Mont-Joli Airport if increased frequency of air services so necessitates. Estimates of the cost of implementing the transportation improvements referred to amount to more than fifteen million dollars, all of which will be at Federal expense.

With respect to Prince Edward Island, the Government of Canada reached agreement with the Government of the Province of Prince Edward Island with respect to a comprehensive development plan for that Province. The Plan is based on a development strategy that would bring about full economic exploitation of the Island's large and potentially profitable agricultural resources. Other main features of the strategy are:

- a considerable development of tourist facilities;
- better utilization of forest assets;
- rationalization of fisheries;
- extensive education and training for the full development of the labour force potential;
- increased efficiency and some expansion in processing and manufacturing industry;
- investment in housing, health and welfare services and other infrastructure required for effective development.

Arising out of the basic programmes are requirements for roads and improved ferry services to the Island. Although about one-third of the road network in Prince Edward Island is paved, only a small proportion of the system is of all-weather arterial standard. Consequently, the movement of heavy trucks is disrupted for a few weeks each spring. The highway part of the development plan provides, therefore, for the construction, rebuilding and improvement of 570 miles of roads over the next ten years at a most of some forty-two million dollars.

The ferry service which connects Prince Edward Island to the mainland has been subject to a comprehensive re-appraisal. New terminal facilities, including convenient parking areas, snack bars, rest rooms and tourist bureaus are being constructed at Borden, Prince Edward Island and Cape Tormentine, New Brunswick. One new ice-breaking ship, the M.V. "John Hamilton Grey", entered the service in 1968 to replace an old ship. Another smaller ship, additional to those already in service, is due to commence service in time for the summer rush this year. The total cost of the additional ship and the terminal facilities is approximately 7.5 million dollars, all of which will be paid from Federal funds. A new long range plan for the service has also been worked out which provides for increases in capacity to match growth of demand. The two new ships, together with the two already in service, combine to offer an automobile carrying capacity more than twice that available for the summer season last year.

III BASIC PRINCIPLES OF A NEW TRANSPORT POLICY

The programme outlined must commence with the criteria established in Section 1 of the National Transportation Act, setting forth the National Transportation Policy for Canada and must proceed to develop regional transportation policy which is consistent with the National Transportation Act.

While a good deal of effort and research has been directed toward achieving a better understanding of transportation problems in the Atlantic region, there are still many areas where the best approach to be followed is not yet evident. For this reason the Federal Government should proceed on some items on as broad a basis as is possible within the resources available, but with measures clearly designated as interim with an adequate review procedure established to ensure that the most suitable long-term policies can evolve and be put into effect.

There are a number of principles which must govern the application of resources within the total programme:

- (1) Transportation is an essential element in economic development.
- (2) The principle of special Atlantic regional transportation assistance is still accepted as valid.
- (3) Federal financial assistance must be designed to encourage an "economic, efficient and adequate" transportation network with effective competition among modes.
- (4) The economic and social benefits achievable should be optimized in relation to the resources assigned. To achieve optimization a much greater degree of flexibility in the use of resources is required. Present assistance is being channeled into a small number of rigid programmes.
- (5) Means must be provided to broaden the base for transportation assistance in the Atlantic region. It is essential that individual programmes be awarded proper priorities and be assured of sufficient permanence to permit adequate adjustment by the business community.

An important objective is the creation of competition between carriers in order to lower the transportation cost to shippers and producers in the Atlantic region.

Competition, where it can be sustained on reasonably economic grounds, should be stimulated to the maximum extent.

- (6) In choosing areas for federal assistance—careful consideration should be given to whether or not continuing subsidy action is necessary. Situations offering prospect for gradual withdrawal of assistance should be accorded higher priority status, because of the ability to use funds elsewhere in the near future. This should not be taken as any denial of the historic principle that the merchants, traders and manufacturers of the Atlantic Provinces should have continued access to the wider markets of Canada.
- (7) Growth industries should also be given high priority consideration in assistance schemes for the Atlantic region.
- (8) In developing regional transportation policy and programmes—consideration of financial assistance and regulations must be given to areas where effective competition is non-existent.
- (9) It is felt that the residents of the Atlantic region have a better understanding of the problems of the region than non-residents and should have primary responsibility for administering many of the new measures of transportation assistance that may be proposed for the Atlantic region.
- (10) Transportation policy for the Atlantic provinces should be related to overall plans for regional economic development and consequently there should be close co-operation between the Department of Transport and the Department of Regional Economic Development.

The assistance proposals in this report take into account all of the submissions and recommendations made by individuals, firms, and municipalities in the Atlantic region and the submission of the Atlantic Premiers to the Minister of Transport, on March 10th, 1969. The proposals set out herein by and large correspond with many of their recommendations, although some parts have received different emphasis and application.

History has shown that policies and programmes sometimes decline in effectiveness with the passage of time. The development of new conditions can continually erode the original usefulness of any policy or programme, thus the proposals for assistance that follow provide for a review of the administration and effectiveness of the various programme proposals from the date of the coming into force of the programme or programmes.

The proposals set out herein take into account existing Federal assistance programmes and have been formed in such a way as to ensure consistency with them.

IV TRANSPORTATION LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

Your Committee recommends that the Government should consider the advisability of passing legislation in the following areas:

- (1) An Atlantic Region Transportation Act to amend the Maritime Freight Rates Act and to include other programmes
- (2) Subsidies for For-Hire Water Carriers Serving Newfoundland
- (3) Highway Programmes
- (4) New Assistance Programmes.

(1) Atlantic Region Transportation Act:

Such legislation should bring up to date the M.F.R.A. and should incorporate the following features:

- (a) Extension of the existing 30% "westbound" subsidy now paid on rail rates to all shipments of goods out of "select territory" by all modes to other points in Canada, with priority being given to "for-hire" trucking.
- (b) Extension of the subsidies within the limits specified in (a) to all express and L.C.L. shipments.
- (c) Replacement of the existing 20% subsidy paid on rail rates on shipments moving within the "select territory" with selective subsidy paid on traffic moved by all modes.
- (d) All subsidies to be administered by an Atlantic Region Transportation Board, and to be paid to the shipper where feasible. Initially until administrative procedures are developed, such subsidies would be paid to the common carriers.

(2) Subsidies for For-Hire Water Carriers Serving Newfoundland:

Your Committee has concluded that for-hire water carriers operating between Newfoundland and the mainland should be subsidized for all cargo carried in order to reduce in the long term the total subsidy required. It is therefore recommended as an interim measure that the Government considered the advisability of passing legislation so that the following subsidies be paid to regularly scheduled for-hire water carriers between Montreal and St. John's, and, Montreal and Corner Brook.

At present, a subsidy of $279,000.00 per year is being paid to a water carrier from Halifax to St. John's, Newfoundland and a subsidy of $40,000.00 per year is being paid to a water carrier from Halifax to Cupids. The first of these is equivalent to $14.00 per ton and the latter equivalent to $3.00 per ton.

These existing subsidy programmes and the new assistance recommended above should be considered interim and subject to revision after the completion of what your Committee understands is an in depth examination of the entire handling of traffic to and from Newfoundland by the Department of Transport. Your Committee would expect that the examination should produce a policy which will continue to recognize the terms of Union between Canada and Newfoundland and will maximize the benefits to the public of Newfoundland from whatever financial assistance provided by the Federal Government.

(3) Highway Programmes

"An adequate highway network is essential to the economic development of the region. The limited financial capabilities of the Atlantic Provinces necessitates an increase in the federal investment in the arterial highway programme. A long-term programme is essential to get maximum benefit from available funds. The Province of Newfoundland and Labrador have special highway requirements within the Atlantic region".

(Atlantic Premiers' Brief—March 10, 1969.)

The Government should continue to assist in meeting the capital costs of modern all-weather highway systems for the Atlantic Provinces. It is believed that such highways are an essential element in creating an adequate infrastructure for the Atlantic Provinces and in increasing competition among transportation modes in the Atlantic Provinces. Competition among the modes is the keystone of the National Transportation Policy and is the basic regulator of transportation rates set out in the National Transportation Act. Virtually all of the modern all-weather highways in the Atlantic Provinces have been constructed with federal assistance as part of the Trans-Canada Highway or under the Trunk Roads Programme of the Atlantic Development Board. It is recommended that the Department of Regional Economic Expansion consider the request of the Atlantic Premiers in their submission to the Minister of Transport of March 10th, 1969 for substantial highway assistance in the context of their planning for the economic expansion of the Atlantic Provinces.

In the meantime, it is the view of your Committee that, in order to ensure that continued progress is made towards providing the arterial highway network so vital to the region, that the Government give consideration to the proposals set out in Appendix "A".

Your Committee recognizes that any substantial highway program will have its effect upon the continued maintenance of all parts of the existing railway plant and coastal water services. It is recommended that consultation be undertaken with the Provincial authorities to ensure that in the resulting rationalization of existing transport service adequate alternative transportation services and proper cost-sharing arrangements are available and proven.

(4) New Assistance Programmes

A Measures

These proposals are designed for the purpose of increasing the ability and efficiency of shippers and producers in the Atlantic region to compete in the markets of Canada.

Such assistance programs should be administered by the Atlantic Region Transportation Board proposed under the revision to the M.F.R.A. section of the report. Examples of the types of assistance which the Board should be empowered to provide include:

- (a) An extended consultative traffic management service to encourage increased "pooling" arrangement for regional producers, which together with (b) above would assist shippers to avoid shipping in less than carload lots and thereby avoid paying the high rates associated with such shipments;
- (b) Warehousing and Inventory Cost Assistance;
- (c) Selective supplementary transportation assistance for both inbound and outbound commodities and for Atlantic regions shippers adversely affected by withdrawal of the intraselect territory subsidy;
- (d) Advice regarding the purchasing of specialized transportation equipment;
- (e) Help for setting up or establishment of central terminal facilities to encourage transportation integration;
- (f) Development of transport services essential for industrial expansion where the volume of traffic is initially too low to operate without financial assistance. Such assistance would, of necessity, be for a limited period of time;
- (g) Research and Liaison.

To expand briefly on items (b) and (c) regarding Warehousing and Inventory Cost Assistance, the proposed Board could, as stated previously, be empowered to sponsor a warehousing service in Toronto and Montreal to permit producers in the Atlantic Provinces to service these areas from local warehouses, rather than directly from the Atlantic Provinces. The Board might assist such producers with inventory costs involved in shipping larger quantities of goods to Toronto and Montreal and holding them until they are sold. Assistance would be to help Atlantic Provinces producers gain and hold larger markets or reduce their costs with their present market. It is suggested that for any given shipper, such assistance would be for a specified period of time. The principle is that if the assistance does not permit the producer to establish a viable operation using the special distribution services, then he would in effect after a trial period, lose the assistance. The proposals for a consultative traffic management service and for assistance with warehousing and inventory costs are particularly relevant to problems created for Atlantic Provinces shippers by the railways' new non-carload tariff, (ETA-100). The proposals outlined here would assist in the pooling of small shipments into larger lots to take advantage of the railways' new non-carload tariff. Continuity of assistance would be dependent upon the shipper establishing and maintaining a viable operation of economic benefit to the Region.

In addition, the Board should have the power to grant, upon application, assistance on transportation costs for selected raw materials, semi-finished materials and component parts which industries bring into their plants for further manufacturing and processing, and transportation assistance on products shipped to markets other than markets throughout Canada. The overall guidelines for such assistance should be the degree to which this assistance would enable the company to expand.

Such assistance programs should be complemented by the research facilities of the Canadian Transportation Commission. Furthermore, your Committee notes that the Premiers' report proposed expanding the consultative traffic management assistance the region has provided through its Transportation Commission. Your Committee heard representations for such increased service and it commends the Provincial Governments for taking steps in this direction. Close liaison should exist between the region Transportation Commission and the Atlantic Province Transportation and the Canadian Transportation Commission.

B Administration

A new Atlantic region transportation Board would consist of some part-time members appointed by and representing the Federal Government and one part-time member appointed by and representing each of the Provincial Governments. In addition, the Board could include a full-time Managing Director to be appointed by the other members. The Board would have the power to hire a small professional staff, including industrial engineers, economists, accountants, etc. and the necessary supporting staff. The Board would be located in the Atlantic region.

The Board would be required to submit an annual report to Parliament.

The functions of the new Board would be to set up and administer the revised M.F.R.A. the new assistance programmes and the research projects described above. It would also have power to recommend highway projects to Federal and Provincial authorities. Your Committee recommends that the Government consider the advisability that the programmes and activities of the Board would be financed by a new Federal Fund and reviewed after certain stated period by the Federal authorities in consultation with the Governments of the Atlantic Provinces.

V IMPLEMENTATION

New legislation is a fundamental requirement for putting the proposals contained herein into effect. Legislation is necessary to create the Atlantic Region Transportation Board and to establish the Atlantic Region Transportation Fund. Other proposals can be implemented by the provision of funds in the Estimates.

It is recommended that legislation be prepared by Federal Government for consideration of Parliament as soon as it is feasible to implement the proposals above.

VI OTHER CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Your Committee heard many representations on a variety of other transportation matters involving Atlantic Canada. For convenience, these are set out in separate categories.

Air Services

The Atlantic Premiers made the following broad recommendations with respect to air:

- (1) a re-definition of air transportation policy should take place in order to permit a redistribution of air routes between trunk and regional carriers;
- (2) regional carriers should be compensated for servicing uneconomic parts of the network which are, nevertheless, essential to the area served;
- (3) the Federal Government should extend financial assistance immediately to the regional carriers to enable them to re-equip its fleet and upgrade its airport facilities and navigational equipment;
- (4) more research must be carried out before other final detailed recommendations can be made on such matters as airport locations, additional air routes and shifts in air routes.

Ports and Harbours

Your Committee has heard considerable evidence relating to the use of the Ports of Atlantic Canada. These constitute an asset of great potential in dealing with the transportation problems. Two studies are now available dealing with harbour administration. In addition, a study has been ordered by the Government into the possibility of developing a Canadian Merchant Marine. It is the opinion of your Committee that the studies dealing with harbour administration should be referred to it for lengthy examination at the next session of Parliament, and it would expect in due course to be given the task of examining the Merchant Marine report.

Maine Corridor Road

With respect to the Maine Corridor Road, the three Maritime Provinces have met with the Government of the State of Maine to discuss the problem and are currently looking at the economic advantages.

Chignecto Canal

Submissions were heard on this topic, and the argument advanced that the Canal would be a natural extension of the St. Lawrence Seaway and provide low cost water rates on bulk commodities to the Great Lakes and also from the northern part of the Province of New Brunswick to the southern part of New Brunswick.

The Committee recommends that the development of such a Canal be a part of its Ports and Harbours study.

New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island Crossing

Your Committee heard considerable evidence in favour of a fixed crossing between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, in particular a representation on behalf of the Government of Prince Edward Island. The Federal Government had made its decision against proceeding with such a crossing, and your Committee therefore limits itself to one recommendation, namely, that there be a review of the proposal from time to time in the light of changing economic circumstances relating to the costs of financing and of construction.

Newfoundland Rail Passenger Service

The Canadian Transport Commission has granted an order, number R-2673 dated July 3, 1968, and an order, number R-5185, dated April 14, 1969, which would permit the Canadian National Railways to discontinue its rail passenger service in the Province of Newfoundland. The decision has prompted a considerable amount of evidence and of argument favourable and unfavourable to come before your Committee. Because an appeal has been made to the Governor General in Council against the order, your Committee considers the matter to be sub judice and therefore does not make a recommendation.

APPENDIX "A"

ATLANTIC PROVINCES HIGHWAYS

Prior to the findings of the Atlantic Provinces Study, the Atlantic Development Board accepted the widely held (and probably correct) view that a lack of adequate all-weather highways could be a major obstacle to the economic development of the region. Accordingly, the Atlantic Development Board allocated from the Atlantic Development Fund millions of dollars for the improvement of trunk highways and particular emphasis was placed on bringing trunk highways up to all-weather standards.

In a joint submission in April, 1968, the four Atlantic Provinces put forth a case for a ten year Federal/Provincial trunk highway programme totalling $925,000,000 to be shared on a 90-10 Federal/Provincial basis, including costs of rights-of-way. The Federal grant requested was $835,000,000. In support of the proposal, the submission noted the following factors:

(1) the low capacities, weight restrictions, lack of all-weather features, and lack of safety features which characterize much of the existing highway system;

(2) the lack of an adequate fiscal base in the provinces to support the financial expenditures needed for an extensive highway programme;

(3) the high proportion of highway expenditures contained in provincial budgets, compared to other provinces, as well as the relatively high highway costs per capita, high operating expenditures in relation to highway revenues, etc.

If the provinces were to continue to spend from their own revenues an average of $52,000,000 spent annually in the period 1964-67, in order to maintain total expenditures at the average of about $100,000,000 per annum prevailing during these years, the federal contribution would have to be of the order of $50,000,000 per year, i.e. at around the levels prevailing during only 3 out of the 12 years since 1959-60 when all three major federal cost share programs were at their peak. However, as not all Provincial expenditures are on arterial highways, this level of expenditure would not achieve the joint Provincial program within 10 years.

Evidence is that the Atlantic Provinces would not be able to maintain such expenditures even if the Federal Government were willing to provide the same level of contribution.

What seems clear, is that whether such a program is realized in ten, twenty or thirty years depends on the size of the Federal contributions.

The question arises as to the actual need for further road programs aimed at economic development of the Atlantic Region, the priority to be assigned such programs as against other areas of possible investment which might achieve the same ends, and the time horizon appropriate to the satisfaction of any needs identified.

While it may be assumed that expenditures on upgrading the extensive mileage of roads suggested in the joint submission by the Atlantic Provinces would result in some level of benefits, the amount of the benefits is not known, and, hence, the justification for the investments cannot be expressed in terms of alternative investment opportunities in other non-highway projects.

The present highway system in some areas is relatively poor in quality compared to roads in more developed Canadian regions or that the present system imposes some delays and additional cost on road users.

It may seem premature to make recommendations regarding either specific road improvements, or the appropriate level of federal financing to be provided, without a more detailed study of regional road conditions, and future requirements, being undertaken that has been done hitherto, including the work of the Economist Intelligence Unit Limited, in order to determine the priority to be given to investments in roads, the amount of investment required to obtain agreed objectives, or the order in which specific highway projects should be undertaken.

The techniques involved aim at providing those who must make decisions to select from alternative proposals, the minimum cost, maximum efficiency, highway systems. This could be done in terms of a predetermined financial constraint, or the final investment decisions can be arrived at after the projects have been ranked.

Basic to the type of feasibility study proposed, the techniques of which have been fairly thoroughly worked out in respect of road programmes relating to developing countries, in the development, if it does not already exist, of an engineering inventory of existing roads giving such parameters as a surface type and quality, rise and fall, geometric design, capacity, etc.

Roughly, what is then involved is the study of the road network by segments in terms of the true economic cost of transport on each segment by vehicle types under existing road conditions. The costs of various road improvements is then determined, as is the change in transport costs of any suggested road improvement, or from construction of new roads. The process requires work by economists and engineers. Equally essential to the analysis is the development of data on actual traffic by classes of vehicle and of origin and destination data by classes of goods, and by passengers in terms of business, local and tourist volumes. The forecasting of traffic volumes, is vital to the determination of benefits, and such forecasts must be taken into account, to the extent possible, such factors as, for example, the expected results of the activities of planning and other agencies on various sectors of the economy and on population distribution, as well as the requirements of other transport modes, or factors affecting road transport such as any changes to the subsidies paid under the Maritime Freight Rates Act, or the effect of improved roads, and the consequent development of more competitive trucking on the need for other types of transport, for example, coastal shipping.

It is suggested that if consideration is to be given to the need for a continuing federal participation in Atlantic Region Highway projects for purposes of regional economic development, an appraisal be made of the existing information on highways, traffic, etc. for the purpose of ascertaining what additional data should be developed in order that coherent feasibility studies can be undertaken as required. This would call for close consultation and co-operation with provincial officials, particularly in highway engineering departments, and planners.

The importance of highway development should not be underrated as a factor in regional development. Because of the rapid running down of all three federally shared highway programmes and in view of a possible time lag of perhaps a year in developing recommendations for a long range highway programme, attention might be drawn to a possible need for a short term federal provincial programme, perhaps costing $33,000,000 as outlined in the joint submission by the four Atlantic Provinces of April, 1969, to avoid sharp contraction in highway construction over the next two years or so.

It is believed that assistance in providing a system of modern all-weather highways should be a part of any plan for improving Atlantic Provinces transportation.

The only existing all-weather highways (1250 miles) in the Atlantic Provinces have been provided with Federal assistance as part of the Trans-Canada Highway or Trunk Roads programme. The lack of all-weather highways in many areas of the Atlantic Provinces is still a serious problem for truckers because of load restrictions during the spring break-up.

All-weather highways, it is believed, are an essential element in creating an adequate infrastructure for the Atlantic Provinces and in increasing competition among transportation modes in the Atlantic Provinces.

Competition among modes is the keystone of the National Transportation Policy and is the basic regulator of transportation rates under the National Transportation Act.

In fiscal year 1969-70, total federal expenditures for the Trans-Canada Highway and Trunk Roads to Resources will fall to about the $30 million level in the Atlantic Provinces and will be terminated some time in 1971 unless changes are made in existing legislation.

The federal contribution has been an important element in the highway programmes of the Atlantic Provinces and if it is eliminated, this will have very serious effects on those programmes of the Atlantic Provinces and on the construction industry in the Atlantic Provinces.

It is further recommended that the Government should consider the advisability of instituting a five-year programme of Federal assistance to highways in the Atlantic Provinces, $30 million to be the maximum Federal contribution in any one year. This programme should be financed on a 90-10 basis. The Provinces would be required to submit plans for a defined network of all-weather highways, chosen for their effect on competition among transportation modes in the Atlantic Provinces, and for their contribution towards the economic development of the Atlantic Provinces.

One petition for a Private Bill was presented in accordance with Standing Order 67(1).

A Message was received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate had passed the following bills, without amendment:

Bill C-183, An Act to establish the Export Development Corporation and to facilitate and develop export trade by the provision of insurance, guarantees, loans and other financial facilities.

Bill C-195, An Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act.

Mr. Blair, from the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented the Third Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

Your Committee recommends that the Standing Orders of the House be amended by adding the following new Standing Orders immediately after Standing Order 75:

75A. 75B. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that a majority of the representatives of the several parties have come to an agreement in respect of a proposed allotment of days or hours for the proceedings at any stage of the passing of a public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of the said proposed allocation; provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages of a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

Mr. Hales, from the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, presented the Fourth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

In its study of the Auditor General's Reports for the fiscal years ended March 31, 1966 and March 31, 1967, your Committee devoted ten meetings to the consideration of the development of the hydrofoil, HMCS Bras D'Or, and actually inspected the ship in the Halifax harbour.

The witnesses heard in respect to the hydrofoil were:

From the Auditor General's Office:

Mr. A. M. Henderson, Auditor General of Canada,
Mr. G. R. Long,
Mr. H. E. Hayes,
Mr. J. R. Douglas,
Mr. A. M. Buzza,
Mr. A. G. Cross,
Mr. J. M. Laroche;

From the Department of National Defence:

Mr. E. B. Armstrong, Deputy Minister,
Commodore A. G. Bridgman,
Captain T. S. Allan,
Captain C. W. Ross,
Mr. C. Eames,
Mr. R. O. McGee;

From the Department of Supply and Services:

Mr. G. W. Hunter, Deputy Minister of Supply,

Mr. S. G. Glassford;

From De Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd.:

Mr. D. B. Annan, Vice-President Operations,

Mr. William T. Heaslip, Vice-President Engineering,

Mr. John Brown, Counsel,

Mr. R. W. Becker, Program Manager.

Your Committee wishes to commend the witnesses for their cooperative and forthright manner in responding to the questions of the members during this particular phase of the investigations.

Your Committee is concerned that this project was embarked upon with an initial cost estimate of $9.1 million which, by January 1968, had increased to $50 million. It considers this to be particularly serious in view of the statement made in the Department's submission to the Treasury Board:

"The Contractor's estimates for this program are recommended for funding purposes. The methods used though based on broad parameters are considered conservative and it is our considered opinion the program as now understood, but not including Contractor's and user's trials, will be accomplished within the $9.1 million allocated." (Auditor General's Report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1966, page 48.)

It is the opinion of your Committee that the Treasury Board was not provided with a proper estimate of the probable overall costs of this project at the time initial approval of the project was sought. It urges all departments to see to it that the Treasury Board and Parliament are provided with full information and estimates of probable overall costs concerning any project at the time that initial authorization of the Board is sought and that the Treasury Board cause a full investigation to be made in cases where it subsequently becomes apparent that this was not done.

While the departmental officials have indicated that there was liaison with United States naval authorities on development information of hydrofoils, your Committee is of the opinion that a good deal of money expended on research was a duplication of effort. Greater reliance on the experience of other countries could have effected large economies in the programme.

Your Committee questions the decision of the departmental authorities in completing the hydrofoil, HMCS Bras D'Or, to the extent it has—viz inclusion of messing facilities, bunks, cabin furniture, etc. in what is still a test ship. Your Committee also questions the decision of the departmental authorities in purchasing $10 million of fighting equipment before the basic ship has been proved. Evidence was given that some equipment was purchased and other rented. Your Committee is of the opinion that more of the equipment should have been rented—again pending the proving of the basic ship.

Your Committee was amazed to learn that in developing the prototype hydrofoil, no patents were taken out. For the dollar value expended on this programme, one would naturally assume that some clearly defined patents would result, e.g. though a compact, efficient and light compass was developed for the hydrofoil, there are no patents and lack of initiative in selling this compass to other countries was evident.

FIRE ABOARD THE HYDROFOIL—NOVEMBER 5, 1966

A thorough investigation was conducted by your Committee into the circumstances surrounding the fire which occurred in the engine room of the hydrofoil on November 5, 1966. This fire cost the taxpayers of this country over three million dollars directly and soared to $6.5 million when time loss and other factors were considered.

Your Committee has grave reservations about the propriety of the Crown having insured this contractor against fire, for the sole reason of reducing the contract price by the amount of a premium the contractor would have had to pay to obtain fire insurance coverage from a private fire insurance company. Your Committee has no reservations about the Crown acting as the insurer in the course of ordinary construction but has these reservations about development projects or projects involving highly inflammable fluids and, or, materials. In brief, where a standard form of marine fire insurance coverage would suffice then, in that eventuality, the Committee does not have the same reservations.

If however, the Crown continues to act as the insurer on development projects and projects involving highly inflammable materials and fluids then the Committee recommends more careful consideration should be given to the terms of the fire insurance coverage and not to use the standard form of marine fire insurance coverage as was the case with the hydrofoil.

Your Committee feels that the following at least should have been covered in clauses in a special form of an insurance coverage contract with De Havilland, namely:

1. That flammable fluid be isolated where practicable from potential ignition sources;
2. That the Department of National Defence representatives be informed in writing in advance of any testing;
3. That investigation continue to determine areas of design which were potentially dangerous or inadequate for the intended purpose;
4. A clause requiring De Havilland to notify the Naval Overseers or staff in advance of the conducting of important tests. (On future Navy work whether of a developmental or construction nature the policy should call for a written understanding and not a verbal one that Naval Overseers or staff be notified in advance of the conducting of important tests);
5. A clause calling for more than one experienced employee to be stationed at the location of the test;
6. A clause for the sake of protection calling for not less than two experienced employees to be stationed at the mechanical fire protection equipment, in order that same could be activated if required;
7. A clause requiring that in all engine, electrical rooms and other of similar nature when tests are to be conducted that electrically operated warning systems be operational;
8. A clause requiring that all high temperature engine joints, piping or areas be adequately insulated before tests are conducted on engine or electrical equipment;
9. A clause requiring that when engine or electrical room tests are to be conducted where there is proximity to hydraulic or flammable fluids having a potential of ignition that adequate fire fighting provision be available.

A Board of Inquiry investigated the cause and their conclusions were made available to your Committee. It is to be noted that at the time of the test there was only one man in the engine room and another outside stationed alongside a mechanical device to bring into operation after a fifteen second warning signal the fire extinguishing apparatus.

Evidence given to your Committee was conclusive that at the time of the fire certain flexible joints installed on engine room piping was not as called for in the specifications and that some areas of metal surfaces including a temporary exhaust where temperatures reach approximately 1,000 degrees F had not been insulated and therefore hot metal surfaces were exposed.

The investigation conducted by the Department of Supply and Services and the Department of National Defence resulted in the information that the probable source of the fire was a hydraulic fluid leak which impinged on an exposed portion of the auxiliary gas turbine duct and thus ignited. Further conclusions were that the fire fighting provisions and organization were inadequate to cope with a fire of this magnitude; the inspection records did not afford proof that the hydraulic system in use had been fully inspected; documentary evidence of quality assurance was incomplete and thus inadequate and that National Defence personnel had not been advised that this particular test was planned for Saturday, November 5, 1966.

In view of all the evidence, the Public Accounts Committee is of the opinion that the fire occurred because of negligence by the De Havilland Company. Your Committee endorses the five recommendations made by the Board of Inquiry:

- (a) That the fire-fighting provisions and organization be improved;
- (b) That improved fire-proof fluid couplings be utilized in lieu of the hose and clamp connections in those systems where a risk of fire would occur if a leak developed;
- (c) That flammable fluid be isolated where practicable from potential ignition sources;
- (d) That the Department of National Defence representatives be informed in writing in advance of any testing;
- (e) That investigation continue to determine other areas of design which were potentially dangerous or inadequate for the intended purpose.

The Public Accounts Committee is much concerned about the insurance provisions relative to the hydrofoil project. Your Committee found it somewhat amazing that the Government contract with the De Havilland Company exempted it from having to carry any insurance irrespective of the cause or amount of damage through fire or other unforeseen circumstances. The provision is such that even if the Company were guilty of negligence in causing the fire with millions of dollars of loss incurred, no recovery could be made from the Company because the Government Department was the insurer.

Your Committee was pleased to learn that this entire matter of insurance coverage has been studied by the Department of Supply and Services and the Department of National Defence and some changes have been, or are anticipated to be made. However, in view of its investigation the Committee would most strongly urge that on major development or construction the company or companies involved be required to insure against damage resulting from their own negligence.

Your Committee viewed a film of the preliminary tests of the hydrofoil and was pleased to note that the foil-borne tests augur well for eventual acceptance of the craft.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 18 to 25 inclusive, 35, 38 and 45) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 111 to the Journals).

Whereupon, the House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. McQuaid, seconded by Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake)—That Bill C-120, An Act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, be amended by deleting clauses 28, 29, and 30 thereof and substituting therefor the following:

"28. (1) An investigation by the Commissioner under this Act shall be conducted in private except as otherwise provided for in subsection (3).

(2) It is not necessary for the Commissioner to hold any hearing but he may allow any person or any department or other institution concerned in an investigation, and shall allow any person or any department or other institution complained against in the course of such investigation, to be represented by counsel.

(3) The Commissioner shall not make a report or recommendation in respect of any person, department or other institution so complained against until that person, department or other institution, as the case may be, has been given reasonable notice of the complaint and has been allowed full opportunity to be heard in public or in private as that person, department or other institution may elect.

(a) the powers of a Commissioner under Part I of the Inquiries Act; and

(b) the power, subject to such limitations as the Governor in Council in the interests of defence or security may prescribe, to enter any premises occupied by any department or other institution of the Parliament or Government of Canada and carry out therein such inquiries within his authority under this Act as he sees fit."

And on the motion of Mr. Lewis, seconded by Mr. Brewin, in amendment thereto,—That the motion be amended:

- (1) by deleting the words "clauses 28, 29 and 30" in lines 2 and 3 and substituting therefor the words "clause 28";
- (2) by deleting the numeral "3" in the sixth line and substituting the numeral 2;
- (3) by deleting sub-clauses 2 and 3 and substituting therefor the following as sub-clause 2: "It is not necessary for the Commissioner to hold any hearing, but he shall not make a report or recommendation adversely affecting any individual, department or other institution until that individual, department or other institution, as the case may be, has been given reasonable notice of the complaint against him or it, and has been allowed full opportunity to be heard in public or in private and to be represented by counsel as that person, department or other institution may elect"; and

(4) by deleting sub-clauses 4, 5, 6, and 7.

After further debate, the question being put on the said proposed amendment, it was negatived, on division.

And the question being put on the main motion, pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, a recorded division was deferred.

STATEMENT BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: Perhaps I should be allowed to express an afterthought in connection with the motion proposed by the honourable Member for Cardigan (Mr. McQuaid). As honourable Members will note from a reading of pages 4 and 5 of today's Order Paper, that motion proposed to amend clauses 28, 29 and 30 of Bill C-120.

It appears each motion at the Report Stage should actually be directed to a specific clause of a bill rather than a number of clauses. Such motions, I submit, should not relate to two or more clauses as in the case of the motion proposed by the honourable Member for Cardigan. It is my submission that at the report stage of a bill it is intended that every provision of a bill may be isolated and dealt with directly.

The motion proposed by the honourable Member for Cardigan which will be voted upon later, tends to thwart the operation of that principle. A complex motion dealing with several clauses of a bill inevitably leads to complicated amendments which further confuse and becloud the question being considered. I think my point will be apparent to those honourable Members who studied the amendment to the motion which was advanced by the honourable Member for York South (Mr. Lewis). I might say it was actually the amendment moved by the honourable Member for York South which made the Chair realize that perhaps the amendment as it had been proposed should have been split in three. I should say that the motion of the honourable Member for Cardigan should have been split in three motions rather than a single motion, but this perhaps may be a bit too technical.

I say this to protect the position of the Chair if on other occasions motions proposed at the Report Stage of this nature are advanced by honourable Members.

All this having been said, it is in the nature of an afterthought because a motion had been accepted, put to the House and will be voted on in due course.

Mr. McQuaid, seconded by Mr. Hales, moved,—That Bill C-120, An Act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, be amended by adding to clause 34 thereof the following subclauses:

“(4) Where a member of the House of Commons, on or before the third sitting day next following the day the Speaker of that House tables any report made by the Commissioner under section 33, asks leave to move the adjournment of the House for the purpose of discussing the report as a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, the matter shall be deemed proper to be discussed and shall thereafter be proceeded with in accordance with the provisions of the standing order of the House applicable to the subsequent stages of the proceeding.

(5) The annual statement to Parliament made by the Commissioner under this section, when tabled respectively in the Senate and House of Commons, shall thereupon be referred in each House to a committee designated by the Speaker.”

And debate arising thereon;

Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Danforth, moved in amendment thereto,—That the motion be amended by:

- (1) deleting the proposed subclause (4); and
- (2) inserting in the proposed subclause (5), next after the word “section”, the words “and any report that may be made by him under section 33”; and by renumbering the subclause as subclause (4).

And debate arising thereon;

Mr. Lewis, seconded by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) moved in amendment,—That the motion be further amended by deleting the words “to a committee designated by the Speaker” at the end of sub-clause (5) and that the following words be substituted therefor:

“to an appropriate committee”.

By unanimous consent, proceedings thereon were interrupted.

Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Hales, moved,—That Bill C-120, An Act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, be amended by deleting clause 38 thereof and substituting the following:

“38. (1) The right to speak a language other than either of the two official languages shall not be restrained or restricted in its natural development in any way.

(2) The Governor in Council may by Order in Council enter into an agreement with the government of any province which has been authorized by legislation so to do, for the purpose of encouraging natural development of any such minority language especially as regards the use of such language in matters of education.”

And debate arising thereon;

PART I—INTRODUCTORY

Historical Background

The North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) was formally established by an agreement between Canada and the United States which was signed May 12, 1958. Originally, it was effective for a ten-year period. It was renewed on March 30, 1968 for a further five-year period. However, it can be reviewed at any time and following such review it may be terminated by either Canada or the United States on one year's notice.

Before the establishment of NORAD, the Canadian and United States air defence forces had acted in close co-operation and co-ordination. With the development of a nuclear capability by the Soviet Union combined with the development of a long-range bomber force, it was decided that the effective air defence of the North American continent would require the unrestricted use of Canadian and United States air space by defending air forces under an integrated command.

Basically, therefore, the NORAD agreement set up an integrated command for the planning and operation of the air defences of Canada and the continental United States. The Commander-in-Chief is an American, the Deputy Commander is Canadian. They are responsible to the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the United States and the Chief of the Canadian Defence Staff, who in turn are responsible to their respective governments.

The NORAD agreement does not impose any specific commitment on either country to allocate military forces to the NORAD command. The NORAD command includes only such individuals and combat units as the two Governments from time to time choose to allocate to it.

Basic Functions of NORAD

NORAD fulfils two major functions which are quite distinct. Its first function is air defence. This includes the surveillance and detection of all unknown aircraft in the NORAD area and the interception and, if necessary, the destruction of any enemy bombers seeking to penetrate North American air space. The second function is the surveillance and detection of hostile Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles (ICBM's). At the present time NORAD has no facilities to intercept or destroy hostile ICBM's.

The Soviet Bomber Threat

The size and character of the Soviet threat to North America have changed very significantly since the inception of NORAD in 1958. The emphasis has shifted from a solely bomber threat in 1958 to a massive missile and more limited bomber threat in 1969.

At the present time the Soviet Union has about 150 subsonic jet and turbo-prop bombers of intercontinental range. These bombers have a two-way mission capability to any target in North America. The Soviets also have about 700 medium bombers which are believed to be targeted on Eurasia, but a few might be committed to an attack on North America. In an unusual situation it is conceivable that something less than half of these bombers might be used on one-way missions but in view of the growth of Soviet ICBM and Submarine Launched Ballistic Missile (SLBM) capability, this is not considered to be very probable. In this unlikely case, the obvious targets are in Hawaii, Alaska and Canada.

Although there is still no evidence of Soviet introduction of a new bomber of inter-continental range in the early 1970's, improvements in the present Soviet bomber force continue to be noted. These include the use of air-to-surface missiles with improved survivability and stand-off strike capability of several hundred miles, the development of low-flying capability making detection more difficult and the use of sophisticated electronic counter measures designed to complicate air defence.

NORAD Forces

NORAD operational forces are made up of some 144,000 personnel at some 350 locations. These figures do not include figures for the Alaska Command. Of the 144,000 personnel, 14,000 are provided by the Canadian forces and 130,000 by the United States forces. There are approximately 700 American NORAD personnel attached to Canadian forces in Canada and approximately 250 Canadian NORAD personnel in the United States.

Command Arrangements

The Commander-in-Chief of NORAD (CINCNORAD) is an American. The Deputy Commander is a Canadian. The continent is divided into five regions (Western, Eastern, Central, Northern and Alaska). Alaska is in a different position than the other four NORAD regions. It includes only American territory, and is a separate United States unified command under its own commander-in-chief.

American officers command the Western, Eastern and Central regions with Canadians as vice-commanders in the Western and Central regions. A Canadian officer commands the Northern region.

Each regional commander is responsible to CINCNORAD for the air defence of his region. He monitors and co-ordinates the air action, plans the use of assigned forces, and supervises the methods and procedures by which an air battle would be fought in his region.

The NORAD regions are subdivided into divisions, there being 13 NORAD divisions in all at this time. The division commanders exercise direct control over the defensive forces which include, for Canada, manned interceptors and Bomarcas, and, in addition for the United States, Nike-Hercules and Hawk missiles. All divisions with the exception of those in Alaska and the 37th NORAD Division at Goose Bay, Labrador, are integrated into the SAGE (Semi-Automatic Ground Environment) system. The system includes computers which are capable of accepting a large volume of information and transposing it into a readily usable form for air battle management.

Under the existing arrangement of NORAD regions and divisions, with the exception of Quebec, and Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick practically all of the populated area of Canada is under the operational control of American officers.

Effective September 15, 1969, changes will be made in the regions and divisions by extending the Western, Eastern and Northern Regions and eliminating the Central region. Among other effects, these changes will extend operational control of Canadian officers to Northern and Western Ontario as shown on the attached map. (For copy of map see Issue No. 49 of Committee Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence.)

Interceptor Force

NORAD has at present assigned to it three Canadian air defence command fighter interceptor squadrons totalling 48 aircraft situated at Chatham, New Brunswick, Bagotville, Quebec and Comox, British Columbia. These squadrons are equipped with the CF 101 Voodoo Interceptor. The U.S.A.F. provides 18 squadrons of F 106 Delta-Dart and F 101 B Voodoo Fighter Interceptors deployed around the perimeter of the continental United States and in Alaska. In addition, the U.S.A.F. provides 21 other fighter interceptor squadrons manned by the National Guard and equipped with first line aircraft such as the F 102 Delta-Dagger. All Canadian NORAD interceptors are equipped to carry air-to-air missiles with nuclear warheads and also have conventional capability. The fighter interceptors are directly controlled by the NORAD divisional commanders within whose area of responsibility they are located.

Bomarc Missiles

NORAD has a total of eight Bomarc B missile squadrons in its inventory. Two squadrons—one located at La Macaza in Quebec and one at North Bay, Ontario, are provided by Canada. The remaining six Bomarc squadrons are in the northeastern United States. The Bomarc missiles are on a constant state of alert and are ready to be launched within seconds if hostile forces penetrate North American air space.

Bomarc squadrons are under the direct operational control of a divisional commander. The operational concept includes a "fail-safe" system of control which assures that the launching of a Bomarc missile can only be actuated from the SAGE direction centre.

Nuclear Weapons Control Arrangements

A "two-key" procedure is employed whereby a Canadian and an American officer are each required to turn a key to make the Bomarc launch system operative. The officers carrying the two keys are on duty in the SAGE direction centres 24 hours a day. The launch system can only be activated on receipt of properly authenticated instructions from the NORAD Combat Centre. These instructions would be given by the CINCNORAD only after he had obtained authority from the Governments of Canada and the United States. The equivalent control procedures apply to all nuclear-equipped interceptors, Canadian and American, operating over Canadian territory.

Nike/Hercules Missiles

There are no Nike/Hercules air defence weapons situated in Canada. These short-range weapons are used to provide point defence of 24 major cities, industrial areas and SAC bases in the continental United States including Alaska.

Surveillance, Warning and Control Facilities

The Distant Early Warning (DEW) line is intended to provide the first detection of a manned bomber attack. This warning line consists of six major stations and 23 auxiliary stations. Four of the main stations are located in the Canadian Arctic. The military commander of each of these four stations is a Canadian and he exercises operational control for NORAD.

Warning provided by the DEW line permits NORAD to alert civil defence agencies of Canada and the United States and provides time for the strategic retaliatory bomber force of the United States Strategic Air Command to become airborne. At the same time NORAD defence forces would be brought up to an alert status prepared to meet an attacking force.

A second method of detection is provided through the Pine Tree Line of long-range radar positions in southern Canada and in the United States. At the present time there are 27 long-range radars manned and operated by the Canadian Forces Air Defence Command and 99 operated by the United States Air Force. These radars also have a control function in relation to the interceptor and Bomarc squadrons.

Canada-United States Cost Sharing

It has been recognized that the defence of the North American continent is a co-operative effort and that air defence costs incurred by Canada are for the benefit of the United States also. Accordingly, the United States and Canada entered into a series of cost-sharing agreements for certain North American air defence facilities in Canada under which, generally speaking, the United States paid two-thirds of the capital costs and Canada paid one-third. These included the headquarters, SAGE system and other facilities for the Northern NORAD Region and 41st NORAD Division situated at North Bay, the long-range radar sites in Canada, the telecommunication requirements and the Bomarc squadrons. The overall capital cost of this programme was approximately $450,000,000, of which the Canadian share was about $150,000,000. The DEW line facilities in Canada were entirely constructed and paid for by the United States and are maintained by the United States through a civilian contract with the Federal Electric Company. The United States bore the entire capital costs of all NORAD facilities in the United States including the capital costs of the combat operations centre at Colorado Springs (approximately $142,000,000).

At the present time the annual operating and maintenance costs to Canada for its participation in NORAD total approximately $135,000,000 allocated as follows:

|--------------------------------|--------------|
| Interceptors | 38.9 million |
| Bomarc | 4.2 million |
| Radars | 67.7 million |
| Control Centres | 3.4 million |
| Space detection tracking | .6 million |
| Command Headquarters | 20.2 million |

Rough estimates indicate that at this time Canada pays 8% to 10% of all NORAD operating and maintenance costs—roughly in proportion to population.

Suggested Improvements in Air Defence

Certain improvements have been suggested by the United States to remedy weaknesses of our existing air defence system. ICBM's could destroy any of the existing installations before the bombers arrived. Bombers with radar-homing missiles could destroy the control radars. Moreover, any system depending on ground-based radars is limited in its ability to track aircraft flying at low altitude because the line-of-sight from radar to target is cut off at the horizon.

Fixed radars determine the active defence belt in which interceptors and missiles can be controlled. If the bomber were equipped with a long-range air-to-surface missile, it might be able to launch it from just outside the active defence belt. The air-to-surface missile (ASM) is a much smaller and faster target than the bomber. However, it has a smaller pay-load and is probably less accurate. The defence problem is also complicated by the development by the Soviet of sophisticated electronic counter measures designed to complicate air defence.

The suggested air defence system designed to overcome these weaknesses would require the development of an Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) which basically consists of aircraft equipped with radar and various sophisticated equipment for communication, computing, data storage and display. It would also require the development of Over-the-Horizon Radar and improved interceptor aircraft.

If the new system were introduced, it might be possible to effect a reduction in the SAGE system and in ground-based radars. There would be fewer squadrons (with the improved interceptors) to maintain and it might be possible to make reductions in the Pine Tree Line.

The Committee has been informed that the original American estimates of the total capital and operation and maintenance costs of the United States programme (including operation and maintenance costs of the residual portions of the present system) for the 10 year period 1967-77 amount to approximately 12.3 billion dollars. When the system is fully operational, the annual operating cost is estimated to be $690,000,000 which is substantially less than the annual operating cost of the present system.

USSR ICBM Capability

It has been estimated that the Soviet Union will have achieved numerical parity with the U.S. in land-based intercontinental ballistic launchers by mid-1969 and will have a larger inventory than the United States in 1970. The Soviet Union has between 950 and 1,000 ICBM launchers operational including a significant number of SS9 which can carry a warhead in excess of 20 megatons and is the missile in which the USSR has been testing Multiple Re-Entry Vehicles.

The Soviet Union also has about 45 ballistic missile launch tubes in their nuclear-powered submarine force and a new class of submarine having 16 missile tubes is in series production. It is expected to have the capability of firing a missile at 1500 miles range therefore markedly improving Soviet strike capabilities.

A number of developments in ICBM's are now possible which are referred to in detail in testimony forming part of the record of the Committee. These include Multiple Re-Entry Vehicles (MRV), Multiple Independently Targeted Re-Entry Vehicles (MIRV), the Fractional Orbital Bombardment System (FOBS), The Multiple Orbital Bombardment System (MOBS) and the Depressed Trajectory ICBM (DICBM).

Other developments are designed to improve the probability that the missile will survive attack before it is launched. The main methods of reducing vulnerability are dispersion, hardening, concealment and mobility. Already missile sites have been dispersed and hardened. Concealment of a fixed land installation is difficult in these days of reconnaissance satellites. However, it is quite possible that ICBM launchers could be made mobile, on railway cars, on road vehicles, canal barges or ships. It is also possible to mount them on underwater launchers resting on the bottom of lakes or the sea.

The NORAD System For Detection and Surveillance Of ICBM's

NORAD's capability for detection of the approach of ICBM's is provided by the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS) located in three sites—at Clear in Alaska, Thule in Greenland, and Fylingdale Moor in England. These were established by the United States at a cost of approximately $920,000,000.

The warning capability of the BMEWS is between 15 and 20 minutes. The information gleaned by the BMEWS sites is sifted and correlated by computer system and relayed automatically to the computers in the NORAD complex at Colorado Springs, over cables and radio circuits, many of them in Canada.

At the NORAD Combat Centre in Colorado Springs the data is processed by the NORAD computers and displayed instantaneously. Processed warning information is passed to all user agencies such as National Defence H.Q. in Ottawa, the National Military Command Center in Washington, SAC, SHAPE, RAF Headquarters, etc. In addition, NORAD headquarters receives information from a number of ancillary sources not under its direct command. These include the Space Detection and Tracking System (SPADATS) to which Canada's contribution consists of manning a Baker-Nunn camera at Cold Lake, Alberta and various sensors.

In summary, NORAD has a capability to detect, identify and give warning of ICBM and SLBM attacks against the North American continent. It has not been technically feasible to intercept or destroy ballistic missiles. In this situation, the preservation of the retaliatory force, through hardened Minute-Man Sites, Polaris submarines and airborne SAC bombers has been considered the best counter against any ballistic missile attack and the most effective deterrent to a pre-emptive first strike.

The "Safeguard" ABM System

An anti-ballistic missiles system (ABM system) is designed to intercept and destroy enemy ICBM's. It is believed that the USSR has installed an ABM system surrounding Moscow.

In 1967, the United States announced that a light ABM system later called "Sentinel" would be deployed in the United States. This programme encountered considerable opposition and was suspended. In March 1969, however, President Nixon announced that a modified system called "Safeguard" would proceed—subject to Congressional approval and an annual review. The Safeguard system consists of perimeter acquisition radars (PARS) missile site radars (MSR's) and two anti-missile weapons—Spartan and Sprint.

The Spartan missile has a range of several hundred miles. Its effectiveness depends on the detonation of a very large nuclear warhead in the near-vacuum of outer space. It is expected that most decoys accompanying the ICBM enemy warhead would be cleared out of a large volume by the explosion of the Spartan. The explosion of the Sprint missile complements the Spartan by intercepting at low altitudes those missiles not destroyed by Spartan. Sprint has a much shorter range than Spartan—about 25 miles. Since it is designed to be used at low altitude, the Sprint has a very much smaller warhead yield than the Spartan.

The plan for the Safeguard ABM system is in phased steps. The first step is planned to be operational in 1974 and involves sites which are near Great Falls, Montana and Grand Forks, North Dakota. They are intended for the protection of ICBM and bomber bases in those areas. Subsequent options could be (a) to extend the defence of the deterrent forces against ICBM attacks, (b) to provide defence against submarine launched missiles (SLBM's) and (c) to provide light area protection for all of the United States including the population.

The totality of these options, labelled "full deployment" include twelve sites in the continental United States. If full deployment is carried out, the estimated cost is 7.8 billion dollars.

The Strategic Concept of Mutual Deterrence

The greatest military danger to Canada is a nuclear war between the USSR and the United States in which Canada would be involved because of its geographical position and because of its relations with the United States. Due to the inability of the United Nations to guarantee peace through collective security as originally contemplated when the United Nations charter was signed, the avoidance of all-out nuclear war between the superpowers has depended upon mutual deterrence. This principle may be most simply explained as follows: In order for the USSR to be deterred from aggression by the United States, it is necessary that the USSR must believe that, no matter what the USSR does, the United States will retain the means and the will to be able to destroy the cities of the USSR. In other words, the United States must maintain a capability for "assured destruction" of the USSR. Assured destruction has been defined as the ability to inflict at all times and under all foreseeable conditions an unacceptable degree of damage upon any single aggressor, or combination of aggressors, even after absorbing a surprise attack.

At the present time, it is believed that both the USSR and the U.S. do possess this capability for assured destruction of the other and it is therefore said that there is a stable system of mutual deterrence. Basically, this means that if the USSR, for example, were to launch an all-out nuclear attack or first strike against the U.S., the United States would still have and be able to use sufficient nuclear weapons, whether intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM's) submarine launched ballistic missiles (SLBM's) and Strategic Air Command (SAC) bombers, to destroy the cities of the USSR and inflict unacceptable damage upon that country.

This system of mutual deterrence would become unstable and dangerous if one side developed such an overwhelming strength in nuclear weapons that by a surprise attack it could destroy the other side's capability of launching a counter-strike which would inflict unacceptable damage upon the aggressor or if one side developed such effective means of defence, (whether active defences such as ABM and anti-bomber defences or a passive defence such as civil defence) that it could launch a nuclear attack without fear of having unacceptable damage imposed by the other side. The condition becomes even more unstable and dangerous if one side developed such improved offensive and defensive capability while the other side's offensive and defensive capabilities remained the same.

The more advanced techniques of both offense and defence are very complex and it takes several years to develop and put them into operational status. Even though the balance is stable and robust rather than delicate at the moment, it is natural for each superpower to look several years ahead and to ensure that it will not find itself with its "assured destruction" of its opponent gone as a result of substantial changes. It is difficult for each adversary to assess far in advance what the effectiveness of the opponents' moves is going to be—consequently, there is a natural tendency for each side to take steps now to prepare for the worst that his opponent might have ready for him a few years hence. It is easy to see how the arms race can accelerate under these circumstances. It seems probable that both superpowers will seek to react in such a way as to maintain stability so long as each has the economic ability to bear the ever-increasing military expenditures. The unfortunate situation into which they may be drawn is that each spends a great deal of time and money reacting to the other, with the only result being that a new stable balance is struck.

PART II—ARGUMENTS

In Part II of this report, your Committee has considered what it regards as the principal questions relating to North American Air Defence. The report takes up these questions in sequence and sets out the important arguments presented before the Committee on all sides. Where appropriate the Committee has drawn conclusions from the evidence presented, although the Committee has recorded its specific recommendations in Part III.

Does North American Security Require Anti-Bomber Defence?

It is within the strategic context of mutual deterrence that the question of anti-bomber defence must be considered. The original purpose of anti-bomber defence was the protection of North America and the Strategic Air Command airborne retaliatory force. The development, improvement and proliferation of intercontinental ballistic missiles on the part of both superpowers since the 1960's has transformed the strategic role of the bomber. For it is not possible—at least at the present time—to intercept and destroy enough attacking missiles to prevent the large scale destruction of population and industrial capacity. Nor, given the number, protection and dispersal of ICBM's on both sides, is it possible for either superpower to destroy the effective retaliatory power of its opponent through a pre-emptive strike. As a result the balance of deterrence now rests upon the mutual invulnerability of ICBM response. Bomber attack is no longer the primary threat to the safety of either superpower.

Such considerations lead some commentators to argue that bomber attack—and thus bomber defence—have become obsolete. They argue that any bomber attack would trigger a retaliatory response by the defender. Knowing this an attacker would launch its ICBM's immediately should it decide on a nuclear attack—and not wait until its bomber forces had made a strike. This would undoubtedly call into play the defender's deterrent. Thus, on this argument, the bombers would arrive after the ICBM exchange had taken place, and it is extremely unlikely that either the bomber defences—or the bombers' targets—would still exist by the time the bombers arrived. The bomber threat is, therefore, redundant, and expenditure on bomber defence is wasted since it counters a non-effective threat.

Supporters of anti-bomber defence argue that bomber attack will only be ineffective if adequate systems of detection and interception are maintained. To dismantle anti-bomber defences—or to fail to develop adequate defences against the new capacity for low level bomber attack coupled with air to ground missiles—would revive the possibility that a bomber attack could arrive sufficiently close to its target to launch an effective air strike against the United States deterrent. Anti-bomber defence must therefore be maintained, otherwise an inexpensive and effective bomber threat would be operative. Moreover, if an effective anti-ballistic missile system were developed, bomber attack would again become the primary threat against North American security.

The maintenance of anti-bomber defence thus ensures that the bomber is no longer credible as a primary first strike weapon. Its effect is to convert bomber attack into a retaliatory, second strike force or a supplement to a first strike.

It is further argued that expenditures beyond the level necessary to transform the bomber threat to a second strike force, will either produce marginal improvement in interception which will not diminish the second strike capacity of the bomber attack or—much more dangerous—improve bomber interception to the point where the credibility of the Soviet second strike force would be brought into question.

Such expenditure would thus either be wasteful or dangerous since—as explained above—the existence of a credible second strike force in the hands of both the United States and the Soviet Union is essential to the balance of mutual deterrence.

In addition to the foregoing arguments, it is stated that the manned bomber continues to be the cheapest means for delivery of nuclear weapons. The bomber is generally more accurate than a missile, can carry a larger payload and is more flexible. The recent increase in Soviet training flights to the borders of North America may suggest a renewed interest in this means of attack, or on the other hand, the purpose of this increase may be only to collect information on North American defences or encourage North America to increase its expenditure on an expensive anti-bomber defence system.

It is further argued that without an anti-bomber defence, North America would have no capacity to exercise a policing function or to detect and intercept hostile aircraft. In the event of a bomber attack retention of anti-bomber defences gives North American defenders more flexibility and avoids the necessity of a split-second or automatic response. Moreover, North American bomber defences serve to “put up the price of admission” by forcing a would-be attacker to either concentrate all his weapons against fewer targets or to produce more sophisticated delivery systems in an attempt to circumvent the defence. For these reasons a defence against bombers will be needed as long as bombers represent either an existing or potential threat to second-strike forces.

The Committee accepts, in principle, the argument that North America must maintain sufficient anti-bomber defence to present bombers being used primarily as a first strike weapon but considers that expenditures on anti-bomber defence beyond that level would not be desirable.

Should Canada Contribute to North American Anti-Bomber Defences?

Having recognized the necessity for North American anti-bomber defence, the Committee considered whether or not Canada should participate.

The Committee has been informed that the avoidance of a nuclear war between the USSR and the United States depends basically upon a nuclear stalemate or balance between the USSR and the United States and that if this balance is disturbed on either side the maintenance of peace will be seriously endangered. Evidence presented to the Committee indicated that the United States has at least as much nuclear weapon capability as the USSR. It has therefore been argued that Canada should not throw its weight into the scale on behalf of the United States because this would be destabilizing.

It is further argued that in any war between the USSR and the United States, the primary targets would be in the United States rather than in Canada. Moreover, there may be disadvantages to Canada in intercepting and destroying bombers destined for targets in the United States particularly now that the USSR has developed bombers carrying air-to-surface missiles. If intercepted over Canadian territory, Soviet bombers might discharge their missiles, which can travel for several hundred miles and destroy Canadian cities rather than their original United States objectives.

It is also argued that the United States must in any event maintain anti-bomber defences and this raises the question of whether Canada with its limited resources, should pay substantial sums for a programme which may involve serious losses to Canada and its citizens, and has as its primary function the protection of the deterrent of another country.

It is suggested that Canadian participation in North American anti-bomber defence involves serious danger to its national independence. The responsibility for defence of any country's territory and air space is an important attribute of that country's independence.

On the other hand it is argued that, while the United States would obviously be the primary target of any potential nuclear attack on the continent, Canada might be subjected to bomber attack in the event of conflict if the United States had a bomber defence and Canada did not have one. This would result from the fact that any attacker of the United States would regard North America as a single target and use the cheapest available means to conduct its attack.

It is also asserted that even without United States co-operation, Canada would still need to be in a position to deny its air space to foreign bombers intended to attack targets in the United States and not in Canada. Moreover, Canada would require a force of interceptors to inspect and identify unknown aircraft entering its air space without permission. Canada therefore should maintain an air defence system in any event. If this system were completely independent and unco-ordinated with that of the United States, it would either have to be much less sophisticated and effective than the present system, or alternatively much more expensive than the present system and probably too expensive for Canada to bear out of its own resources.

The Committee accepts the principle that Canada must maintain an air defence system and should co-operate closely with the United States on a continental basis subject to the conditions set out in the concluding part of this report.

What Should Be The Relationship Between The Canadian And The U.S. Anti-Bomber Defences?

The NORAD agreement describes the relationship between the Canadian and the United States air defences as an integrated command, under a supreme commander who, in practice, is an American officer, with a deputy commander who is a Canadian. The present NORAD regions and divisions are such that, with the exception of Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, most of the populated area of Canada is defended by American interceptors and by American crews under the command of American regional and divisional officers.

It is asserted that the present integrated command arrangements are best calculated to protect Canadian independence in a situation in which Canada is contributing less than 10% of the men, equipment and costs. Other possible arrangements open to Canada within a framework of co-operation would be

- (a) to provide all the forces necessary to defend Canadian territory, which would be excessively expensive to Canada or require a large American financial contribution; or
- (b) not to make a Canadian contribution and to give United States forces the right to operate in Canada as required, which would be a virtual abdication of sovereignty.

Given the relatively small Canadian contribution, exponents of this view argue that Canada has been able to negotiate with the United States a command arrangement which has secured at least a fair share of the command posts for Canadians. They further point out that all active Canadian units, other than the squadron in Comox, operate in NORAD divisions commanded by Canadians; in contrast several United States squadrons both of aircraft and of BOMARC missiles are placed under Canadian operational control. These same persons admit that Canada is not contributing to the active defence (i.e. Canada only contributes radars) of a large portion of Canada from Manitoba to Alberta. However, they argue that it is preferable that the limited Canadian forces should be concentrated in the most heavily populated regions of the country and where the populated areas extend further north of the border. By not dispersing the aircraft throughout the country, Canada is able to achieve the greatest operational control which is feasible given the size of the Canadian contribution. These exponents note that the capacity of the enlarged computers in North Bay will be completely absorbed in monitoring the Northern region which will be extended (effective September 15, 1969) and therefore that a further extension is technically impossible; and that even if the technical problem were overcome by enlarging the computers, a further extension of the region would distort the command arrangements and degrade the effectiveness of the overall system.

Finally, they stress that the divisions commanded by Americans which are responsible for the air defence of Canadian territory have Canadian deputy-commanders and have been chosen because the inhabited regions are sufficiently far south that United States defence forces can carry out their assignment without being based in Canada. In sum the Canadian exponents of this view, while maintaining that the air defence of the continent has to be considered as a single system, insist that the command arrangements have been carefully devised in order to protect Canadian sovereignty and that the terms of the agreement represent a considerable achievement for the negotiators on the Canadian side.

From a military point of view the Committee recognizes that the present arrangements are the most convenient and efficient method of co-operation between two anti-bomber defences.

However, in any partnership or co-operative arrangement between Canada and the United States, the Committee feels that Canada, as a very much smaller partner, must be particularly careful not to prejudice its independence unnecessarily within arrangements which, closely examined, might turn out to be not so much of a co-operative as a "take-over" relationship. Canada must be especially careful to examine very closely any joint arrangements suggested by the United States which involve such highly sophisticated or costly facilities that their command and control can only be exercised conveniently or efficiently by a country as large and powerful as the United States, and not by a country with limited capacity such as Canada.

The Committee believes that wherever technically and economically feasible, surveillance, detection and interception facilities over Canadian territory should be under Canadian operational command. In other words, the Canadian contribution to continental air defence should, in principle, constitute a Canadian component within a framework of co-operation rather than a dispersed contribution within a basically United States structure of command.

Are Present Cost Sharing Arrangements Fair?

The Committee found it difficult to determine whether consistent principles have been followed in allocating total NORAD costs between Canada and the United States up to the present time. Cost allocation for each facility and programme appears to have been determined on an ad hoc basis. Canada's overall share of NORAD operating costs is between 8% to 10% at the present time. The Committee does not have specific information with regard to the percentage of capital costs.

The use of Canadian territory and the interception of bombers over Canada confer an advantage to the United States. The destruction of bombers over Canada however, would pose risks of loss from discharge of missiles upon Canadians. All expenditures for anti-bomber defence over Canadian territory benefit the United States while expenditures made by the United States to protect cities and targets south of the Canadian border do not in all circumstances confer additional protection upon Canadians.

The Committee believes that these considerations are relevant to establishing fair cost sharing arrangements.

The Committee also emphasizes the importance of establishing the principle that a clear distinction must be made between operational responsibilities and cost responsibilities. Because of its geographical position, Canada may have very extensive operational responsibilities which for sound political reasons should be carried out by Canadian forces under Canadian command. It does not follow, however, that in a co-operative arrangement for continental air defence, the entire costs involved in carrying out such responsibilities should be borne by Canada.

Should Canada Participate In The Proposed New System Of Anti-Bomber Defence?

The Committee has been told that the development on the part of the Soviet Union of a capacity for low level bomber flights coupled with air to ground missiles has seriously diminished the capability of the NORAD anti-bomber defence. Low flying bombers can under certain conditions approach to within two hundred miles of ground radar installations before detection—a range which enables them to release airborne missiles on important targets.

To meet this threat it is suggested that an airborne warning and control system be implemented—coupled if technological developments permit, with the use of over-the-horizon radar. The advantages of the airborne system are a great extension of the effective detection range of the radar and the placing of the detection and control centres on a mobile—and therefore less vulnerable—basis.

This system might well require United States command installations and personnel on or over Canadian territory. Such an airborne system—if it is established—would become operative in the mid 1970's, probably 1974. It would involve large new capital costs. Some witnesses claim that the annual operational costs of the system would be less than at the present time.

Should the United States decide to proceed with this system in the 1970's, and should the Canadian government decide to co-operate, the Committee believes that the operational responsibilities in Canadian territory and over Canadian air space should be under Canadian command.

Should Consultation With The United States Political Authorities Form A Regular Part Of The NORAD Process?

Under an exchange of notes in 1958 a Canada-United States Ministerial Committee on Joint Defence was established. The exchange of notes concluded:

"that the importance and complexity of (the new) interdependent defence relationships made it essential to supplement existing channels for consultation and to provide for a periodic review at the Ministerial level of problems which might be expected to arise."

However, this Ministerial Committee has only held 4 meetings, the last of which occurred in 1964.

It is argued that the Committee ceased to meet because relations between the foreign and defence ministers of Canada and the United States are already so intimate, and contact so frequent and easy that formal meetings are redundant. Among the occasions on which the Ministers involved meet regularly are the NATO Ministerial meetings, which provide regular semi-annual occasions for both group meetings at which international, political and security problems can be discussed, and informal contacts at which bilateral questions can be taken up. In this view formal machinery for Canada-United States political and security consultations serves no useful purpose.

Advocates of the contrary position base their case on actual experience during the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. They note that in spite of the close relations between the responsible ministers of the two countries, the Canadian government was only informed of United States decisions by a diplomatic emissary at the same time as the other NATO countries. The advocates of this view argue that advance notice would have been given had it earlier been made clear to the United States Government that the activation of NORAD in circumstances other than a direct attack on North America would normally require prior consultation through the Joint Defence Committee. They also suggest that NORAD as presently constituted compares unfavourably with NATO in that it has no political forum for the joint consideration of international, political and security problems. The Ministerial Committee would be a suitable forum for the discussion of important questions of mutual concern such as the ABM System.

Should Canada Participate in the Proposed ABM System?

It is argued that the ABM system is a defensive system, that Russia has installed a similar system around Moscow and that such a system is essential to protect the American deterrent and the security of North America.

It is further argued that from a strategic point of view anti-bomber and anti-missile defence are part of a single problem and therefore the ABM System should be under NORAD. To determine whether North America is being threatened and should alter its state of alert, many types of information are wanted and should be assessed as a whole rather than piecemeal.

Strategic decisions and operations are most effectively handled as a single aerospace activity. If Safeguard or some other ABM system is deployed in North America, arrangements will have to be made for its operational control. Also, the information necessary to assess the overall strategic situation and make the major strategic decisions regarding aerospace defence must be provided. The necessary type of information is very much the same as that already collected by NORAD today; although five years hence there would probably be additional sources from new systems of missile detection and space surveillance. For this reason it might be argued that it would be desirable for any new ABM system to be under NORAD command. On the other hand, it is argued, that the detailed command and control of an ABM system are likely to be different in character from those for air defence units. ICBM's will approach speeds above 250 miles a minute as compared with aircraft unlikely to be moving faster than 10 miles a minute.

It is also argued that the cost of an ABM system may be greater than anticipated and its effectiveness somewhat doubtful in view of possible improvements in ICBM's. Although it is technically possible for a defensive missile to intercept and destroy an ICBM, it does not necessarily follow that the ABM system is an effective and advisable system to construct. With the use of penetration aids, (such as decoys, multiple warheads or jamming) or indirect trajectories (depressed, extended range, fractional or multiple or orbital) the offence may be able to overcome the defence. Although it may be technically possible for the defence to defeat the measures mentioned above, the cost of such counter-measures may be much greater than that required for offensive measures.

In addition, it is argued that the development of a "thin" ABM system is unlikely to serve its purpose while the development of a "thick" or effective ABM system might affect the present system of mutual deterrence and might set off a new arms race.

PART III—CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Your Committee has reached the following conclusions and recommendations. These are based on the facts reported in Part I and on an examination of the conflicting arguments which are set out and assessed in the relevant sections of Part II above.

(1) The nature of the bomber threat has changed greatly and its relative importance has diminished in recent years owing largely to the development of ballistic missiles and the increase in their number.

However, since the major powers continue to maintain long-range bomber capabilities, the continuation of a system of air defence involving surveillance, detection and interception is an important component of North American security.

(2) The Committee notes that under existing NORAD arrangements, the air defence of Canada's most populated areas is carried out by United States aircraft, manned by United States crews under United States commanders and directed from regional and divisional combat and directional centres located in the United States.

The Committee also notes that under existing arrangements Canada has only limited capability to carry out, with its own forces, routine policing (as distinct from defence against enemy attack) and surveillance of its air space.

The Committee recommends that Canada should remain in NORAD and does not recommend fundamental changes in the existing arrangements due to the great expense which would be involved at this time (for regional and divisional combat and directional centres and additional interceptor squadrons) in making such changes and particularly in view of the decline in the relative importance of the threat from enemy bombers.

However, in the re-organization of NORAD regions and divisions which will become effective September 15, 1969, the Committee recommends that the principle be accepted that there should be Canadian commanders in those areas where essentially all the territory is Canadian. The possibility of extending, at reasonable cost, the Northern Region (which is under Canadian command) to include the heavily populated and industrialized area of Southern Ontario should also be considered carefully.

The Committee also recommends that any future co-operative arrangements with the United States should take into account military convenience and efficiency and also Canada's status as an independent nation and the principle that, to the largest extent feasible and consistent with Canada's security, the defence (including routine policing and surveillance) of Canada's territory and air space should be performed by Canadian forces under Canadian command.

(3) The Committee has learned that at present a system for controlling Canadian civilian air traffic by the use of computers exists only over the Eastern approaches of the country. It is expected that there will be a rapidly growing requirement for such a system.

Consideration should be given to the feasibility of a common computer system for both military and civilian air control activities to minimize the costs of its introduction.

(4) Since their function is defensive, the Committee does not object to the use of nuclear weapons by Canadian interceptors or Bomarc squadrons; or to the "two-key" system of control.

(5) The Committee is concerned about the vulnerability to enemy missile attacks of the two Bomarc squadrons, the likelihood of their attracting enemy fire and the possibility that bombers intercepted by them might discharge their missiles, including their air-to-surface missiles, on Canadian cities or populated areas.

On the other hand, the Bomarc squadrons do give some additional depth to Canada's air defence and the relative cost of continuing them is not great. Accordingly, the Committee recommends that the Bomarc squadrons should not be discontinued at the present time.

The Committee notes that the Bomarc squadrons will probably become obsolete if a decision is made to establish the proposed new system of air defence referred to in recommendation (6).

(6) The Committee believes that the new air defence system now being considered by the United States which involves the Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS), Over-the-Horizon Radar and improved interceptor aircraft would overcome some of the weaknesses of the present air defence system.

However, bearing in mind the fact that this new system is still under investigation in the United States, the uncertainty with regard to costs and the possibility of increased costs and the decline in the relative importance of the bomber threat, the Committee believes it is not desirable to make a decision at this time regarding Canada's participation in the new system. If eventually a decision is made to participate, this should be done only upon the basis of the principles outlined in recommendation (2) above.

(7) The Committee recommends that the Government should undertake promptly a review of NORAD costs, bearing in mind the principles referred to in Part II above.

(8) The detection of ICBM's does not at the present time involve important installations on Canadian territory or military operations over Canadian territory. The Committee does not recommend any changes at this time.

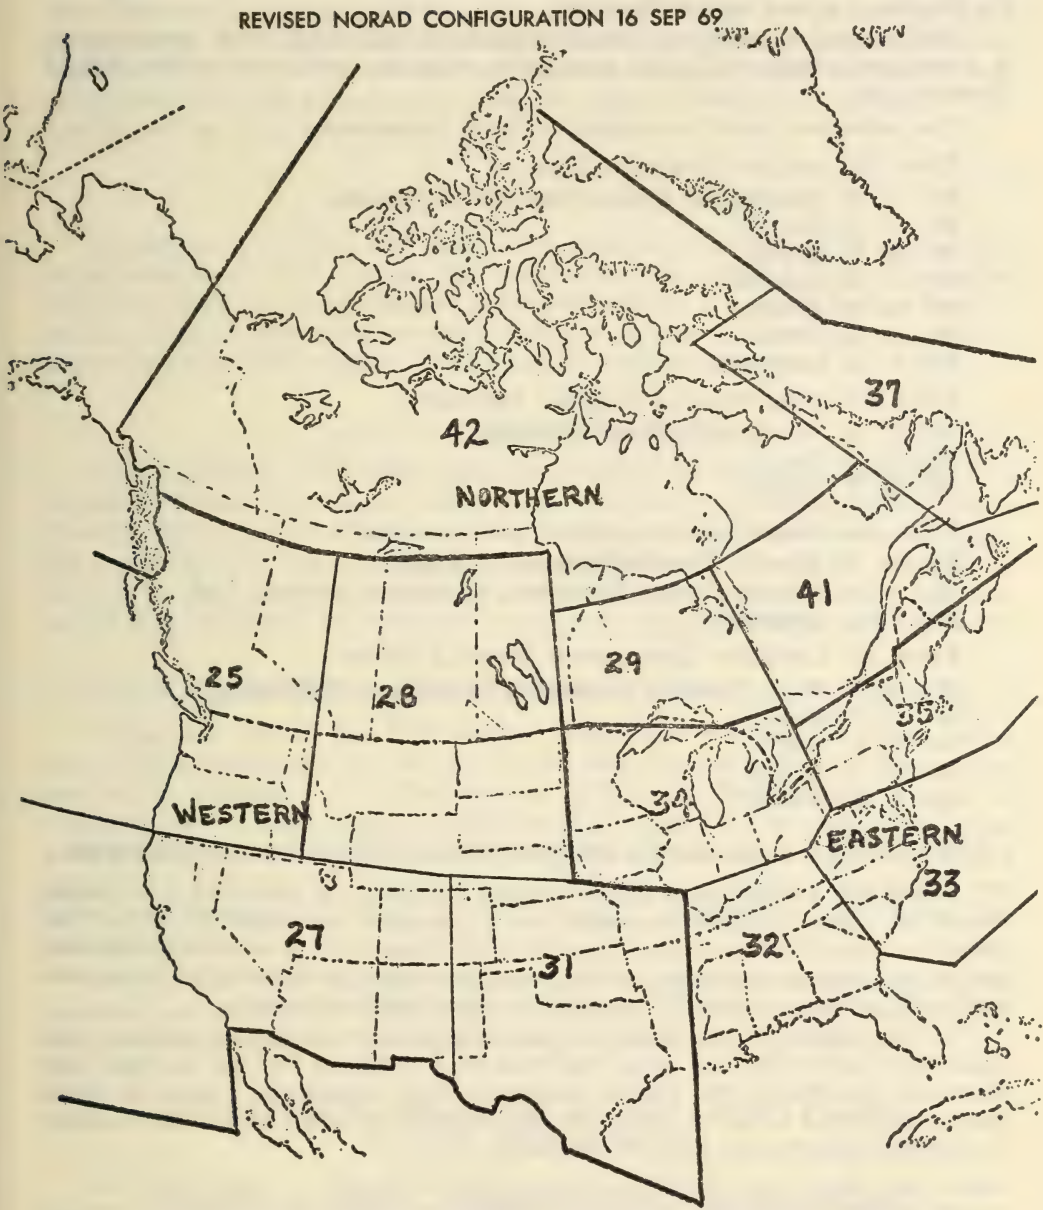

(9) The Committee has received conflicting evidence on the desirability of establishing an ABM System for the protection of the United States nuclear deterrent or United States cities against nuclear attacks. In view of the uncertainty of Congressional approval for the ABM System and the uncertainty of the extent to which Canada might be asked to participate, if at all, the Committee is unable to make any recommendations concerning Canadian involvement in such a System.

However, the Committee notes that the evidence presented to it indicates that these installations, as now planned, will not increase the danger to Canada.

(10) The Committee notes that the Canada-United States Committee on Joint Defence has not met since 1964. The Committee believes that the present practice for political consultation within NORAD has proved to be inadequate in the one serious test to which it was put. The Committee urges that the Canada-United States Committee on Joint Defence should be re-activated.

A copy of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence relating to this aspect of the Order of Reference dated January 16, 1969 (Issues Nos. 41, 42, 43, 46, 47, 48, 49) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 112 to the Journals).

Mr. Hales, from the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, presented the Fifth Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

STATEMENTS REQUESTED BY THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

Paragraph 144 of the Auditor General's Report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1966, includes comment on a previous recommendation by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts that "losses due to accidental destruction of, or damage to, assets which would normally be covered by insurance had such coverage existed", be listed in the Public Accounts.

In the course of its study of the Development of the hydrofoil, your Committee noted that the losses incurred as a result of the fire on that ship were not included in the Public Accounts. Your Committee wishes to stress that there should be no exception to the inclusion of losses under this heading if the total information is to be of value.

EXCESSIVE ADVANCE PAYMENTS UNDER CONTRACTS

In considering the circumstances surrounding the payment in advance of $6.7 million, the full amount of a contract for the re-engining of Cosmo-politan aircraft, your Committee noted that this payment had been forwarded to the United States Government in March 1966 and 90-day United States treasury notes purchased on behalf of Canada although, as the contract was entered into only on March 21, there could be no work performed, goods received or services rendered in the fiscal year 1965-66. Your Committee can only conclude that the purpose of writing into the contract a requirement that full payment be made in advance was to enable the amount to be paid from 1965-66 appropriations in order to avoid the lapsing of this amount. Your Committee does not approve of the circumventing of the lapsing provision of section 35 of the Financial Administration Act in this way and recommends that the Treasury Board instruct departments not to contract themselves into obligations to make advance payments in order to avoid the lapsing of any portion of an appropriation.

THE COUNTER-MORTAR RADAR

Paragraph 103 of the 1967 Report concerns the manufacture of a prototype vehicle-mounted radar system for locating enemy mortars. Your Committee recommends that a more vigorous sales campaign be conducted by the Department of Supply and Services when it has a saleable commodity such as the counter-mortar radar which has no equal throughout the world.

NAVAL ARCHITECTS' FEES

Paragraph 105 of the 1967 Report concerns naval architects' fees. Evidence received by your Committee points to the fact that an increase in the fees is directly attributable to a breakdown in the channels of communication between the Department of National Defence and the architects. The poor communications is of the type that should not be tolerated and your Committee recommends that, in future, the Department make its requirements known explicitly.

PURCHASE OF BUSES WHICH PROVED TO BE UNSATISFACTORY

Paragraph 106 of the 1967 Report covers the purchase of buses which proved to be unsatisfactory. In view of the fact that the particular type of bus was a first purchase for the Department of National Defence, the Committee was surprised to learn from the Quality Assurance Division that these buses were bought sight unseen and recommends that more care be taken in checking vehicles. A long list of defects required subsequent repairs. This would not have been necessary if adequate and thorough inspection of the buses had been made.

During the study of this item, evidence was given to the existence of separate specifications for the RCAF and Army. Your Committee recommends that one set of specifications apply to all armed services in Canada.

ASSISTANCE TO PROVINCES BY THE ARMED FORCES IN CIVIL EMERGENCIES

In Appendix 1 to the Auditor General's Report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967, are listed the recommendations and observations by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts not yet implemented or dealt with by Executive Action. One item concerns assistance to provinces by the armed forces in civil emergencies (floods, forest fires, etc.). While your Committee considers that the federal government should continue to assist the provinces in civil emergencies, it is of the opinion that proper accounts should be kept, outstanding accounts should be settled in view of the agreements to pay, or agreement must be reached on cost-sharing. Your Committee considers that this item should be included on the agenda of a future Federal-Provincial Conference for clarification. The Auditor General has been requested by your Committee to keep it informed on further developments in this matter.

WAR VETERANS ALLOWANCES

With reference to paragraph 24 of Appendix 1 of the 1967 Report, your Committee was concerned that its previous recommendation that cases of fraud with respect to War Veterans Allowances "be vigorously prosecuted" could be interpreted by some that the Committee's sole interest is in the recovery of the money. Your Committee is aware that there may be mitigating circumstances and therefore recommends that the word "vigorously" be deleted.

PROPOSED REMOVAL ALLOWANCE

Paragraph 47 of Appendix 1 to the 1967 Report contains a previous recommendation of the Committee concerning the proposed removal allowance for members of the Armed Forces equivalent to 90% of the estimated cost of moving their furniture. The Deputy Minister of National Defence advised that disadvantages in such a scheme are such as to make it unwise to establish a cash allowance. Your Committee is still of the opinion that serious consideration should be given to such a plan, particularly in view of the large number of service personnel who will be transferred to Canada as a result of the reduction in NATO forces. Your Committee has requested the Deputy Minister of National Defence to review this subject and report.

GENERAL

On a number of occasions, your Committee in questioning the witnesses came to the conclusion that the Deputy Ministers should act more expeditiously in providing replies to the Auditor General's draft comments which he proposes for inclusion in his report. Thus, where there is disagreement, the parties concerned should make every effort to resolve differences of opinion prior to publication.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT PRINTING BUREAU

Following your Committee's decision to make periodical visits to various departments each session, a visit was made to the Canadian Government Printing Bureau. Such visits are planned to give the members a first hand opportunity to see the operations of a department. Since there is usually a representative of the Auditor General in the department, items in the Auditor General's Reports may be studied on the spot and checks made of inventory controls.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 1, 2, 11, 12, 13, 19, 25 to 30 inclusive, 39 to 41 inclusive and 45) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 113 to the Journals).

Mr. Givens for Mr. Duquet, from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills and Standing Orders, presented the Fourth Report of the said Committee, which was read as follows:

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of June 23, 1969, your Committee has considered the petition for a Private Bill of Boy Scouts of Canada—Scouts du Canada, filed after the time specified in Standing Order 90, together with the Report of the Clerk of Petitions thereon tabled on June 23, 1969.

The Counsel for the petitioner stated that the delay beyond the time specified by Standing Order 90 was occasioned by the fact that an agreement between the two parties was not reached before late in 1968 and it was only in March, 1969 that the petition mentioned above was finally filed.

The Parliamentary Agent declared that it is essential that the proposed legislation be allowed to proceed during the present Session of Parliament. He therefore respectfully asked that the petition be received.

Having considered the petition for a Private Bill, your Committee recommends that Standing Orders 90 and 91(3)(a) and (c) be suspended in relation thereto, and that the petition be received. This will result in the waiving of all charges because the petitioner is a benevolent organization.

The petition referred to above, together with the report of the Clerk of Petitions related thereto, is returned herewith.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issue No. 4) is appended.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 114 to the Journals).

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Givens for Mr. Duquet, seconded by Mr. Guay (St. Boniface),—the said Report was concurred in.

(English and French).

The Order being read for the consideration of Bill C-202, An Act to provide incentives for the development of productive employment opportunities in regions of Canada determined to require special measures to facilitate economic expansion and social adjustment, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Regional Development.

75B. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that a majority of the representatives of the several parties, including that of the Government, have come to an agreement in respect of a proposed allotment of days or hours for the proceedings at any stage of the passing of a public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of the said proposed allocation; provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages of a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). OF THE

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1969.

PRAYERS.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: A point of order was raised yesterday by the honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) in respect of a Notice of Motion in the name of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) dealing with proposed amendments to the Standing Orders of the House. Other honourable Members, including the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), the honourable Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) and the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken) supported the contention that the Minister's motion should not be accepted by the Chair for purposes of transfer to Government Orders pursuant to Standing Order 21. The honourable President of the Privy Council argued in support of the government's position. At the conclusion of the procedural debate I undertook to study the arguments advanced in the course of the discussion and to make an early ruling.

Stated briefly, the problem is whether the government can set down a Motion that follows substantially the terms of a committee report presented to the House but the concurrence of which has not yet been moved by the committee chairman. I must remind honourable Members that the Speaker can only rule on points of order and questions of procedure. The decision to be made at this time is whether it is procedurally in order to transfer the Minister's Motion for debate. During the discussion yesterday serious questions of principle were raised by honourable Members who questioned the propriety of a government motion which, if proceeded with, might in effect block the discussion of a motion to concur in the report of a standing committee.

It has been suggested that the government's motion as it now stands is in contempt of the House; and that the Chair, on its own initiative, should determine that the House will consider the proposed rules changes within the framework of the committee report rather than under the heading of the proposed motion. I am not convinced that the question can be considered by the Chair in those terms.

Generally speaking, honourable Members who have taken part in the procedural argument in opposition to the government, have based their objections on the rule of anticipation. It is of interest to note that while the British practice in reference to this rule is sufficiently clear, the same cannot be said about Canadian precedents where attempts have been made to apply the rule to our own Canadian practice. The difficulty stems from the fact that the British Commons' Standing Orders include a specific rule on this subject. Standing Order 11 of the British House of Commons is as follows: "In determining whether a discussion is out of order on the ground of anticipation, regard shall be had by Mr. Speaker to the probability of the matter anticipated being brought before the house within a reasonable time."

In our own House, we have attempted over the years to develop a practice which has no support in our own Standing Order and where British precedents are not always relevant. If honourable Members will study May's definition of the rule, they will see that the rule relates to discussion or debate of a matter already set down, and not to the setting down itself of an item of business on the Order Paper.

Campion's third edition, at page 180, indicates that the anticipation rule applies to the discussion by anticipation of an order already set down by the House. But, there is nothing in our rules and no precedent in Canadian parliamentary practice to prevent the setting down of more than one bill or motion dealing with the same subject. No precedents have been quoted by honourable Members who took part in yesterday's procedural debate that could support the contention that the Minister's motion cannot appear on the Order Paper along with a Notice of Motion to be moved in similar terms by a committee chairman.

What we are concerned with at the moment is whether the Minister's Notice of Motion can be transferred for debate under Government Orders. Standing Order 21 is perfectly clear on this point. The rule is as follows: "When any other government notice of motion is called from the Chair, it shall be deemed to have been forthwith transferred to and ordered for consideration under government orders in the same or at the next sitting of the House."

Once the motion has been transferred for debate under Government Orders it becomes the government's decision and the government's responsibility to decide whether it will proceed with its motion. It is at that point that the anticipation rule might become operative in the sense that the Minister's Motion, if proceeded with, might block consideration of the committee report.

The honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) has been at liberty for several days to proceed with his motion. Indeed, he could move it later this day if he wishes to do so.

On the other hand, that notice of motion cannot be used to "block" consideration of the government's notice of motion. It is suggested that the question of priority should not be confused with the rule of anticipation.

At this time the notice of motion in the name of the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton has priority because of its present position on the Order Paper. If the honourable Member has not moved his motion when it is called later today, the Chair will have no alternative, at the appropriate moment in our proceedings, but to order that the notice of motion standing in the name of the Honourable President of the Privy Council, be transferred for debate pursuant to Standing Order 21.

Mr. Sharp, a Member of the Queen's Privy Council, laid before the House,—Copies of Diplomatic Instruments, as follows:

(1) Exchange of Notes between the Government of Canada and the Government of the Confederation of Switzerland renewing for a period of three years the Agreement of March 6, 1958 to provide for co-operation in the peaceful uses of Atomic Energy. That the Standing Orders of the House be amended by adding the following new Standing Orders immediately after Standing Order 75:

75A. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that there is agreement among the representatives of all parties to allot a specified number of days or hours to the proceedings at one or more stages of any public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of such agreed allocation; and every such motion shall be decided forthwith, without debate or amendment.

75B. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that a majority of the representatives of the several parties, including that of the Government, have come to an agreement in respect of a proposed allotment of days or hours for the proceedings at any stage of the passing of a public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of the said proposed allocation; provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages of a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

75c. A Minister of the Crown who from his place in the House at a previous sitting has stated that an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of Standing Order 75A or 75B in respect of proceedings at the stage at which a public bill was then under consideration either in the House or in any committee and has given notice at that sitting of his intention so to do may propose a motion for the purpose of allotting a specified number of days or hours for the consideration and disposal of proceedings at that stage; provided that the time allotted for any stage is not to be less than one sitting day and provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages on a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.—The President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Forest, Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, presented,—Returns to the foregoing Orders.

The House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Trudeau, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale),—That Bill C-120, An Act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, be now read a third time and do pass.

And debate continuing;

Mr. McIntosh, seconded by Mr. Gundlock, moved in amendment thereto,—That the said bill be not now read a third time but that the Government of Canada take such steps as may be necessary to have the Supreme Court of Canada provide a decision with respect to the constitutionality of the provisions of the said Bill.

And a point of Order having been raised by the Honourable Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) as to the regularity of the said proposed amendment;

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: Essentially the argument advanced by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) is based on citations in May's 17th edition, which of course have to be taken very seriously, and I think that the Minister of Justice was quite right in bringing this particular difficulty to the attention of the Chair. The argument of the Minister is that this kind of amendment cannot be moved on third reading if it goes beyond the scope of the bill itself, or to use the words of May, as quoted at page 417: "...a reasoned amendment should not urge the rejection of the bill on the ground of what it omits."

Although this is a good citation and one which certainly ought to be kept in mind at all times, I doubt whether it applies to the amendment proposed by the honourable Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. McIntosh). It seems to me that the honourable Member is not suggesting that the bill be set aside on the basis of a proposition which the bill omits. He only proposes that certain action should be taken by the government before the bill be accepted by Parliament. In other words his amendment, to my way of thinking, is essentially a reasoned amendment. He indicates his view, in the terms of a reasoned amendment why the proposed bill should not be proceeded with further.

Now there may be a slight difficulty in connection with the wording of the amendment itself. We have accepted in recent months a series of reasoned amendments, either on second or third reading, following closely enough the wording of the amendment proposed by the honourable Member for Swift-Current-Maple Creek but which had four additional words, and this would make this amendment read as follows: "That the said bill be not now read a third time but that it be resolved that the Government of Canada take such steps . . ."

In order to facilitate future procedure I wonder if the honourable Member might be allowed to include these four words which would make this proposed amendment conform with the procedure which has been followed in the past, so that the amendment would read: "That the said bill be not now read a third time but that it be resolved that the Government of Canada take such steps as may be necessary to have the Supreme Court of Canada provide a decision with respect to the constitutionality of the provisions of the said bill."

I assume that honourable Members would have no objection to having the amendment amended in this regard so that this would be the way in which it would formally be put to the House.

I have to add that I had also considered the point of view raised by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). Certainly some of the citations which appear now, whether in May's or Beauchesne's, or in some of our other authorities, Canadian, British or other, are not entirely relevant to our rules which have been changed fundamentally. The relative importance and significance of second reading and third reading has changed materially, and in this way I would think that citations which previously might have been relevant when dealing with amendments on third reading are no longer valid. Taking all this into account I would think that the amendment moved by the honourable Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek should be accepted as a reasoned amendment and should be put to the House at the present time.

Debate was resumed on the proposed amendment of Mr. McIntosh, seconded by Mr. Gundlock, as amended, as follows: That the said Bill be not now read a third time but that it be resolved that the Government of Canada take such steps as may be necessary to have the Supreme Court of Canada provide a decision with respect to the constitutionality of the provisions of the said Bill.

After further debate, the question being put on the said proposed amendment, is was negatived on division.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Trudeau, seconded by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale),—That Bill C-120, An Act respecting the status of the official languages of Canada, be now read a third time and do pass.

After further debate, the question being put on the said motion, it was agreed to.

Accordingly, the said bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), seconded by Mr. Olson, moved,—

That the Standing Orders of the House be amended by adding the following new Standing Orders immediately after Standing Order 75:

75A. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that there is agreement among the representatives of all parties to allot a specified number of days or hours to the proceedings at one or more stages of any public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of such agreed allocation; and every such motion shall be decided forthwith, without debate or amendment.

75B. When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that a majority of the representatives of the several parties, including that of the Government, have come to an agreement in respect of a proposed allotment of days or hours for the proceedings at any stage of the passing of a public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of the said proposed allocation; provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages of a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

75C. A Minister of the Crown who from his place in the House at a previous sitting has stated that an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of Standing Order 75A or 75B in respect of proceedings at the stage at which a public bill was then under consideration either in the House or in any committee and has given notice at that sitting of his intention so to do may propose a motion for the purpose of allotting a specified number of days or hours for the consideration and disposal of proceedings at that stage; provided that the time allotted for any stage is not to be less than one sitting day and provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages on a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

A point of order was raised by the honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) to the effect that since the proposed motion was substantially the same as the recommendations contained in the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization and, as a Notice of Motion to concur in that Report had been printed on the Order Paper under the heading "Motions", the foregoing motion, if proceeded with, would block consideration of the Committee's Report.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: I have to indicate to honourable Members that, in my view, many, if not all, of the arguments which were advanced by learned Members of the opposition this evening in the course of this debate were essentially those which were presented for the consideration of the Chair when the honourable Member for Peace River initially raised his point of order. He himself recognized this this evening, though I am sure that when he heard the lengthy presentations that followed his cursory submission to the House he must have felt a little unhappy that he had not taken the opportunity to repeat for the guidance of the Chair the lengthy and very cogent arguments that he had earlier submitted on July 2.

At that time I considered at length the arguments that were advanced by the honourable Member for Peace River, by the honourable Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken). With the advice, counsel and guidance of the clerks and other advisers who assist the Chair in such difficult matters, I considered all aspects of the problem. Following this consideration I reached the decision that is recorded in Hansard for July 3.

I am afraid that the situation has not changed. We have exactly the same situation this evening as we had originally. I ruled on the former occasion that the motion that had been proposed by the President of the Privy Council for the consideration of the House should be transferred to Government Orders under the provisions of Standing Order 21. As pointed out by the honourable Member for York South (Mr. Lewis), I had said that it is at the point we are now reaching that the anticipation rule might become operative in the sense that the Minister's motion, if proceeded with, might block consideration of the committee report.

If I were asked to rule on this point at this time, I would have to say that I agree that our proceeding with the Minister's motion at this time does effectively block consideration of the motion that might have been proposed by the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair).

At the same time I might say, having taken into account the arguments advanced by members of the opposition, that if the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton had moved his motion I would have recognized that the rule of anticipation would have given his motion precedence, that I would have allowed his motion to go forward in preference to the motion that is now before the House in the name of the President of the Privy Council. I would have so ruled in view of the fact that our committees have now taken on a new significance. Under the Rules of the House and in the reports of the Standing Committee on Procedure we have given a new role to our committees. Since the honourable Member's motion refers to the report of a committee of the House of Commons, I would have recognized that the honourable Member's motion had precedence over the motion of the President of the Privy Council and, if moved, would have blocked the Minister's motion.

However, the Minister's motion is now before the House. Certainly the rules allow the Minister to make a motion at the present time. The motion having been moved, I suggest to honourable Members that it has to be considered.

Many other issues were brought before the House for the consideration of the Chair, though I am not sure they were entirely relevant. Honourable Members want me to substitute my judgment and my ruling for that of the House of Commons. If a majority of the Members of the House think that this motion should not be adopted, that it should be voted down and we should proceed later on with another motion, then it is up to them to take this course. Honourable Members should not ask the Speaker to do this on their behalf. My duty and my responsibility is to rule according to the rules that honourable Members adopt and pass, and which they expect the Speaker to respect on their behalf. I think it might be a dictatorial act on the part of the Chair to assume the responsibility that honourable Members are suggesting be placed on its shoulders, and I am not prepared to do so. As the servant of the House I must respect the rules. Therefore, I suggest to honourable Members that the motion is properly before the House at this time and must be considered.

Whether I approve of the procedure, whether I think it is in accord with the new and exalted role that we would like to assign to our committees, is another matter. I am not sure whether I am entitled to have an opinion about this; certainly if I do have one I cannot tell the House what it is.

I will humbly and with good grace accept the role which honourable Members assign to their Speaker and be the servant of the House, to rule according to the rules which they themselves have adopted, and say that this motion is properly before the House at this time.

And the question again being proposed;

A point of order was raised by the honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) to the effect that the foregoing motion, if proceeded with, would raise a question already decided in this Session.

And a debate arising on the point of order;

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At 10.01 o'clock p.m., the question "That this House do now adjourn" was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

After debate the said question was deemed to have been adopted.

JOURNALS

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, TUESDAY, JULY 8, 1969.

2.00 o'clock p.m.

PRAYERS.

Mr. Blair, seconded by Mr. Deachman, moved,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the House on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in.

The honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) raised a point of order to the effect that the proposed Standing Order 75-A was not consistent with the constitutional provision that states that questions arising in the House shall be decided by a majority of voices.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: As I am sure the honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) suspects the Chair would have to rule that the point of order he has made at the present time is not so much a point of order as a point of debate which would perhaps be valid in the course of the discussion. I would assume the honourable Member would raise the point when we reach the moment in our proceedings when the substance of the honourable Member's motion is before us.

I have had occasion in the past to indicate that it is not the responsibility of the Chair to rule on questions of law or on constitutional questions. This ruling has been made in many instances by previous Speakers. I should like, if honourable Members would allow me to do so, to quote at this time a ruling made by the Deputy Speaker on Friday October 25, 1963. It reviews some of the authorities on this point: "I have listened with much interest to the argument made by the Honourable and learned Member for Rosedale (Mr. Macdonald). I gather the essence of the argument he submits now is that the bill should not be considered, that it is out of order because it is ultra vires the Parliament of Canada. My submission at this time is that it should not be the responsibility of the Chair to rule whether a particular bill or particular piece of legislation submitted to Parliament is or is not within the competence of this House. Firstly, I should like to refer honourable Members to Standing Order 12(1) which limits and defines the duties and responsibilities of the Speaker: "Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the House without debate..."

In other words, this limits the powers and responsibilities of the Speaker to deciding on questions of order, not questions of law. This is further confirmed in citation 69(3) of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, at page 59: "Standing Order 12 being restrictive should be given the strictest literal interpretation..."

There is another citation referred to in the same ruling. I am still quoting from the same ruling of Friday October 25, 1963: "...I should like to refer at this time to citation 71(5) of Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, at page 61: "The Speaker will not give a decision upon a constitutional question nor decide a question of law, though the same may be raised on a point of order or privilege," which is what the honourable Member did at the moment he raised it as a question of order. But it shall not be the responsibility of the Chair or the Speaker to make a decision."

Lastly, I should like to refer to a more recent ruling made by Mr. Speaker Lemieux, reported in Hansard for June 4, 1925, page 3875:

I apologize to the honourable Member for Peace River for going back almost as far as he has in his argument.

"The Parliament of Canada is supreme, and if it should pass any Act which is ultra vires, the Courts would decide the validity of such Act. It is not for the Speaker to declare—although he presides over the highest Court in the land—as to whether any proposed legislation is ultra vires..."

Of course at this point we are not dealing with legislation but rather amendments to the rules of the House. But if I follow the honourable Member's argument, it still is based on a constitutional point. I would think this is an argument which might be advanced by the honourable Member or by other honourable Members in the course of the debate if they oppose the motion proposed by the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). In the circumstances I do not think the point of order raised by the honourable Member should be sustained.

And the question again being proposed;

Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Rynard, moved in amendment thereto,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

And debate arising thereon;

(Proceedings on Adjournment Motion)

At ten o'clock p.m., the question "That this House do now adjourn" was deemed to have been proposed pursuant to Standing Order 40(1);

After debate the said question was deemed to have been adopted.

Changes in Committee Membership

Notice having been filed with the Clerk of the House pursuant to Standing Order 65(4)(b), membership of Committees was amended as follows:

Whereupon the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) raised a point of order to the effect that the House having been counted and a quorum not having been found, the House must stand adjourned.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: We have a very difficult situation here. Whether there were 14, 16, 18 or 20 Members present when the count was made is not easy to say. I have taken into consideration what has been said by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and others to the effect that when the count was made originally there were only 14 Members present in the House. The fact that some Members left the House caused some difficulty for the Acting Speaker and for the Assistant Clerk; they were counting people who were coming in and people who were going out.

At the same time I feel I have to consider that there were probably not 20 Members in the House when the first count was made. When the Clerk Assistant on instructions from the Acting Speaker took the names down—he has a list which is now inscribed in the records of the House—there were more than 20, but I think that for the purposes of the Citation 60 it cannot be the number of names inscribed in the record which is decisive but the number of Members present at the time the original count was made.

It is very unfortunate, but I cannot see how I can reach any other conclusion than to apply the provisions of Citation 60 and say that when the count was originally made there were fewer than 20 Members in the House, and if that is the situation it seems to me I have no alternative but to declare the adjournment of the House and invite honourable Members to return in large numbers at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. I regret I have to reach this conclusion but I cannot see how I could expect continuing respect for the Chair without doing so.

Changes in Committee Membership

Notice having been filed with the Clerk of the House pursuant to Standing Order 65(4) (b), membership of Committees was amended as follows:

JOURNALS

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1969.

11.00 o'clock a.m.

PRAYERS.

Mr. Howard (Skeena), from his place in the House, asked leave under Standing Order 26 to move the adjournment of the House for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, and stated the subject to be:

The current discussions which the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is having with the Premiers of Provinces and with Indian people and the turbulence and fury which is arising therefrom.

And leave having been granted to the honourable Member to propose the said motion;

Mr. Speaker, pursuant to section (11) of Standing Order 26, directed that the proposed motion stand over until 3.00 o'clock p.m. this day.

The House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Blair, seconded by Mr. Deachman,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the House on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in.

And on the proposed amendment of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Rynard,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

And debate continuing;

Mr. Deachman, seconded by Mr. Pilon, proposed to move in amendment thereto.—That the amendment be amended by adding at the end thereof the following words:

and in substitution therefor to recommend to the House a proposed Standing Order by which an allocation of time motion may be proposed to the House by a Minister of the Crown in the event that no agreement could be obtained pursuant to the provisions of proposed Standing Order 75A or when the representatives of the Government and of the Official Opposition were not included in the majority of the representatives of the several parties referred to in proposed Standing Order 75B and to report back the proposed standing orders to the next sitting of the House.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: Honourable Members will realize of course that what the Chair is concerned with especially is the relevancy and scope of the sub-amendment. I am worried particularly by the description of the amendment included in the subamendment, that is the fact that the mover of the sub-amendment suggests that the subamendment is in substitution for the original amendment. I am wondering whether this in itself is not an indication that the amendment cannot be accepted on the basis of relevancy.

In the course of the procedural debate, honourable Members have mentioned the fact that we are dealing with an amendment which is limited in scope in that it suggests that Standing Order 75c be referred back to the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

It seems to me that the amendment which the honourable Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman) proposed to the House this morning does go beyond the scope of this very limited amendment. In my view and in my interpretation of the subamendment, it seeks to do many other things, one of them being to correct proposed Standing Order 75B. Because of that, I have very serious reservations about the procedural acceptability of the sub-amendment.

Honourable Members know that the role of the Chair essentially is to see that discussion be relevant to the matter before the House and that amendments be essentially relevant to the questions before the House. If the Speaker has any role to perform that is significant, it is precisely to see that the rule of relevancy, to some extent at least, is accepted. It is not all that easy to ensure that it is respected in the course of debate. It is not easy either to see that it is accepted and respected in connection with amendments proposed by honourable Members.

After much serious thought I have come to the conclusion that the subamendment proposed by the honourable Member enlarges the scope of the amendment which, as I said, is limited in nature being restricted exclusively to a reconsideration of Standing Order 75c. I indicated before one o'clock, and I reiterate now, that perhaps the method by which the proposition advanced by the honourable Member for Vancouver Quadra might be considered by the House is in the form of an amendment to the main motion. I cannot rule in anticipation of that amendment but it would appear to me personally to be the reasonable way in which to consider the honourable Member's amendment.

For this reason and in the hope that we can ensure the respect and acceptance by all honourable Members of the rule of relevancy, I suggest that the subamendment be not considered now and that we proceed for the time being with the consideration of the amendment itself.

Debate was resumed on the motion of Mr. Blair, seconded by Mr. Deachman,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the House on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in.

And on the proposed amendment of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Rynard,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

And debate continuing;

Pursuant to Standing Order 26, at 3.00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Howard (Skeena), seconded by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), moved,—That this House do now adjourn.

After debate thereon, Mr. Speaker declared the motion carried.

Mr. Macdonald, a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House gave notice, pursuant to Standing Order 33, that at the next sitting of the House, immediately before the order of the day is called for resuming the debate on the motion,—“That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be concurred in”, and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, he would move that the said debate shall not be further adjourned.

Mr. Woolliams, seconded by Mr. Baldwin, moved,—That the House adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m.

STATEMENT BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: If there are no further comments, I should like perhaps to express a few brief thoughts in connection with the proposed motion. I should like to state first, despite what has been suggested by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and by the honourable Member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), that no ruling whatsoever was made by the Chair when this matter first came up when the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre first proposed this motion. As he knows, this is a very new type of motion and it was new to the extent of having been difficult for the Chair alone or with the assistance of the Table officials to accept or refuse the motion, but in view of the fact that no objection has been made to it, it was put to the House. So I do not feel bound by anything because there was actually no ruling. A question was simply put to the House, and this is my view, one which I hold very strongly.

At the same time I still have the reservations which I had previously. I cannot agree with the argument put forth by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) because, as has been pointed out by other honourable Members who took part in the debate, the precedent to which the President of the Privy Council referred did not deal precisely with the point but rather with the arrangement of the business of the House, and to that extent would not be covered by Standing Order 42(1). I think that Standing Order 42(1) is beyond the scope of the precedent which he quoted.

At the same time the very interesting precedent quoted by the honourable Members representing the opposition parties who took part in this debate is also to some extent not quite relevant because this precedent of 1951 basically dealt with the extension of sittings and, as honourable Members know, our new Standing Orders, particularly rule 6(5)(a), cover a situation which has been dealt with by the precedent. So I am not convinced either by the precedent against or by the precedent in favour.

Whereupon Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), seconded by Mr. Barnett, moved in amendment thereto,—That the motion be amended by deleting therefrom the words “4.00 o'clock p.m.,” and by substituting therefor the words “5.30 o'clock p.m.”.

After debate thereon, the question being put on the said proposed amendment, it was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Fortin, seconded by Mr. Laprise, proposed to move,—That the House do now adjourn.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: I thank the honourable Member for his generous co-operation.

I have listened to honourable Members who have taken part in this procedural debate. As I indicated when the motion was moved some few minutes ago by the honourable Member for Lotbiniere (Mr. Fortin), I had serious doubts about the motion. Honourable Members have argued this motion should be receivable under the provisions of Standing Order 25 without the necessity of intermediate proceeding because it is not the same motion. Certainly I recognize the motion to adjourn at 5.30 p.m. is not the same as a simple motion to adjourn the House, but I pointed out in the first instance that this is not what the Standing Order states.

The Standing Order is to the effect that: "...no second motion to the same effect shall be made until some intermediate proceeding has taken place."

I doubt that it is the intention of the Standing Order to allow a second motion of adjournment after one has already been considered without an intermediate proceeding, even though the first motion had a condition attached to it.

I realize that this is perhaps new law. I was tempted to ask the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and other Members who took part in the procedural debate whether they had a precedent to support their views. I am sure they did not because I do not think we have ever had this type of motion following a previous motion of the kind moved by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre and the honourable Member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams).

All this having been said, I would say that the real test we now have to apply is, had this first motion carried, would this motion be in order? The answer is obvious. To my mind the only conclusion I can reach is that the second motion is to the same effect as the first. It can be in order later on in our proceedings provided there is an intermediate proceeding as required by the provisions of Standing Order 25.

Pursuant to Standing Order 39(4), the following Question was made an Order of the House for a Return:

No. 2,416—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont)

1. Have representations been received on the easing of regional tariff structures between the Atlantic Provinces and the Eastern Seaboard of the United States as well as the United Kingdom with regard to the improvement of markets and the development of trade between those areas?

2. What has been the response of the government in this regard?

3. Is serious consideration being given to the implementation of that programme or what steps are being taken to increase trade between these areas?

Mr. Forest, Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council, presented,—Return to the foregoing Order.

Notices of Motions for the Production of Papers Nos. 124, 126, 127, 128, 129, 134, 139, 152, 176, 178, 179, 189, 197, 200, 201, 203, 204, 217, 221, 222, 225, 226, 227, 228, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 266 and 268 were allowed to stand at the request of the Government.

JOURNALS

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF CANADA

OTTAWA, THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1969.

2.00 o'clock p.m.

PRAYERS.

Mr. Macdonald, a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House gave notice, pursuant to Standing Order 33 that at the next sitting of the House, immediately before the order of the day is called for resuming the debate on the motion,—“That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be concurred in”, and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, he would move that the said debate shall not be further adjourned.

A point of order having been raised by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken), as to the validity of the motion to be proposed by the President of the Privy Council;

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. SPEAKER: I am grateful to honourable Members for the comments they have made in guidance to the Chair. The objections that have been made by honourable Members have been logical and I have given very serious thought to them. At the same time I have given very serious consideration to the arguments advanced by the Honourable President of the Privy Council in support of his rejection of the point put forward by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka of which he gave me notice of his intention to bring forward procedural objection at this time. I recognize also the difficulty referred to by the honourable Member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). It is obvious that we may some day want to resolve the difficulties to which he has referred. That relates also to one of the difficulties referred to by the honourable Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

There is no question that Standing Order 33 as it now stands is not without uncertainty and pitfalls. As has been suggested, it might well be that early consideration should be given to that Standing Order in relation to a consideration of other Standing Orders. It has been my pleasure, good fortune and privilege to hear all the contributions which have been made to this debate during the last two weeks. I have had the impression that at times the discussion has not related to the amendment before the House. At the same time I thought some of the speeches which referred to the motion initially presented by the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) had greater relevancy to the motion proposed by the Honourable President of the Privy Council.

Let me now go to the argument advanced by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka who has suggested that in view of the fact there may be some point at issue in the interpretation of Standing Order 33, we might be further ahead to consider the similar Standing Order in the British Parliament, and how it has been interpreted. I would be in full agreement with this suggestion if there was not considerable Canadian precedent and practice in the interpretation of our Standing Order 33 as this Standing Order has been in effect in the House of Commons—over 50 years.

There are many precedents, and more than those which have been quoted and referred to by honourable Members when this point of order was raised. These precedents have been studied very closely, the Journals have been looked into and the debates have been read.

I should like to assume the dubious honour of taking the time of the House to go through these precedents. I think after referring to a lot of these practices the conclusion will be clear.

On August 30 of 1917, and I begin this review of precedents with this particular one, a motion was proposed and adopted in the following terms: "That the debate on the third reading of Bill No. 125, providing for the acquisition by His Majesty of the capital stock of the Canadian Northern Railway Company shall not be further adjourned."

At that time an amendment to the motion for the third reading of Bill No. 125 was also under consideration. Both the amendment and the main motion were subsequently disposed of under the provisions of what is now Standing Order 33. I refer honourable Members to Journals of August 30, 1917, pages 606 to 608 inclusive.

On September 10, 1917, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the debate upon the second reading of Bill No. 133, the War-time Elections Act, shall not be further adjourned."

It should be noted that in this case there was no amendment before the House when the motion to close the debate was adopted. Later in the sitting of September 10, 1917, in the course of the debate following the submission of the motion under what is now Standing Order 33 an amendment was proposed and disposed of by a division. Subsequently in the same sitting a further amendment was proposed and debated. The latter amendment and the main motion were both disposed of by the operation of the provisions of the closure rule. In this connection I refer honourable Members to Journals of September 10, 1917, pages 643 to 645 inclusive.

On September 14, 1917, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the debate on the third reading of Bill No. 133, the War-time Elections Act, shall not be further adjourned."

Again, it should be noted that when the motion to close debate was adopted there was no amendment before the House. Later in the same sitting an amendment was proposed and debated. Both the amendment and the main motion were disposed of by the operation of the provision of what is now Standing Order 33. This is to be found in Journals of September 14, 1917, pages 659 to 661 inclusive.

On March 2, 1926, when the House was considering the Address in Reply a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Elliott, for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General in answer to His Speech at the opening of the session, and the proposed motion of Mr. Bird: "That this question be now put", shall not be further adjourned."

Once more, it should be noted that the motion to close debate related to more than one question, namely, the Address in Reply and also to a motion "That the question be now put". I refer honourable Members to Journals of March 2, 1926, pages 123 to 126 inclusive.

On March 29, 1932, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the present debate, namely the debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Bennett: That Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair for the House to resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the following proposed resolution:

That it is expedient to introduce a bill to amend chapter 58 of the Statutes of Canada, 1931, striking out the word "March" in section 8, and substituting the word "May" therefor; and the proposed motion of Mr. Weir (Melfort): "That this question be now put", shall not be further adjourned."

Here again, it is suggested that the motion to close debate referred to two debatable motions. I refer honourable Members to Journals of March 29, 1932, pages 177 to 181 inclusive.

On May 22, 1956, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the debate on the motion for the second reading of Bill No. 298, an act to establish the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, and on any amendments thereto, shall not be further adjourned."

On that occasion, in addition to the main motion there was an amendment and also a subamendment under consideration by the House. The reference here is to Journals of May 22, 1956, pages 587 to 594 inclusive.

On June 5, 1956, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows: "That the debate on the motion for the third reading of Bill No. 298, an act to establish the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, and on any amendments thereto, shall not be further adjourned."

On that occasion, in addition to the main motion there was also an amendment under consideration by the House. Honourable Members will find the reference in the Journals for June 5, 1956, pages 699 to 705 inclusive. The latest precedent for the use of Standing Order 33 on a proceeding with Mr. Speaker in the Chair is to be found at pages 996 to 1002 inclusive of the Journals for December 14, 1964, when a motion to concur in the sixth report of the Special Committee on a Canadian flag was being debated.

On that occasion, when the motion to impose the provisions of Standing Order 33 was adopted, an amendment to the main motion was also under consideration. However, that amendment was disposed of prior to the cut-off time specified in Standing Order 33. To that extent I agree with the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka that this precedent is not of particular assistance in the present circumstances.

In summary, it is suggested that all precedents support the viewpoint that any amendment or other motion that may be proposed to a main motion comes under the provisions of the cut-off time set out in Standing Order 33. No precedent has been found to support the suggestion that each amendment is a separate debate that must be covered by a motion in each case.

The honourable Member has suggested that the adjourned debate is the debate on the amendment. If he will look at the proceedings of the House he will see that the adjourned debate is not only on the amendment but on the main motion. This is what is before the House at the present time. He would have a very serious point and one which would have to be given extremely close consideration if, in fact, it were agreed that what is before the House at the present time is the adjourned debate exclusively on the amendment. But that is not the procedural position. In fact, the procedural position is that the adjourned debate is on the motion of the honourable Member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) and the amendment thereto of the honourable Member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin).

In this light, I do not think the additional argument put forward for the consideration of the House by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka can be accepted. As I have said, no precedent has been found to support the suggestion advanced by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka. Indeed, the concluding sentence of Standing Order 33 reads in part: "... but all such questions as must be decided in order to conclude such adjourned debate or postponed consideration, shall be decided forthwith."

That is, of course, the point which has been made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) indicating the distinction between our Standing Order 33 and the corresponding Standing Order in the British House. In view of the precedents, my interpretation of Standing Order 33 would lead me to believe that the point of order raised by the honourable Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka cannot be accepted by the Chair.

Pursuant to Standing Order 33, Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), seconded by Mr. McIlraith, moved,—That the debate on the motion, "That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the House on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in" and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, shall not be further adjourned.

And the question having been put on the said motion, it was agreed to on the following division:

And on the proposed amendment of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Rynard,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

The honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) having raised a point of order as to the application of Standing Order 51.

RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

MR. SPEAKER: A moment ago I noticed that two or three honourable Members wanted to rise. They are rising allegedly, but I am sure honestly, for the purpose of discussing the point of order. However, at the same time, whether we like it nor not, it is extremely difficult to limit our contributions in this kind of debate to the strictly procedural aspects of the matter. It is perhaps natural for honourable Members, without wanting to do so, to touch on the substance of the matter. This is what I am afraid of, and I really feel somewhat embarrassed by the thought that this debate might continue until one o'clock tonight always inviting the Chair to make a ruling ultimately at one o'clock. If it is the wish of honourable Members, I can make a ruling immediately, after which the debate will continue on the motion before the House.

A few days ago the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre was kind enough to say that he intended to raise this particular point of order and since then, as I try to do in every such circumstance, I have given serious thought to the points he has raised. I came to the Chair armed with many books and precedents from this Parliament, from the British Parliament and even from other Parliaments. I have Beauchesne, Bourinot, May and the Standing Orders with me, as well as a long prepared opinion which I have reached as a result of my studies in the quiet of the Speaker's Chambers.

I wonder whether it is necessary to go over the details, the procedural details of the situation. I say, perhaps with a bit of sadness in my heart, that the debate we are having now is, as I said a moment ago, at the expense of the Chair, though no honourable Member wants that, neither the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), nor the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) nor any of the others who have taken part in the discussion. But in a situation such as this, which is so close to a partisan situation, I do not see how we could have a debate of this kind without the Speaker being in some way involved in partisan considerations.

What we have, according to my limited comprehension of such matters, is the report of a committee. Some honourable Members have said and no one doubts it, that the report is not the report of the majority. At the same time, we do not have in our parliamentary system minority and majority reports; we have the report of a committee which is before the House for adoption or rejection. What honourable Members would like the Chair to do under the provisions of Standing Order 51 is to substitute his judgment for the judgment of certain honourable Members. Can I do this in accordance with the traditions of Canada, of Britain and in all parliamentary systems where the Speaker is not the master of the House, in spite of what Standing Order 51 says. The Speaker is a servant of the House. Honourable Members may want me to be the master of the House today but tomorrow, when, perhaps in other circumstances I might claim this privilege, they might have a different opinion. It would make me a hero, I suppose, if I were to adopt the attitude that I could judge political situations such as this and substitute my judgment for that of certain honourable Members, either a majority or, perhaps, sometimes a minority. But I do not believe that this is the role of a Speaker under our system. I am not prepared at this time to take this responsibility on my shoulders. I think it is my duty to rule on such matters in accordance with the rules, regulations and standing orders which honourable Members themselves have turned over to the Speaker to administer.

I have a set of rules and precedents by which I am guided. I recognize it is my duty to protect the privileges of honourable Members and to protect minorities. I have always tried to do this, and I shall continue to do so. But I do not think that in the circumstances I can go so far in abandoning my responsibility as a servant of the House as to be its master and to give a ruling or judgment along the lines suggested by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre.

I am not saying I accept in any way the procedures which have been followed, though I do not think it is for me to express at this time an opinion in this regard. I would only say that after sincere thoughts on the matter in accordance with my way of looking at the situation I cannot accept the suggestions put forward by the honourable Member for Winnipeg North Centre under the terms of Standing Order 51.

I hope honourable Members will realise that this is not an easy decision for the Chair to reach. I hope I shall never be placed in a position again in which I have to make this kind of decision. I count on honourable Members on both sides to ensure that the Chair is not again placed in such a position.

By unanimous consent, it was ordered,—That the hour for Private Members' Business be suspended.

The House resumed debate on the motion of Mr. Blair, seconded by Mr. Deachman,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the House on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in.

And on the proposed amendment of Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. Rynard,—That the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

And debate continuing;

Pursuant to Standing Order 33, at 1.17 o'clock a.m., Mr. Speaker interrupted the proceedings.

And the question being put on the said proposed amendment, it was negatived on the following division:

Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

Pursuant to its Order of Reference of Wednesday, June 26, 1969:

"That for the purpose of completing its inquiry into the problems of transportation in the Atlantic provinces, the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications be empowered to adjourn from place to place within eastern Canada and the clerk and the necessary supporting staff be authorized to accompany the Committee."

Your Committee has held 8 meetings and heard 50 witnesses during its visits of certain cities within eastern Canada.

Your Committee has made considerable progress in its study of the Transportation Problems in the Atlantic Provinces but has not completed its Order of Reference.

Therefore, your Committee recommends that it be reconstituted as early as possible during the Second Session of the Twenty-eighth Parliament, and that its present Order of Reference and the evidence adduced be again referred.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issues Nos. 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36) is tabled.

(The Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence accompanying the said Report recorded as Appendix No. 121 to the Journals).

Mr. MacGuigan, from the Special Committee on Statutory Instruments, presented the Third Report of the said Committee, which is as follows:

PREFACE

This Report is based on the assumption that public knowledge of governmental activities is the basis of all control of delegated legislation. For parliamentary democracy is a system of government which requires that the executive be responsible to the legislature and that both be accountable to the people, and there can be neither responsibility nor accountability where there is no knowledge of what has been done. In political matters knowledge is the beginning of power, and its lack, impotence.

There are many forms of executive and administrative secrecy. The practice of secrecy relates to such varied matters as the availability of government documents to scholars, the production of official documents in litigation, security screening of individuals and classification of documents, and general access to information about government programs and operations. Your Committee can agree with the view of Dr. D. C. Rowat that the general tradition of administrative secrecy "is based on an earlier system of royal rule in Britain that is unsuited to a modern democracy in which the people must be fully informed about the activities of their government" ("How Much Administrative Secrecy?" (1965) Canadian Journal of Economics and Political Science, vol. 31, p. 479 at p. 480). But other bodies have been and are conducting studies of many of these matters, and your Committee wishes to confine itself solely to the area of delegated legislation. Your Committee's contention is, therefore, that there should be, as a general rule, public knowledge of the processes of delegated legislation before, during, and after the making of regulations, and that any derogation by government from this rule requires justification.

Your Committee adopts this position for five reasons. First, the people cannot control their government without knowledge of its actions, nor can Parliament fulfil its role of responsibility with respect to legislation without being fully informed on the operation of those legislative powers which it has delegated to others. Second, the existence of secrecy is likely to lead to popular suspicion of wrongdoing by government whether or not there is any genuine reason for suspicion. Third, we are living today in a period in which the validity of authority can no longer be taken for granted but must be constantly demonstrated. Governmental systems which do not take this new attitude seriously are apt to find public confidence in them diminishing rapidly. Obviously a continuing demonstration of the justice of the system necessitates an opening of the processes and products of delegated legislation to the light of publicity. Fourth, your Committee has been able to find no reason, either theoretical or practical, except the force of tradition, why there should not be publicity in the making of regulations. Canadian governments appear to have remarkably little to hide, and therefore nothing to lose, from openness except their psychological investment in existing practices. Indeed, publicity can have the positive value for administrators of helping them to improve weaknesses in their system. Fifth, since regulations have the force of laws, they should be made by processes which as far as possible approximate the openness of the general legislative process.

Just as publicity has a curative value inasmuch as it contains the possibility of exposure of error and stupidity through criticism, so your Committee believes the act of publicizing parliamentary criticism of specific regulations, or of governmental practices in delegated legislation, performs an important service even in the absence of sanctions. Undoubtedly, Bernard Crick goes too far in taking the position that parliamentary control of the executive must mean "influence, not direct power; advice, not command; criticism, not obstruction, scrutiny, not initiation, and publicity, not secrecy" (The Reform of Parliament (1964), p. 77), for parliament must retain ultimate direct control of the executive or lose its status altogether. But your Committee has nevertheless concluded that parliamentary control over delegated legislation should not be such as to automatically threaten the life of the government over every controverted regulation but, rather, such as to keep the government responsive to the views of members of parliament and to the feelings of the public. In short, your Committee has chosen to stress the principle of the responsibility of the executive to parliament for delegated legislation as well as for the enactment of statutes.

Your Committee's proposals to implement the principle of "open government" will urge full consultation with the public and with parliamentary standing committees before the making of regulations, the extension of the ambit of the present internal scrutiny of regulations by the Privy Council Office and the Department of Justice during the making of regulations, and full publication of regulations after they have been made, as well as your Committee's principal institutional recommendation, the establishment of a new Standing Committee on Regulations to provide an initial subsequent scrutiny, followed by the referral of appropriate regulations to the other Standing Committees for further consideration. It is your Committee's intention that the meetings and reports of this new Committee would be public.

In addition, your Committee proposes the establishment of guidelines for the enabling legislation which originally confers on the executive the right to make delegated legislation.

Your Committee's proposals for the fuller implementation of responsible government will recommend the assumption of complete responsibility for independent bodies which have the power to make regulations and, especially the duty of the government to justify to parliament any departures from the ordinary rules of good regulation-making.

Your Committee believes that in calling for a renewed dedication to the principles of open and responsible government it is not proposing a fundamental change in the character of our system of parliamentary democracy but is rather attempting to actualize potentialities of our present system which can no longer be allowed to remain latent. In sum, your Committee is proposing a much needed reform, not the abandonment of our form of government. It is your Committee's hope that its recommendations will contribute a new dimension to our system of law-making.

Chapter 1

Introduction

1. Terms of Reference and Program

The Special Committee on Statutory Instruments was appointed by order of the House of Commons on September 30, 1968, with the following order of reference:

Resolved,—That a Special Committee of twelve Members, to be named at a later date, be appointed to consider and, from time to time, to report on procedures for the review by this House of instruments made in virtue of any statute of the Parliament of Canada.

On November 8, 1968, the House further ordered:

That the Special Committee on Statutory Instruments appointed on September 30, 1968, be composed of the following Members: Messrs. Baldwin, Brewin, Forest, Gibson, Hogarth, MacGuigan, Marceau, McIntosh, Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys), Murphy, Stafford and Tétrault. Mr. McIntosh was replaced by Mr. McCleave on April 21, 1969.

At the first Committee meeting on November 13, 1968, Dr. Mark MacGuigan and Mr. Gilles Marceau were elected chairman and vice-chairman respectively.

On July 10, 1969, the House made the following additional order:

That the powers of the Special Committee on Statutory Instruments, appointed by order of the House on September 30, 1968, be extended by adding the following powers:

To consider and, from time to time, to report on the adequacy of existing statutory authority for the making and publication of Statutory Instruments and on the adequacy of existing procedures for the drafting, scrutiny, and operational review of such instruments, and to make recommendations with respect thereto.

The enlargement of the order of reference by the House of Commons recognizes that an assessment of the processes for reviewing delegated legislation cannot be conducted apart from a consideration of the statutory provisions authorizing them, a point of view with which your Committee fully concurs.

Dr. Gilles Pépin, then Dean of the Civil Law Section at the University of Ottawa, and Mr. John W. Morden, barrister-at-law of Toronto, were appointed Counsel and Assistant Counsel respectively on February 13, 1969

(effective on February 17, 1969, with the adoption by the House of the Committee's Second Report). Your Committee has also had the services of Dr. Henriette Immarigeon of the Research Branch of the Parliamentary Library. Your Committee wishes to express its great indebtedness to Dr. Pépin, Mr. Morden, and Dr. Immarigeon for their faithful and perceptive service.

Your Committee's investigations and research have taken four main forms: the examination of witnesses at Committee hearings; the canvassing of the information and viewpoints of all government departments and agencies by means of a questionnaire (See Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pp. 46-47); a consolidation of the voluminous literature which exists on the subject of delegated legislation; and the preparation of a survey of the enabling clauses in all the statutes of Canada.

With respect to your Committee's hearings we are grateful to those who gave evidence before us. They are: Professor H. W. Arthurs; Professor C. L. Brown-John; Professor J. R. Mallory; Professor A. S. Abel; Mr. G. S. Rutherford; Mr. C. B. Koester; Professor D. J. Baum; Professor J. E. Kerseil; and officials from the Department of Transport, the Department of Manpower and Immigration, the Privy Council Office and the Department of Justice, in addition to Hon. Donald S. Macdonald, the President of the Privy Council, and Hon. John Turner, the Minister of Justice.

Within the purview of your Committee's particular inquiry, many able scholars and others interested in the subject of delegated legislation have written extensively, profoundly and usefully on the very problems with which we are concerned. Your Committee frankly acknowledges that it has heavily drawn upon their work in the preparation of its Report.

Your Committee has, as it intended to do, canvassed the experience of many other countries, especially Commonwealth countries, in the course of its studies, but it has not found it advisable to set out this learning in its Report except where it appeared to be relevant in a particular context.

Despite the presence of the phrase "statutory instruments" in its name, your Committee has preferred throughout to use the more ordinary term "regulations", to describe our subject matter. Your Committee gives "regulation" the general meaning of any exercise of legislative power under the authority of a statute, and defines it more exactly in Chapter 2.

2. The Necessity of Delegated Legislation

The federal Administration—a modern synonym for the word "Executive"—is composed of numerous authorities having varying degrees of independence from Parliament: the Governor in Council, Ministers, Crown Corporations, various Boards and Commissions often called "administrative tribunals" and public officers who are sometimes designated by statutes ("persona designata") to perform particular acts. One of the principal activities of the Administration is law-making. First of all, the administrative authorities and their staffs play an important role in the preparation of the statutes enacted by Parliament itself, since that vast majority of legislative proposals originate in the Administration. However, it is also now commonplace for the Administration to make laws directly, without having to observe the complex but safeguarding rules of parliamentary procedure, for Parliament frequently delegates to it its own legislative power, i.e., the power to enact general rules of conduct, which confer legally enforceable rights on citizens and impose legally enforceable obligations on them.

Hence, section 22 (3) of the Customs Act, R.S.C., 1952, ch. 58, as amended bestows regulation-making authority on the Governor in Council:

The Governor in Council may make regulations prescribing

- (a) the terms and conditions upon which goods may be entered into Canada free of any requirement that the importer shall, at the time of entry, pay or cause to be so paid all duties on the goods so entered inwards; and
- (b) the terms and conditions of any bond, note or other document presented upon the entry of such goods in respect of the duties thereon.

The National Library Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 330, on the other hand, gives regulation-making power to the Minister (the Secretary of State) in section 11(4):

The Minister may make regulations

- (a) respecting the quality of the copies required to be delivered to the National Librarian of any book the copies of which are not of uniform quality;
- (b) prescribing generally the classes or kinds of books in respect of which only one copy is required to be delivered to the National Librarian; and
- (c) prescribing the classes or kinds of books in respect of which no copies are required to be delivered to the National Librarian unless specially requested by him.

The Broadcasting Act, S.C. 1967-68, ch. 25, section 16(1), gives to the Canadian Radio Television Commission, a body independent of the Ministry in its operation, power to:

- (a) prescribe classes of broadcasting licenses;
- (b) make regulations applicable to all persons holding broadcasting licenses, or to all persons holding broadcasting licenses of one or more classes
 - (i) respecting standards of programs and the allocation of broadcasting time for the purpose of giving effect to paragraph (d) of section 2 (varied and comprehensive programming, balanced opportunity for the expression of differing views on matter of public concern, high standards, etc.),
 - (ii) respecting the character of advertising and the amount of time that may be devoted to advertising,
 - (iii) respecting the proportion of time that may be devoted to the broadcasting of programs, advertisements or announcements of a partisan political character and the assignment of such time on equitable basis to political parties and candidates, . . .
- (vi) prescribing the conditions for the operation of broadcasting stations as part of a network and the conditions for the broadcasting of network programs,
- (vii) with the approval of the Treasury Board, fixing the schedules of fees to be paid by licensees and providing for the payment thereof,
- (viii) requiring licensees to submit to the Commission such information regarding their programs and financial affairs or otherwise relating to the conduct and management of their affairs as the regulations may specify, and,
- (ix) respecting such other matters as it deems necessary for the furtherance of its objects . . .

The Parliament of Canada has the authority to delegate its legislative powers to the federal administrative authorities (Hodge v. The Queen, (1883-84) 9 A.C. 117; Liquidators of Maritime Bank of Canada v. Receiver General of New Brunswick [1892] A.C. 437), but it cannot delegate them to the provincial Legislatures (Attorney-General of Nova Scotia v. Attorney-General of Canada, [1951] S.C.R. 31), although this principle does not preclude delegation by Parliament to a provincial administrative authority, e.g. a provincially appointed and controlled board (P.E.I. Potato Marketing Board v. Willis [1952] 2 S.C.R. 392; Coughlin v. Ontario Highway Transport Board, (1968) 68 D.L.R. (2d) 384).

Parliament can delegate its legislative powers. It cannot abdicate them (Re Gray, (1918) 57 S.C.R. 150), but the distinction between abdication and delegation seems to have no practical meaning, as long as Parliament can revoke at any time the specific power granted and can nullify anything done under it. As a judge has pointed out,

A complete abdication by Parliament of its legislative functions is something so inconceivable that the constitutionality of an attempt to do anything of the kind need not to be considered. (Anglin J., in Re Gray, (1918) 57 S.C.R. 150, at p. 176).

But as for delegation, there is no difficulty:

If then both the law which gives delegated power, and the volition, are those of the legislature, is not the question of abdication a political one for the electorate rather than a constitutional one for the courts? (B. Laskin, Canadian Constitutional Law, (3rd ed., 1968) p. 45).

Four hundred and twenty of the 601 Acts of Parliament examined by the Committee (constituting substantially all of the statutes now in force) provide for delegated legislation. Moreover, a substantial majority of the answers given to question No. 2 of the Committee's questionnaire stated that statutory powers to make regulations have been used very extensively. The following statistics confirm this impression: 6,892 regulations covering 19,972 pages were published in the Canada Gazette during the period from January 1, 1956, to December 31, 1968, an average of 530 regulations a year. This does not take into account those regulations which are expressly exempted from publication and also some documents which are perhaps in fact of a legislative nature but are not officially considered to be so by the regulation-making authority.

The reasons usually given to justify the delegation by Parliament of the power to make laws are: lack of parliamentary time; lack of parliamentary knowledge on technical matters; the necessity of rapid decisions in cases of emergency; the need to experiment with legislation, especially in a new field; the need for flexibility in the application of laws; and unforeseen contingencies which may arise during the introduction of new and complex pieces of legislation. It also seems that the force of precedent has some bearing on it; sections conferring powers of delegated legislation now tend to be considered as standard clauses by the draftsmen of statutes.

Uneasiness respecting the extent of delegated legislation began to be evident in England toward the end of the nineteenth century, just at the time that it began to be a frequently used device. The concern multiplied in proportion with its growth. Hence, delegated legislation formed one of the matters referred to the United Kingdom Committee on Ministers' Powers, whose report was published in 1932 (Cmd. 4060); it was also of some concern to the American Committee on Administrative Procedure, whose report was published in 1941. Since that time, although it has continued to grow in bulk and importance, in Britain, in Canada, in the United States and elsewhere, it has not been a subject of such controversy. In the United States, the practice has been accepted by the Courts, although the U.S. Constitution prescribes explicitly that "All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress" (Article 1). The contemporary consensus was probably put by Mr. A. Beuvan, before the British Select Committee on Delegated Legislation, in 1953: "There is now general agreement about the necessity for delegated legislation; the real problem is how this legislation can be reconciled with the processes of democratic consultation, scrutiny and control".

The same situation seems to prevail today in the United States, despite the constitutional provision just noticed. "Congress cannot delegate any part of its legislative power except under the limitation of a prescribed standard" said the United States Supreme Court in 1935; the enabling legislation, in other words, must contain a framework within which the administrative action is to be confined. But according to Professor Schwartz,

It cannot be denied . . . that the attitude of the American Court toward the delegation problem has changed substantially . . . But, if standards such as those contained in the Renegotiation and Communications Acts (to do what is in the public interest or necessary) are upheld as adequate, it becomes apparent that the requirement of standards has become more a matter of form than substance. Provided that there is no abdication of the Congressional function . . . the enabling law will be upheld, even though the only standard which the Court can find is so broad as to be almost illusory. (An Introduction to American Administrative Law (2nd ed. 1962), p. 42).

Today, therefore, critics of regulation-making do not seek to deny its necessity in some form; their complaints have been aimed rather against the volume and character of delegated legislation than against the practice itself. (Report of the Committee on Ministers' Powers, 1932, p. 53). The more fundamental of the criticisms can be summarized as follows: the parliamentary tendency to enact statutes in skeleton form, leaving the "details" to be filled in by regulations—such regulations being often the very matters that are of most importance to the citizen; uncertainty in enabling statutes as to the extent of the area regulations are intended to cover; sweeping or subjective terms used in enabling acts which exclude the judicial control of the regulations made under their authority; lack of public debate, and inadequate consultation of all interested parties before the making of the regulations; lack of precision in the form and content of the regulations; inadequate publicity given to the regulations after they are made; inadequate parliamentary control over the regulations; and the danger that civil servants may be transformed into our masters.

Each of these criticisms is important, but they do not destroy the case for delegated legislation. They were put in proper perspective by the Donoughmore Committee:

Their true bearing is rather that there are dangers in the practice; that it is liable to abuse; and that safeguards are required. . . . The problem which the critics raise is essentially one of devising the best safeguards. (Report of the Committee on Ministers' Powers, 1932, p. 54).

This is also the approach espoused by Louis L. Jaffe's Judicial Control of Administrative Action (1965) at pages 85-86:

A positive approach to the dangers of delegation is to develop the many devices for safeguarding and improving its operations. We have already discussed some of them: the legislative settlement of the guiding principle particularly of legitimately disputed questions of policy; legislative scrutiny of administrative action with a view to revision; rule making with an insistence on a precision which cannot obtain in the basic legislation. Beyond these lies the whole field of procedure which at the same time is the condition of the power being fulfilled and the safeguard of its legitimate exercise.

Your Committee does not accept an abstract analysis of the principle of the separation of powers which would regard regulation-making as a proper function of the legislative branch of government, grudgingly bestowed on the executive because of the human deficiencies of legislators. We believe rather that there is, properly as well as practically, an executive function of subordinate law-making. But we also believe that, because it is a delegated power, the delegator, Parliament, has a continuing responsibility to ensure its well-functioning in the public interest.

It is in this spirit that your Committee has examined the functioning of the Canadian system of delegated legislation and proposes the correction of certain malfunctions.

Such correction, on a continuing basis, necessitates an after-the-fact control, and we therefore agree with Griffith and Street on the importance of controls:

The real argument is not whether the Executive, for example, is exercising legislative or judicial powers which properly belong to Parliament or the courts (for no kind of power belongs to any particular authority) but whether the power is being exercised by the authority best suited to exercise it and whether the exercise is sufficiently controlled by political and legal action. (Principles of Administrative Law, (2nd ed., 1963) p. 16).

Your Committee believes that the controls it recommends will provide the safeguards necessary to limit the executive power of law-making without interfering unduly with its exercise.

Chapter 2

The Making of Regulations

1. The Legal Requirements

Parliament adopted the Regulations Act in 1950 (S.C. 1950, ch. 50, now R.S.C. 1952, ch. 235), without too much debate; its main purpose was to provide a system of publication for regulations. This can be seen from its official title: "An Act to provide for the Publication of Statutory Regulations", and from a statement made at the time by Prime Minister St. Laurent:

The main purpose of the bill is to ensure that all orders, regulations and proclamations, made or issued in the exercise of legislative powers delegated by parliament, are published and tabled in a systematic and uniform manner. There is no provision here for enlarging the powers to make orders or regulations. It is merely to deal with the exercise of powers already existing under prior legislation. It is to provide that there be one uniform system of tabling and publishing these orders. Such publication and tabling is to be compulsory We feel that the time has now come when we can bring to parliament something that should be practical and workable, and which may not have to be varied too frequently or too soon. This does provide unequivocally for the compulsory publication and tabling of all instruments made under the delegated legislative powers; that is the sole purpose of this measure. Although largely based on the statutory orders and regulations order, 1947, this bill will further clarify and extend the procedure, in order to ensure that it covers the whole field of delegated legislation. (Debates of the House of Commons, 1950, p. 3039-3040).

The problem of publication will be dealt with later in this report, but there is more in the Regulations Act, and in the regulations that were adopted under its authority ("Regulations made under Section 9 of the Regulations Act, P.C. 1954-1787"), than the matter of publication. Much in the way of the actual statutory safeguards turns on whether a regulation is "caught" by the provisions of the Regulations Act. If a regulation is so caught, it is submitted to the following prescriptions:

- (1) According to the requirements of the Regulations made under the Regulations Act, section 4:

Two copies of each proposed regulation shall, before it is made, be submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council who shall, in consultation with the Deputy Minister of Justice, examine the same to ensure that the form and draftsmanship thereof are in accordance with the established standards.

(2) According to the Canadian Bill of Rights, S.C. 1960, ch. 44, s. 3:

The Minister of Justice shall, in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the Governor in Council, examine every proposed regulation submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to the Regulations Act and every Bill introduced in or presented to the House of Commons, in order to ascertain whether any of the provisions thereof are inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of this Part and he shall report any such inconsistency to the House of Commons at the first convenient opportunity.

And the Bill of Rights Examination Regulations, sections 4-7, SOR/61-16:

4. A copy of every proposed regulation submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to the Regulations Act shall before the making of the proposed regulations, be transmitted to the Deputy Minister of Justice by the Clerk of the Privy Council.

5. Forthwith upon receipt of a copy of a proposed regulation transmitted by the Clerk of the Privy Council... the Minister [of Justice] shall

(a) examine the proposed Regulation in order to determine whether any of the provisions thereof are inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights; and

(b) cause to be affixed to the copy thereof so transmitted by the Clerk of the Privy Council a certificate, in a form approved by the Minister and signed by the Deputy Minister of Justice, stating that the proposed Regulation has been examined as required by the Canadian Bill of Rights; and the copy so certified shall thereupon be transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

6. Where any of the provisions... of any proposed regulation examined [by the Minister] are ascertained by the Minister to be inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights, the Minister shall make a report in writing of the inconsistency and shall cause such report to be deposited with the Clerk of the House of Commons in accordance with Standing Order 40 of the House of Commons at the earliest convenient opportunity.

7. A copy of every report made by the Minister... shall, where such report relates to a proposed regulation, be transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council forthwith upon the making thereof.

(3) According to section 3(1) of the Regulations Act:

Every regulation-making authority shall, within seven days after it makes a regulation, transmit copies of the regulation in English and in French to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

(4) According to section 3(2) of the Regulations Act and to section 5 of the Regulations made under the Regulations Act:

A copy of a regulation transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council... other than one made by the Governor in Council or the Treasury Board, shall be certified by the regulation-making authority to be a true copy of the regulation.

Three copies in English and one in French of every regulation, one copy of which shall be certified, shall be transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council, in accordance with section 3 of the Act.

(5) According to section 4 of the Regulations Act:

The Clerk of the Privy Council shall maintain a record in which he shall record the regulations transmitted to him... [and] every regulation recorded under this section shall bear a number assigned to it by the Clerk of the Privy Council...

(6) According to section 6(1) of the Regulations Act:

Every regulation shall be published in English and in French in the Canada Gazette within thirty days after it is made.

(7) According to section 7 of the Regulations Act:

Every regulation shall be laid before Parliament within fifteen days after it is published in the Canada Gazette or, if Parliament is not then in session, within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session.

If a regulation is not a "regulation" as defined in the Regulations Act, then it is not, at least by virtue of this Act, subject to any of these processes. The reach of the Act is thus established by the definition of "regulation" set forth in section 2 thereof, and by the power given to the Governor in Council, in section 9(2), to exempt regulations from the operation of the principal provisions of the Regulations Act, and in the result, from the scrutiny provision of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

2. The Legal Status of Regulations

The regulations made by the Administration are known collectively as delegated or subordinate legislation.

The expression "delegated legislation" indicates that an administrative authority is allowed to make a regulation only when Parliament has delegated to it the power to do so:

...every order-in-council, every regulation, every rule, every order, whether emanating immediately from His Excellency the Governor General in Council or from a subordinate agency derives its legal force solely from...[an] Act of Parliament. All such instruments derive their authority from the statute which creates the power, and not from the executive body by which they are made. (Duff J., Chemicals Reference, [1943] S.C.R. p. 1, at p. 13).

There is only one exception to this principle; the Royal prerogative can also authorize the Governor General to make regulations, although this power is ordinarily used in a non-legislative way. The prerogative was the object of some concern in the House of Commons in 1967 (Debates, p. 592-599 and 827-829) and the then Minister of Justice, the Honourable P. E. Trudeau, explained it as follows:

I was asked to give examples of cases where a regulation, in this general sense, could be made under the authority of the governor in council and not by virtue of a statute. I answered in a general way that there would be many such cases where the governor in council acts by virtue of the royal prerogative, which of course is the most obvious one.

The hon. member asked me for some other examples. I shall give a few today in the hope this will help the discussion. For instance, Mr. Speaker, when an ambassador is appointed under the Great Seal, this is done by the governor in council but not by virtue of any statute. This action is taken under a prerogative which, from time immemorial, has belonged to the king or queen under our form of government and has come down by way of prerogative to the governor in council who exercises the executive power. This is an example of a prerogative where an action is taken without the authority of a specific statute.

Another example is when the governor in council appoints a person as a queen's counsel or indeed confers upon him some other honour. These actions are not taken under the authority of any particular statute. It is a matter of the royal prerogative as it has been understood in this country...

I should like to give another example of action taken or regulations made under the authority of the governor in council but not authorized by statute. I cite the proclamation of a day to be observed, either in part or in totality, as a public holiday. There is no statute of which I know which authorizes the governor in council to do that. As an employer the government can do this. The government can decide to issue some rule, regulation, bylaw, whatever it is called in this definition, to the effect that today the employees can go home at three o'clock in the afternoon. This action is not taken under the authority of a statute. . . . (ibid., p. 828).

The only current example of what may be called a legislative use of the prerogative in Canada appears to be P.C. 1954-2029, the Fair Wages Policy, respecting contracts entered into by the Government of Canada. Analogous to this is the proclamation of January 28th, 1965, proclaiming the National Flag of Canada (SOR/65-62). This proclamation, however, followed a resolution by both Houses of Parliament.

Regulations made pursuant to the Crown prerogative are not delegated or subordinate legislation; they are original legislation. It must nevertheless be remembered that Parliament has the sovereign authority to abolish one or all of the prerogative powers (see section 12 of the B.N.A. Act) or to merge them into statutes. The Crown prerogative can be a source of legislative power because Parliament accepts, by its silence, this situation. It could perhaps be said that the prerogative legislative powers of the Governor General are actually delegated by Parliament, but in a negative way. In New Zealand prerogative regulations are expressly covered by the Regulations Act of 1936, section 2(1)(c). Your Committee believes this should also be the case in Canada.

Your Committee therefore recommends that regulations made in the exercise of the prerogative power of the Governor in Council, in so far as they are of a legislative character, should be subject to the same procedures and requirements as other regulations of a legislative character.

The general status of regulations as law is, however, not entirely clear. Everyone agrees that subordinate legislation constitutes law and that regulations have the same force as law. The following recent statement of the Ontario Court of Appeal is an accurate description of the general status of regulations: "These Regulations [made under the Penitentiary Act] having been made pursuant to the authority conferred by the Act upon the Governor in Council . . . have the same force as law, as have the provisions of the statute itself." (Regina v. Institutional Head of Beaver Creek Correctional Camp, ex parte MacCaud, [1969] 1 O.R. 373, p. 380).

But is there a difference between a regulation and a statute? In the Queen v. Walker, Lush J. said that "an order made under a power given in a statute is the same thing as if the statute enacted what the order directs or forbids" ((1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 355), whereas in The King v. Singer, the Supreme Court of Canada decided that for the purpose of the enforcement of the Criminal Code, a regulation was not an Act of Parliament ([1941] S.C.R. 111). In the Japanese Reference, a few years later, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council said that the regulations in question were laws made by Parliament: "Legislative activity of Parliament is still present at the time when the orders are made, and these orders are law. In their Lordships' opinion they are laws made by the Parliament at the date of their promulgation." ([1947] A.C. 87, p. 107).

The new Interpretation Act (S.C. 1967-1968, ch. 7) provides that an "enactment" means "an Act or a regulation or any portion of an Act or regulation" (section 2(1)(c)). Since several later sections in the Interpretation Act deal with "enactments", it appears that for many purposes regulations have been put on the same plane as statutes. Reference may be made to section 27(2) which affects the distinction made by the Supreme Court in The King v. Singer:

27. (2) All the provisions of the Criminal Code relating to indictable offences apply to indictable offences created by an enactment, and all the provisions of the Criminal Code relating to summary conviction offences apply to all other offences created by an enactment, except to the extent that the enactment otherwise provides.

Therefore, the appropriate provisions of the Criminal Code apply to a prosecution for contravention of a regulation in the same way that they apply to a prosecution for contravention of a statute. If there is no difference between a law and a regulation, if regulations are "laws made by the Parliament at the date of their promulgation", how is it that they are not published like laws, and that a specific clause was adopted to say that a regulation that has been published shall be judicially noticed, etc.? Does section 133 of the B.N.A. Act, which provides that the laws of Parliament and of the Quebec Legislature must be published in English and in French, also apply to regulations?

It is true that in a federal state, there is an additional resemblance between regulations and laws; the former is subordinate to the parent act, the latter to the constitution. But Parliament can legislate in virtue of a power that belongs to itself (Hodge v. The Queen, Liquidators of Maritime Bank v. The Receiver General of New Brunswick); an administrative authority has a rule making power only when Parliament delegates such a power to that authority and as long as Parliament does not decide to take it back. There is definitely a difference between a statute and a regulation, even if both have the same force.

The same is true even for the regulations made under the authority of the Crown prerogative, because Parliament has the power to abolish the prerogative. To say that "regulations are laws made by the Parliament at the date of their promulgation" is not exact; but the Judicial Committee was politically obliged to make that assertion because the drafters of the Statute of Westminster of 1931 forgot to mention explicitly that, not only laws made by Parliament, but also, and a fortiori, regulations and other decisions adopted by administrative authorities could be repugnant to the Colonial Laws Validity Act of 1865.

Mention should be made finally of section 26(4) of the Interpretation Act:

Where a power is conferred to make regulations, the power shall be construed as including a power, exercisable in the like manner, and subject to the like consent and conditions, if any, to repeal, amend or vary the regulations and make others.

Thus the power to unmake regulations is a concomitant of the power to make them.

3. The Present Definition of Regulation

The validity of regulations generally comes into question in proceedings to enforce them when they are prohibitory, or in proceedings in which an individual claims rights conferred on him by the regulations. It must be remembered that a sovereign Parliament may always adopt a law to repeal or to amend a valid regulation or, and this is in practice more important, to validate an illegal, or what is perhaps an illegal, regulation. (See, for example, An Act respecting an Order of His Excellency the Governor in Council entitled the Surcharge on Imports Order, S.C. 1963, ch. 18).

But, what is exactly a regulation; more precisely, what is a Regulations Act regulation?

Existing legislation contains varying definitions of "regulation":

"regulation" means a rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation... (Regulations Act, section 2(a)).

"regulation" includes an order, regulation, order in council, order prescribing regulations, rule, rule of court, form, tariff of costs and fees, letters patent, commission, warrant, proclamation, by-law, resolution... (Interpretation Act, S.C. 1967-1968, ch. 7, section 2, para. 1(e)).

Many of the same synonyms are found in a different context:

"judgment" when used with reference to the court appealed from, includes any judgment, rule, order, decision, decree, decretal order or sentence thereof... (Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 259, section 2(d)).

It is not too unusual to find in statutory conjunction power to make "orders", "rules" and "regulations", with no indication as to what the difference is. The confusion of names is not only due to the use of many different words for the same thing. It is aggravated by the use of the same word for different things. The word "order" is used for an administrative act, for a judicial act, for a legislative act and for a prerogative act. The name of this Committee is the "Special Committee on Statutory Instruments" and its terms of reference use the expressions "instruments made in virtue of any statute of the Parliament of Canada" and "statutory instruments". There does not appear to be any Canadian statute which uses the expression "statutory instruments". In fact, not all instruments issued under statutory authority can be regarded as regulations. A statute may confer power to make legislative, judicial, quasi-judicial, administrative and ministerial decisions.

"Statutory instruments" is a commonly used term in the United Kingdom where it means, generally, regulations, but only because the Statutory Instrument Act of 1946 says so:

Where by this Act or any Act passed after the commencement of this Act power to make, confirm or approve orders, rules, regulations or other subordinate legislation is conferred on His Majesty in Council or on any Minister of the Crown then, if the power is expressed,

(a) in the case of a power conferred on His Majesty, to be exercisable by Order in Council;

(b) in the case of a power conferred on a Minister of the Crown, to be exercisable by statutory instrument, any document by which that power is exercised shall be known as a "statutory instrument" and the provisions of this Act shall apply thereto accordingly. (Section 1).

We are of the view that many of the "instructions", "directives", "guide-books", "manuals", etc., issued by departments may be, in essence, regulations, and we shall develop this point further on in this Report.

It has been suggested that the term "regulation" covers legislative statements of general application; "order", a particular direction in a special case; rule, a procedural law; and by-law, a regulation made by a public corporation for its internal management. No doubt the expression "order in council" has become sanctioned by long tradition and presents perhaps a further difficulty by being another term to describe the rule-making activity of the Governor in Council.

In our view, Parliament has not paid enough attention to the importance of clear and consistent terminology. Of course, it must be recognized that it is not always easy to draw a line between what is a legislative matter of general application and a particular direction in a special case. The McRuer Commission found a similar difficulty:

We have taken pains to demonstrate that there are no precise and mutually exclusive definitions of legislative, judicial and executive powers so as to dispel any idea that any clear distinction could be drawn when solving problems referred to the Commission.

The absence of clear distinctions raises problems of terminology. Probably in no other branch of the law or political science are the difficulties arising from terminology as great. (Royal Commission—Inquiry Into Civil Rights, 1968, p. 31).

Delegated legislation is thus known by a variety of expressions and one has to look at the content of a decision to see if it is a regulation:

The essential nature of a statutory power is to be found by examining the decision its possessor is empowered to make... But the important issue is not who does it or in what way, but rather what it is the agency has been authorized to do. (J. A. Corry, "Statutory Powers", in Legal Essays in Honour of Arthur Moxon, 127, at p. 133).

The main difficulty in practice is to distinguish between a legislative act (regulation) and an administrative act. The following statements show what is generally involved in the term "legislative" but also how very difficult it is to give it a definitive meaning:

The distinction between legislative and administrative acts is usually expressed as being a distinction between the general and the particular. A legislative act is the creation and promulgation of a general rule of conduct without reference to particular cases; an administrative act is the making and issue of a specific direction, or the application of a general rule to a particular case in accordance with the requirements of policy... Since the general shades off into the particular, to discriminate between the legislative and the administrative by reference to these criteria may be a peculiarly difficult task, and it is not surprising that the opinions of judges as to the proper characterization of a statutory function are often at variance. If a Minister has power to requisition houses and to delegate his power, and he proceeds to delegate his power to an individual town clerk, there can be no doubt that this delegation is an administrative act; but if he delegates his power to all town clerks, is the instrument of delegation a legislative or an administrative order? Fortunately, decisions in the courts seldom turn on this type of question alone; and when it arises it is apt to be glossed over. (S. A. de Smith, Judicial Review of Administrative Action, (2nd ed. 1968), pp. 56-57).

The meaning of 'legislative' and 'executive' may be determined by reference to the nature of the action. By this test, a power to make rules of general application is a legislative power and the rule is a legislative rule. A power to give orders in specific 'cases' is, by the same test, an executive power and the order is an executive order. Similarly, a power to take specific action is an executive power and the action is an executive action. The difficulty here is that of distinguishing between what is 'general' and what is 'specific'. These words, although they have some extreme and easily recognizable forms do not help to solve the doubtful cases. The matter is finally one for arbitrary decision. There is no answer, save one that is arbitrary, to the old and comparable riddle: 'how many sheep make a flock?' (J. A. G. Griffith and H. Street, Principles of Administrative Law, (3rd ed., 1963) p. 51).

It is often said that legislative power consists of the authority to lay down general rules for the future. The making of such rules is the main activity of our best known legislative bodies and we tend to take it as the indicium of legislative power. Yet we acknowledge that a private act of Parliament which lacks generality and makes rules for one or a few specific persons or situations is nevertheless legislation. Equally, an ex post facto law is still an exercise of legislative power determining retrospectively the legal effect to be given to actions already completed. (J. A. Corry, "Statutory Powers", in Legal Essays in Honour of Arthur Moxon, p. 134-135).

One of the most helpful definitions of rule making is that of Professor Fuchs, who concludes that rule making should be defined as 'the issuance of regulations or the making of determinations which are addressed to indicated but unnamed and unspecified persons or situations'. (K. C. Davis, Administrative Law Treatise, (1958) p. 286).

Your Committee believes it would be helpful to use the following description: a regulation is a rule of conduct, enacted by a regulation-making authority pursuant to an Act of Parliament, which has the force of law for an undetermined number of persons; it does not matter if this rule of conduct is called an order, a decree, an ordinance, a rule, or a regulation.

Your Committee must presume that the Parliament was of a similar mind when it stated in the Regulations Act that a regulation is "a rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation made in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by or under an Act of Parliament" (Section 2(a)). The expression "made in the exercise of a legislative power", or a practically similar term, is found in the Regulations Acts of many jurisdictions (Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, United Kingdom—for regulations adopted under the authority of statutes passed before 1947—and Australia). On the other hand, the New Zealand Regulations Act, 1936, avoids the problem (and thereby undoubtedly sweeps all sorts of documents within its purview) with the following definition:

2. Interpretation—(1) In this Act the expression "regulations" means and includes—

- (a) Regulations, rules, or bylaws made under the authority of any Act by the Governor-General in Council or by any Minister of the Crown or by any other authority empowered in that behalf;
- (b) Orders in Council, Proclamations, notices, Warrants and instruments of authority made under any Act which extend or vary the scope or provisions of any Act;
- (c) Regulations made under any Imperial Act or under the prerogative rights of the Crown and having force in New Zealand,— but does not include regulations made by any local authority or by any authority or persons having jurisdiction limited to any district or locality.

To conclude that a document is the result of the exercise of a legislative power and that it is a regulation, has very important legal consequences. It must be subjected to the Regulations Act procedures unless expressly exempted. Moreover, according to section 8(1) of the Regulations Act, a regulation that has been published in the Canada Gazette shall be judicially noticed. Further, the common law procedural rules of natural justice do not apply to the exercise of subordinate legislation. Finally, regulations cannot be held invalid for unreasonableness. Hence, important legal consequences flow from a characterization that is sometimes very difficult to make.

Let us now examine the definition adopted by Parliament in its Regulations Act:

2. In this Act

- (a) "regulation" means a rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation
 - (i) made, in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by or under an Act of Parliament, by the Governor in Council, the Treasury Board, a Minister of the Crown, or a board, commission, corporation or other body or person that is an agent or servant of Her Majesty in right of Canada or
 - (ii) for the contravention of which a penalty of fine or imprisonment is prescribed by or under an Act of Parliament, but does not include
 - (iii) an ordinance of the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories,
 - (iv) an order or decision of a judicial tribunal,
 - (v) a rule, order or regulation governing the practice or procedure in any proceedings before a judicial tribunal, or
 - (vi) a rule, order, regulation or by-law of a corporation incorporated by or under an Act of Parliament unless the rule, order, regulation or by-law comes within subparagraph (ii)

For the moment we shall not deal with the problem of exemptions.

A decision is not a regulation, according to the Regulations Act, unless it (A) satisfies each and every one of four requirements or, alternatively, (B) satisfies two requirements:

(A) (1). It must be "a rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation." (Section 2(a)). This can probably be satisfactorily determined if the parent Act, in its express terms, enables a "rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation" to be made under it, and the document is expressed to be a "rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation".

According to the Interpretation Act (S.C. 1967-1968, ch. 7, section 2), the word "regulation" includes the above-mentioned expressions but also:

form, tariff of costs or fees, letters patent, commission, warrant, resolution or other instrument issued, made or established

- (i) in the execution of a power conferred by or under the authority of an Act, or
- (ii) by or under the authority of the Governor in Council.

Obviously many of these documents, for example, letters patent and commissions respecting the appointment of persons, are not in fact regulations. The definition given by the Interpretation Act corresponds to a particular need, as was pointed out by the Minister of Justice (Hon. P. E. Trudeau) in 1967, when this Act was adopted:

We are discussing here an interpretation act which tends to give general definitions which will be applicable to the greatest possible number of statutes. In due course when we revise the other statutes, when they are before the house, I expect parliament will . . . achieve the laudable aim of reaching uniformity of definition. But of course we cannot do it by way of an interpretation act. All we are doing by way of the Interpretation Act is trying to get as large a definition as possible applicable to the greatest number of acts.

There will always be, for particular statutes, particular definitions. It is not the intention of this bill, nor could it be the will of parliament, I think, to dispense in the future with all interpretive sections which appear at the beginning of each statute and which mean to give particular definitions to particular statutes.

This is a general one. Indeed, I hope that when we look at the various other statutes we will tend toward a general definition but we cannot, I repeat, do it by this Interpretation Act. . . . If we look at section 2 of the Interpretation Act we see that 'enactment' includes a regulation. Therefore every time the word 'enactment' or 'enact' appears in a section it includes a reference to regulation. In that sense, therefore, although the word 'regulation' does not appear in a great many places, it is really included in the word 'enact' which does appear frequently. That is why it was found useful in clause 2(1)(e) to define the word 'regulation' in a general way which will apply to all sections of this act.

Incidentally, in rereading what I said the other night I noticed that I indicated that since 'regulation' is defined in the bill it would tend to apply to all other statutes. Of course this is not necessarily so. Clause 2(1)(e) gives the definition of 'regulation'. When it appears in other acts it will have the particular meaning ascribed to it in the context or in the definition in that particular act. . . . If such an order is given granting a holiday or part holiday or appointing a Queen's Counsel, it may be useful to know when the order takes effect. The Interpretation Act will permit us to say, if a day is mentioned, that it will begin on that day or, if an hour is mentioned, it will begin at that particular hour. The Interpretation Act will tell us whether it should be understood in terms of standard time or what.

These are a few examples. There are quite a few others which I could give if the discussion is continued. I do not want to prolong this debate. I believe I have given sufficient examples to indicate that the Interpretation Act is not increasing the government's power to issue regulations in the general sense. The intention of this bill is to show what the words mean, how they shall be interpreted in a case where the power does exist. However, Mr. Speaker, if the power does not exist under some statute or under some prerogative, then the Interpretation Act cannot create such power. If the power does exist under an act or under a prerogative, then the Interpretation Act tells us how the words we find in that act or regulation shall be interpreted. (Debates of the House of Commons, 1967, pp. 597, 828).

(2) It must be made "in the exercise of a legislative power." As we have already seen, this is the most difficult and crucial test (section 2(a) (i)).

(3) Legislative power must be "conferred by or under an Act of Parliament" (section 2(a) (ii)). Prerogative regulations are thus excluded. While it may be easy to determine whether or not a power is conferred by an Act of Parliament, it may not be so easy with respect to powers conferred under an Act of Parliament. Wherein do these differ from those conferred by an Act? Could "under an Act of Parliament" apply to regulations made pursuant to a sub-delegated power? This is difficult to answer. In fact, some sub-delegated legislation has been numbered and published apparently under the Regulations Act. See, for example, SOR/53-111 passed under a regulation made pursuant to a power conferred by the Fisheries Act, 1932. See also all of the regulations made pursuant to what may be considered sub-delegated powers under the Agricultural Products Marketing Act. In any event, the reach of the Regulations Act to regulations made pursuant to sub-delegated powers ought to be established beyond doubt.

The necessity of internal scrutiny, filing, publication, laying, etc., apply a fortiori to regulations that are adopted by an authority which is not the one designated by the enabling Act.

(4) It must be made "by the Governor in Council, the Treasury Board, a Minister of the Crown, or a board, commission, corporation or other body or person that is an agent or servant of Her Majesty in right of Canada" (section 2(a) (i)). It is clear that the "other body or person" must be an agent or servant of Her Majesty. Does this qualification apply also to "a board, commission (or) corporation"? This point ought to be clarified.

(B) (1) It must be a "rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation". As to this, see above.

(1) It must be a rule, order, etc., "for the contravention of which a penalty of fine or imprisonment is prescribed by or under an Act of Parliament". According to paragraph (vi) of section 2(a), the word regulation does not include "a rule, order, regulation or by-law of a corporation incorporated by or under an Act of Parliament unless the rule, order, regulation or by-law comes within sub-paragraph (ii)." The following excerpt from the 1950 House of Commons Debates (p. 3498) can be usefully referred to here:

Mr. Browne (St. John's West): I should like to ask the Prime Minister if he can make a little bit clearer to me the reason why the conjunction 'or' comes at the end of section 2(a) (i) and not 'and'?

Mr. St. Laurent: Because there are orders that we wish to have come under the provisions of this statute which are not made by government agencies such as, for instance, those made by the board of directors of a railway company with respect to the conduct of the passengers on their trains. Suppose they are regulations the infringement of which is punishable by fine or imprisonment under a section of the Railway Act. We want those included. If we used 'and' they would not be included unless they were orders made by the kind of government agency described in one of the subsections.

Mr. Browne (St. John's West): That is what puzzled me. Would you not call a railway company a corporation?

Mr. Knowles: Not the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. Browne (St. John's West): Oh, I understand.

Mr. St. Laurent: It is not a corporation representing the government.

Mr. Browne (St. John's West): Now I understand. Thank you.

Normally regulations sanctioned by a penalty with all the requirements in (A), though Mr. St. Laurent's words when the Act was first passed in 1950 would suggest that they were intended to catch regulations of a merely administrative character which provided for penalties. (Debates, 1950, pp. 3039-3040). Section 2(a) (ii) would also catch regulations made by persons other than these named in section 2(a) (i).

4. Expressed or Implied Exemptions from the Regulations Act

When the Regulations Act was first passed in 1950, it was said by Prime Minister St. Laurent that its ambit would be "sweeping" and that it was better to allow specific exemptions from its application than to narrow its range:

It was not possible to make a definition of regulations that would exclude the sort of thing one does not want to have in this [Bill]. For instance, it might be that an order given to an aeroplane from a control tower would be a regulation. That would be one thing for one occasion. This bill provides that the general rule will be that everything has to be published, but that the governor in council may except certain classes. In order to do so, however, that class or those classes would have to be published and tabled, so that members of parliament will see what is to be excepted. Then they can make such comment as they think justified upon the exception that will be made...

With respect to this definition [of regulation] I want to state again that we found it would not be possible or prudent to make statutory exemptions with respect to the application of this statute. We wanted it to include everything to make it necessary for us to call attention to anything that was not going to be governed by it. So we said we would make it as sweeping as possible so it would apply to every kind of order that has legislative effect, made under authority given by parliament; and if we wanted to take anything out of that general, sweeping declaration we would have to call attention to what we were taking out so if there should be any controversy as to whether it should be in or out the matter would be brought to the attention of hon. members and the public. This would apply to a great many things if we did not make exceptions. It would apply, for instance, to all the orders given from time to time from the control towers at our airfields. Of course no one would want those published in permanent form, for they operate once and are spent. We have quite a variety of things of that character which are spent immediately, and which will be excepted from the application of this act. (Debates of the House of Commons, 1950, p. 3040 and 3497).

Thus it was intended that the Act should have a general application with the exception of the Governor in Council's power to exempt certain regulations or certain classes of regulations. The exempting power is found in section 9 (2) of the Regulations Act. But in fact there are other express or implied exemptions as well, and we propose to consider them in turn.

(A) The power of the Governor in Council to exempt any regulation or class of regulations

Section 9(2) of the Regulations Act provides:

The Governor in Council may by regulation exempt any regulation or class of regulations from the operation of section 3, section 4, subsection (1) of section 6, and section 7, but every regulation made under this subsection shall be published in English and in French in the Canada Gazette within thirty days after it is made and shall be laid before Parliament within fifteen days after it is published in the Canada Gazette or, if Parliament is not then in session, within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session.

The provisions from which regulations may be exempted are those dealing with the transmission and certification of regulations to the Privy Council, their recording and numbering by the Clerk of the Privy Council, their publication in the Canada Gazette, and their laying before Parliament. As mentioned later, to exempt a regulation from the operation of Section 3 means in practice, according to the information given to the Committee, to exempt it from the Privy Council office scrutiny as to form and draftsmanship, and hence from examination under the Canadian Bill of Rights. Some form of publicity is given to exemptions made pursuant to section 9(2). This is what Mr. St. Laurent said on this question, when the Act was being debated:

We had quite a discussion over the necessity of even publishing the order made exempting such things because of their security implications; but the decision was that we wanted to give as complete information as possible, and that we would have to take the risk. If there was something of a legislative character that was not going to be published we would have to take the risk of describing it as an excepting order, and we would have to make the excepting order public so that all members of parliament could question the propriety of our doing it. We wanted in no way to call attention to everything that was not going to come under the general provisions of the statute.

Mr. Knowles: So that it is clear that there cannot be any completely secret regulations. The regulations themselves can be secret, but only by virtue of an order in council passed under this subsection which exempts those regulations from being published?

Mr. St. Laurent: Yes, and you will have to make the exemption public. It may be that in certain cases we will have to use terms perfectly innocuous to attract as little attention as possible to anything that we think should not be talked about; but nevertheless it will be on the table of parliament and if hon. members choose to talk about it, it will be their privilege to do so. (Debates of the House of Commons, 1950, p. 3500).

One must not forget that the Regulations Act applies to these exempting regulations; hence, for example, the Governor in Council "may by order extend the time for publication of a regulation and the order shall be published with the regulation" (section 6(2)).

The power given to the Governor in Council by section 9(2) has been used just once, in 1954, when the Regulations made under Section 9 of the Regulations Act (P.C. 1954-1787) were made:

Pursuant to section 9 of the Act the following regulations or classes of regulations are hereby exempted from the operation of section 3, section 4, subsection 1 of section 6 and section 7 of the Act:

- (1) Aeronautics Act—Orders made by the Air Transport Board that do not apply to all carriers or to a class of carrier.
- (2) Atomic Energy Control Act—Orders made by the Atomic Energy Control Board under the Atomic Energy Regulations of Canada.
- (3) Canada Grain Act—Orders made under section 11 and orders as defined in section 16.
- (4) Canadian Wheat Board Act—Orders made by the Canadian Wheat Board as specified hereunder:
 - (a) Orders entitled "Instructions to the Trade";
 - (b) Orders addressed to particular persons or corporations only, requiring them to do or to refrain from doing specified things;
 - (c) Orders adjusting grain storage quotas at delivery points according to the availability of storage space from time to time; and
 - (d) Orders providing for the allocation of railway cars available for the shipment of grain at delivery points.
- (5) Financial Administration Act—Regulations that deal exclusively with matters of internal practice and procedure within the Public Service, that do not impose fines or penalties, and that are restricted in their application to persons within the Public Service.
- (6) Indian Act—Regulations and orders for the control and management of Indian reserves and property, residential and day schools, procedure at band and band council meetings, and generally in respect of all matters of a local or private nature within reserves.
- (7) National Defence Act—Regulations for the organization, training, discipline, efficiency, administration and good government of the Canadian Forces, that are restricted in their effect to members of or persons attached to the Canadian Forces.
- (8) Penitentiary Act—Regulations made under section 7.
- (9) Prisons and Reformatories Act—All regulations made under the Act.
- (10) Post Office Act—Orders made by the Postmaster General for the guidance and government of officers and employees of the postal service.

- (11) Railway Act—By-laws, rules and regulations made by the Canadian National Railways under sections 290 and 300.
- (12) Railway Act and other related Acts—Rules, orders and regulations of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada made in the exercise of any power conferred on the Board by the Railway Act or any other Act.
- (13) Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act—Orders and regulations relating to the organization, discipline, administration and government of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, that are restricted in their effect to members of or persons attached to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

In the 1952-53 session of the House of Commons, a private member's Bill (Mr. Knowles') was introduced to amend the Regulations Act. The purpose of the Bill was to abolish the right which the government had under section 9(2) "to pass secret orders in council" (Debates of the House of Commons, 1952-53). The Minister of Justice in replying to the motion for second reading did not have time to meet the substance of the arguments made by the mover before the six o'clock recess. However, according to the Assistant Clerk of the Privy Council (Orders in Council), all Orders in Council are now available for public scrutiny. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence p. 222).

Your Committee is of the opinion that, in matters of national security, there should be no general exemptions from the requirements of the Regulations Act. Your Committee feels that it is important that every regulation coming within the Act be integrated, according to the Act's procedures, into an organized system of subordinate laws. However, your Committee shall state reasons later for exempting the text of some regulations from the simple requirement of publication.

This requirement would probably be less onerous on the government in practice than it would appear, because in your Committee's view many of the matters covered by the thirteen categories above are not of a legislative character at all and therefore not in any event subject to the Regulations Act (unless they impose penalties). In such cases the present exemption provisions have the effect only of making explicit what is already implicit in the definition section of the Act.

Your Committee therefore recommends that, except in the interests of national security, there should be no exemptions from the requirements of the Regulations Act other than as to publication.

(B) The regulations exempted by section 2(a) (ii)-(vi) of the Regulations Act.

Section 2(a) of the Regulations Act provides that "regulation" does not include:

- (iii) an ordinance of the Yukon Territory or the Northwest Territories,
- (iv) an order or decision of a judicial tribunal,
- (v) a rule, order or regulation governing the practice or procedure in any proceedings before a judicial tribunal, or
- (vi) a rule, order, regulation or by-law of a corporation incorporated by or under an Act of Parliament unless the rule, order, regulation or by-law comes within subparagraph (ii)

Mr. St. Laurent had this to say on subparagraph (v):

[Those regulations] are required to be published otherwise, and are available in a separate booklet from the King's Printer. That is the reason these rules of practice are made by the Supreme Court, by the Exchequer Court, by the Board of Transport Commissioners and by the Income Tax Appeal Board, and they are available separately for the convenience of those who practise before these tribunals; they can be obtained separately. It was felt that they would not be of general interest to the public at large. They are of special interest to those who practise before these courts but they are not of general interest to the public at large. (Debates of the House of Commons, 1950, p. 3497-3498).

It may be noted that the Board of Transport Commissioners and the Income Tax Appeal Board were considered "judicial tribunals". However, the rules of these two bodies are nevertheless published in the Canada Gazette (see, respectively, S.O.R. Consolidation, 1955, Vol. 3, p. 2676 and Vol. 2, p. 1870) as are the rules of the Canada Labour Relations Board (S.O.R. 1955, Consolidation, Vol. 2, p. 1981, as amended), of the Immigration Appeal Board (S.O.R. 67-559), and of the Public Service Staff Relations Board (S.O.R. 67-155, as amended). One can only speculate as to the meaning of the term "judicial tribunal". In any event, your Committee thinks that the Regulations Act should be amended so that the matters in subparagraph (v) should come under its operation.

Your Committee therefore recommends that rules governing practice or procedure in judicial proceedings should not be excluded from the requirements of the Regulations Act.

Subparagraph (iv) excludes from the operation of the Regulations Act the judgments of judicial tribunals.

Subparagraph (vi), when read with paragraph (i) is not easy to understand. Private corporations incorporated by or under an Act of Parliament evidently do not come under the operation of the Regulations Act, unless their regulations come within subparagraph (ii). In the 1950 Debates, Mr. St. Laurent gave as an example the regulations of the Canadian Pacific Railway which was not "a corporation representing the government" (p. 3498). It is difficult to understand what was meant by Parliament in 1950 when section 2 (a) (i) and 2 (a) (vi) were adopted. The inclusion in the Regulations Act of the expression "agent or servant of Her Majesty" raises a difficult question when it is remembered that a corporation is an agent of Her Majesty not only when an Act of Parliament says so but also when courts of justice say so. (For a review of the main criteria, see Regina v. Ontario Labour Relations Board, ex parte Ontario Food Terminal Board (1963) 38 D.L.R. (2d) 530).

(C) The regulations made under the authority of the Crown prerogative.

Prerogative legislation, discussed above, is excluded by the definition in section 2(a) (i). It must be noted that prerogative regulations would be caught by section 2(a) (ii) if they imposed penalties.

(D) Departmental Directives and Guidelines.

Your Committee's questionnaire contained three questions relating to the borderline between legislative power, on the one hand, and administrative or executive power on the other. They read:

1. With reference to the different types of subordinate legislation which come under the administration of your Department or Agency...

(d) Does your Department issue other rules, orders, instructions not included within the terms of the Regulations Act—which affect the public? If so, about how many, including amendments, were issued during 1968?

(e) Does your Department issue other rules, orders, or instructions, not included within the terms of the Regulations Act—which affect only your own Department? If so, about how many, including amendments, were issued during 1968?

10. Does your Department or Agency issue documents in the nature of policy statements or position papers which are used by your Department or Agency to implement policies under legislation administered by it? If so, please specify. If so, what steps are taken to bring such documents to the attention of interested or affected persons?"

In general, the answers indicated that the Departments and Agencies have issued a substantial number of documents coming within each of the three questions. It appears that the general reason the documents in question were not considered to come within the terms of the Regulations Act is that they were not called "regulations" and, also, were thought to be of an executive or administrative nature and so excluded by section 2(a) (i) of the Act.

As mentioned before, it is very difficult in some cases to draw a line between what is a legislative act and what is an administrative or executive act. According to Professor S. A. de Smith,

Other criteria for distinguishing legislative from administrative acts appear in ordinary linguistic usage. In the first place, every measure duly enacted by Parliament is regarded as legislation. Thus, if a parcel of land is compulsorily acquired by means of a Private Act of Parliament or a Provisional Order Confirmation Act, the acquisition is deemed to be a legislative act; though if the acquisition is effected by means of a compulsory purchase order made under enabling legislation, it will usually be classified as an administrative act. Secondly, departmental instruments or announcements which, although general in application, neither confer legally enforceable rights nor impose legally enforceable obligations are commonly referred to as examples of 'administrative' action. In this sense the decision to allow certain classes of aliens to be heard before a metropolitan magistrate on a question of deportation was administrative. Similarly, Circular No. 9/58, whereby the Ministry of Housing and Local Government invited local authorities to supply objectors and appellants concerned in inquiries into compulsory purchase and clearance orders and planning appeals with fuller particulars of the cases they had to meet, and also announced the Minister's own intention to make several important concessions in the light of recommendations made by the Franks Committee on Administrative Tribunals and Enquiries, was not a legislative instrument, because it was not made in pursuance of express statutory authority and failure to comply with its provisions did not afford a legal remedy to any member of the public; legal remedies became available only when the terms of the circular were translated into statutes and statutory instruments. The position would have been no different if the Ministry or the Minister had purported to issue mandatory instructions to local authorities in such a circular. Just as the Crown is without authority to alter the general law of the land by prerogative, so are its servants and other public authorities without inherent authority to impose legal duties or liabilities or to confer legal enforceable rights, privileges or immunities on the subject. Hence, the extra-statutory concessions to taxpayers that the Inland Revenue authorities announce from time to time cannot be relied upon in any court of law, although they have been styled administrative quasi-legislation. It must not be assumed, however, that departmental communications issued in the form of circulars, notes for guidance or letters to local and regional authorities, or press notices, are necessarily destitute of legal effect. If they are issued in pursuance of statutory powers which authorise the Minister to confer rights, directly or indirectly, on members of the public, and if the Minister does purport to confer such rights (as where a Minister who is empowered to impose restrictions upon his own powers or the powers of local authorities in certain transactions with members of the public imposes restrictions in a circular letter or other document), the relevant provisions will be recognised and enforced by the courts; and to that extent these informal instruments may be characterised as having legislative effect. (Judicial Review of Administrative Action, (2nd ed., 1968) p. 58-59).

It appears from the evidence gathered by this Committee that such decisions are made by the regulation-making authorities themselves. In his evidence before your Committee, the Legal Adviser to the Privy Council Office said with respect to ministerial regulations (the same remark could probably be made for regulations enacted by boards, commissions and corporations):

In a particular department they may just not send them to me, and if they do not send them, I have no way of knowing whether or not they are complying with the Regulations Act. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pages 223-224).

Mention should be made at this time of section 5 (1) of the Regulations Act:

A regulation is not invalid by reason only that it was not transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council, certified or recorded as required by this Act.

Subject to what will be said later on the question of publication (see section 6 (3) of the Regulations Act), the operation of the present system of safeguards depends upon decisions made by the regulation-making authority itself. The first decision relates to whether or not to name the document in question a "regulation" and to "make" it as such; the second decision is as to whether or not the document so made is made in the exercise of a legislative power.

The evidence before us suggested the possibility that a decision by a rule-making authority that a particular document is not of a legislative character is the way sometimes chosen to remove regulations from the operation of the Regulations Act; that could perhaps explain why the Regulations made under Section 9(2) of the Regulations Act have not been amended since 1954. The Department of Health and Welfare, in answer to question 1(e) advised:

It is almost impossible to distinguish in some instances between an instruction issued in the day-to-day administration of the work and an instruction that could be regarded as supplementing legislation. It is more difficult still in retrospect to distinguish between instructions which may affect the public and those which do not affect the public but which affect only the Department.

Reference can be made here to evidence given before your Committee as well as to answers to the above-mentioned questions of our Questionnaire.

It was maintained by the Legal Adviser to the Department of Manpower and Immigration, when reference was made to unpublished directions to immigration officers, that:

They are not exercises of authority granted under a statute to the Minister, they are explications, if you will, of policy for the guidance of immigration officers in the performance of their duties.

As the answer reflects, there are guidebooks, handbooks and manuals used by immigration officers and other employees of the Department in the performance of their duties. It is necessary, of course, from time to time to give an explication of policy and the manner in which these officers are to exercise their duties in the hope that it will be applied uniformly across the country so that there will not be differences in the application of policy. I think the answer reflects this. There certainly are these handbooks, they certainly do contain memoranda from time to time which are classified for policy reasons and are not published to the public. The question relating to the United States military deserters is directed at a policy directive of this kind which was indeed issued. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, page 197).

Here we have an admission that "policy" affecting a person's rights is explained to departmental officers but is classified information and not published.

In reference to Section 32(4) of the Regulations made under the Immigration Act (R.S.C. 1952, ch. 325, as amended) which enables an immigration officer to refuse the admission of an independent applicant who meets the norms set out in Schedule A "if in his opinion there are good reasons why those norms do not reflect the particular applicant's chances of establishing himself successfully in Canada . . .," another departmental witness said, with respect to the policy directives of the department:

. . . all that was given to our officers in the field was advice, if you wish, or some guidance as to what sorts of things would constitute the good reasons referred to simply in those terms of the legislation, in this case, being the regulations . . . In my judgment, it did not add or subtract from their legal authority or the authority granted in the regulations as to the exercise of their discretion. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pages 198-199).

There would appear to be no argument as to the "authority" of the immigration officer affected by a policy directive. However, it appears clear from all of the evidence that the manner in which this authority was exercised, which is the crucial consideration, was directly affected by the directives.

With respect to the classified nature of these directives it was said:

And as I recall, he [the Minister] took the view that traditionally this type of document which is within the Department has always been considered privileged and has not in fact ever been tabled in Parliament itself. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 200).

It may well be that after years of experience and to satisfy present-day conditions, some things that we have tended to view as strictly administrative should no longer be viewed that way. They ought to be dealt with in a different fashion, provided we recognize the pitfalls of tying the administrators of administration into such a bind that in the end they wind up not being able to do what they think should be done because the law will not let them. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 201).

The legal adviser to the Department of Manpower and Immigration also had this to say on the nature of the policy directives:

I would not say that these documents and these instructions in fact tell immigration officers how they are to make up their minds about these things. I believe the direction in question suggested a number of things which might be suitable subjects upon which an immigration officer might base his decision. In that sense, in my view, they probably do not amount to legislative enactments, certainly not in the sense that they tell those officers what they must do.

The officer brings to bear on the decisions he makes his own background of experience and his own views, but we endeavour to insure—and this indeed is the reason why most of these directives exist—that there is uniformity of operation across the country, so that the kind of thing that did happen in a few instances does not recur continually. It is necessary to give instructions of this kind and they are not instructions as to how an officer should make up his mind. They are instructions concerning the kinds of things which he might consider in making up his mind. And if a document of this kind was brought to my attention and if I felt any concern about it violating what was in effect a statutory enactment, I would have said something about it. I did not feel so in this case. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 202).

The following are some of the other answers given to our Questionnaire:
The Department of Agriculture, Question 1 (d):

Yes. These are largely instructions to field staff and modifications to inspection manuals. Considering the numerous commodities covered, there would be a few dozen per year . . .

Under the Destructive Insect and Pest Act, Section 7 the Minister is authorized to restrict the movement of vegetation, etc. under certain circumstances and notices are forwarded to affected people and staff about any such restriction. There were four such notices in 1968.

Farm Credit Corporation, Question 1 (d):

The Corporation issues instructions from time to time to its staff with respect to the interpretation and application of the provisions of the legislation which it administers and with respect to principles and procedures to be followed in the making of loans. Such instructions affect that portion of the public who are interested in loans applied for or made. These instructions, however, are not in the nature of Regulations and would appear to fall within the purview of Question 10 in the Questionnaire and are dealt with thereunder. (Emphasis added).

The Farm Credit Corporation, Question 10:

Yes. The Corporation issues a Lending Policy Manual with respect to the interpretation and application of the provisions of the Farm Credit Act and the Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit Act. This manual is intended to provide equitable interpretation and application of the provisions of the Statutes to farmers in all parts of Canada.

The farming public is informed of the general nature of the credit facilities available under the Statutes by means of information brochures. Those members of the public who indicate an interest in obtaining credit under either of these Statutes are informed in discussions with credit officers of the Corporation about those aspects of our Lending Policy Manual which are applicable to their circumstances. (Emphasis added).

The Department of Manpower and Immigration answered Question 1 (d), in part as follows:

Immigration Officers are provided with Immigration manuals for guidance in carrying out their responsibilities. In 1968 there were 490 amendments to it which come within the area of this question.

The Department of Manpower and Immigration, Question 10:

... There are immigration and manpower handbooks or manuals that are intended to serve as a guide to employees of the Department to assist them in carrying out their duties... in a uniform manner throughout the country and abroad... In addition, statements on matters of policy require to be modified and added to in the light of changing circumstances and as time goes on. Hence, a series of operations memoranda are sent out from time to time under the same classification as the Manuals, to be included therein, for the added guidance of employees and officers... In addition to these documents the handbook, where necessary, elaborates on these regulations to ensure their correct application.

The Public Service Staff Relations Board, Question 10:

Yes. Shortly after the Board was established, it issued a number of documents which it described as Policy Statements. The purpose of these statements is set out in an introductory note to the first of these policy statements and reads as follows:

... It is obvious that no hard and fast rules can be established at this stage on some of the matters with respect to which the Board will issue policy statements. It is the opinion of the members of the Board that their present thinking on some issues should be made known to employee organizations and the employer to serve as guidelines for the parties in the presentation of their cases to the Board. ...

These statements dealt with the following matters: the date when an application for certification was to be deemed to have been filed; proof of membership in an employee organization; nature of proof required to show that a council of employee organizations had been properly formed and that the constituent elements of the council had vested appropriate authority in the council;... Policy statements are not published in the Canada Gazette.

The Department of Transport, Marine Regulations Branch, Question 10:

Yes. We have issued a 'Concentrates Code' for the guidance of port wardens in determining what is 'approved practice' under Section 624(4) and a document entitled 'Ships Centralized and Automated Control Systems Recommendations' for the guidance of Steamship inspectors in determining what such systems are likely to be approved by the Board of Steamship Inspection. We expect that eventually, after we gain further experience, these will be converted into regulations. Our practice is to consult with the industry before these documents are put into final form and to make copies freely available thereafter. (Emphasis added).

If these latter documents can be converted almost verbatim into regulations, and there is statutory authority for such regulations, when it would appear that they are of a legislative nature.

The Department of Veterans Affairs, Veterans Welfare Services Branch, Question No. 10:

In a few cases Ministerial Orders are issued, normally to define the boundaries of items of discretion in legislation. In such cases, persons applying for benefits are counselled concerning this area in the same manner as if they were contained in the legislation.

The Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Question 1(d):

There are instructions not included within the terms of the Regulations Act which affect the public, issued by this Department, namely instructions and rules laid down for the appropriate use of National Parks facilities. In 1968 prior to the tourist season, numerous new instructions were posted having to do with such things as conduct in the National Parks, use of camp grounds, use of all other facilities in National Parks, for the enjoyment of the public etc.

One may query why these are not in the form of regulations duly published.

Department of Finance, Question 10:

In administering the Municipal Grants Act an Assessment Manual has been issued for the guidance of the field officers who check on the valuation of Crown property . . . Information concerning the interpretation of the Crown Corporations (Provincial Taxes and Fees) Act is communicated from time to time by circular letters to the heads of Crown Corporations and to Provincial officials concerned . . .

As a result of this oral and written evidence as to the multitude and scope of departmental directives, your Committee is not satisfied that some, perhaps many, directives are not legislative in character. This is a matter on which it was impossible for your Committee to satisfy itself because such departmental directives and guidelines are secret documents, available neither to your Committee nor even to Parliament itself. Your Committee feels that such directives, where they affect the public, ought to be published and subject to parliamentary scrutiny.

5. The Proposed Definition of "Regulation"

Your Committee recommends that the Regulations Act should be amended to provide a more inclusive definition of the word "regulation". Section 9 (2) would still enable the Governor in Council to provide for limited exemptions. We would suggest replacing Section 2(a) by the following:

2. In this Act,

(a) "regulation" means

- (i) a rule, order, regulation, directive, by-law, proclamation, or any other document made in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by or under an Act of Parliament;
- (ii) a rule, order, regulation, directive, by-law, proclamation or any other document made in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by or under the prerogative rights of the Crown and having force of law;
- (iii) a rule, order, regulation, directive, by-law, proclamation or any other document made in the exercise of a legislative power coming within sub-paragraphs (i) and (ii) and which has been subdelegated;
- (iv) a rule, order, regulation, directive, by-law, proclamation or any other document for the contravention of which a penalty or fine or imprisonment is prescribed by or under an Act of Parliament;

but does not include a rule, order, regulation, directive, or by-law or any other document of a legislative character of a corporation incorporated by or under an Act of Parliament, which is not a Crown corporation, unless such a rule, order, regulation, by-law or document comes within sub-paragraph (iv).

This definition casts the net as widely as is reasonably possible. All exercises of subordinate law-making power are covered (except those of private corporation), and, so that the matter is put beyond doubt, all regulations, etc., for the contravention of which penalties are prescribed, are also covered. Apart from private corporations, the identity of the regulation-making authority should be irrelevant, since we want to cover all such authorities.

Your Committee feels that in the interest of providing a basic safeguard of wide initial application the definition should be cast in these general terms. Your Committee recognizes that there are situations where the publication provisions of the Act may not be appropriate or serve any useful purpose. These cannot reasonably be provided for in the language of a general statute. They should be decided by the Governor in Council on an ad hoc basis according to his judgment of what is reasonable and fair.

It should be remembered, however, that the Governor in Council's decisions to exempt regulations or a class of regulations have to be exercised through the medium of regulations (made under section 9(2) of the Act) which will be subject to the general Parliamentary scrutiny which your Committee recommends later in this Report. Your Committee believes, therefore, that it has provided for a safeguard which is suitably all-embracing, while remaining flexible.

In the United Kingdom, in cases of doubt as to whether a regulation made under Acts passed before the Statutory Instruments Act 1946 is covered by this Act it is provided that the doubt may be resolved by a Reference Committee appointed by the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker of the House of Commons: Statutory Instruments Act, 1946, Section 8(1) (e) (iv); S.I. 1948 No. 1, Reg. II. Canadian provincial Regulations Acts contain similar provisions. In the Ontario Regulations Act, s. 6, it is provided that:

6. The Minister may,

(a) determine whether a regulation, rule, order or by-law is a regulation within the meaning of this Act and his decision is final...

The Manitoba Regulations Act, provides:

6. (1) Subject to subsections (2), (3), and (4), the Registrar may decide whether any regulation, rule, order or by-law, that has been presented to him for filing, is a regulation within the meaning of this Act.

Subsequent subsections provide a procedure for an "appeal" from the Registrar's decision to the Lieutenant Governor in Council. It may be noted that the Registrar has jurisdiction only over those documents which have been presented to him for filing. He does not have the opportunity of making a decision on those documents which may be of a legislative nature and which never leave the Departments.

Section 10 of the Saskatchewan Regulations Act, contains virtually identical provisions.

The Regulations Act of Canada contains no procedure whatsoever for determining whether or not a document is a regulation within the meaning of the Act. With respect to regulations made by the Governor in Council there is probably no problem in this regard. Such regulations have to be processed through the Privy Council Office and the officials of that office would therefore have the opportunity of deciding whether or not a particular document should be subjected to the procedures of the Act. The difficulty relates to regulations which are made by Ministers and by boards, agencies and commissions. As we have said, it appears that whether a document made by a Minister or by a board, agency or commission is processed under the Regulations Act depends upon the decision made at the departmental or board, agency or commission level.

Your Committee feels that the Regulations Act should prescribe a procedure, along the lines of those obtaining in the other jurisdictions described above, for determining whether a doubtful document is a regulation. In your Committee's view, the procedure should provide that the Minister of Justice be the deciding authority. The chief purpose of such a procedure would be to standardize, as far as is possible, under the chief Law Officer, all governmental decisions on whether a document is covered by the Regulations Act. These decisions should not be made on an individual basis within each department.

Your Committee states that it recognizes an obvious frailty in this recommended procedure. It relates to the characterization of a document as "doubtful". If a document is considered by a Department to be doubtful then one might reasonably expect that the Department would process it through the prescribed procedure to have the doubt resolved one way or the other. However, it may well be that there are doubtful documents, or even documents which are clearly of a legislative nature, which a department quite erroneously would consider to be of a purely executive or administrative nature. Such documents would never see the light of any doubt-resolving procedures. However, in your Committee's view, this unavoidable defect is not a sufficient reason why the procedure should not be instituted.

Your Committee should also point out that its recommended procedure is in no way intended to oust the jurisdiction of the Courts to decide, in a final and binding manner, where it is material to the judgment in a case, whether or not a document comes within the Act. Nor does your Committee intend to restrict the power to reconsider of the parliamentary scrutiny committee it shall propose.

Your Committee therefore recommends that the Minister of Justice should be charged with the responsibility of deciding for all regulation-making authorities which documents should be classified as regulations.

Your Committee expects that this recommendation would result in many departmental guidelines and directives being classified as regulations. But whether or not this is the result, your Committee believes that in any event they should be published and scrutinized by Members of Parliament. Your Committee therefore recommends that all departmental directives and guidelines as to the exercise of discretion under a statute or regulation where the public is directly affected by such discretion should be published and also subjected to parliamentary scrutiny. Interpretation guidelines which instruct examining officers how to exercise their vast discretion in admitting applicants to Canada as landed immigrants are a good case in point.

6. Criteria for Enabling Acts.

"In general, if delegation of legislative power is mischievous, the mischief must primarily have been done when the Bill was passed which conferred the power". (Sir Cecil T. Carr, before the Select Committee on Delegated Legislation (1953)).

Acts of Parliament are the main source of regulations. It is Parliament, on the recommendation generally of a Minister, which decides in each enabling Act a) whether power shall be delegated to make subordinate legislation; b) to whom the power shall be delegated; c) the extent of the power; d) the form in which it shall be exercised. Your Committee wishes to emphasize the importance of the care and attention which must be exercised when an enabling provision is being prepared for enactment.

Your Committee shall, shortly, outline ten basic criteria which it thinks should control the form and content of enabling provisions. However, we would first like to discuss certain very general matters which should be considered with respect to the preparation of all such clauses.

(A) The expression of the power to make regulations

One may observe with interest the variations in the form of statutory language which conveys the power to make regulations. The "standard" verbal formula is exemplified in the Regulations Act:

9(1) The Governor in Council may make regulations....

There is no equivocation about the nature of the power conferred by this provision.

However in some statutes the power to make regulations is not expressly conferred but is merely implied. Section 3(2) of the Experimental Farm Stations Act reads:

(2) Such farm stations shall be under the direction and control of the Minister, subject to such regulations as are made by the Governor in Council.

The foregoing implication is such that it leaves in doubt the nature and scope of the regulations which the Governor in Council is to make. Similar implied powers may be found in the Explosives Act, Section 5(2) and the Foot and Mouth Disease Act, Section 2(1).

It is fair to observe that the power to make laws should be expressly conferred and this can be achieved if the statutory formula employs the appropriate verb in the active voice.

In several cases the power to make regulations is more than just implied but the expression "make regulations" is not used. For example, see the Agricultural Co-operative Marketing Act, Section 4(1): "The Minister may... prescribe..."; the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, Section 2(1): "The Governor in Council may by order grant authority to any board or agency..."; the Motor Vehicle Transport Act, section 5: The Governor in Council may exempt any person or the whole or any part extra-provincial undertaking or any extra-provincial transport from all or any of the provisions of this Act. We would refer also to Sections 137(1) and 495(1) of the Canada Shipping Act.

In your Committee's view, it is important for the application of the Regulations Act and for other obvious reasons that, when it is intended that a power is to be exercised by regulation (i.e., it is, generally, a legislative power), that the word "regulation" find its way into the statutory formula. Where this is done much potential uncertainty can be avoided.

(B) The importance of apparently minor details in the language employed

There is much significance in the small phrases and prepositions used in enabling sections. In The Composition of Legislation (1957) at pages 149-50 Driedger says:

Power to make regulations may be conferred, by describing the specific regulation that may be made, by assigning a subject-matter in relation to which regulations may be made or by prescribing a purpose for which regulations may be made. The Minister may make regulations prohibiting the export of grain.

A section in these terms authorizes the Minister to make a regulation saying, as the statute contemplates,

No person shall export grain.

There is no authority to say anything else and no ancillary regulations are authorized.

The Minister may make regulations respecting the exportation of grain.

This is a wider authority. The regulations to be made are not described, but the Minister has authority to make regulations on a specified subject-matter. Ancillary regulations, and even a regulation authorizing a subordinate official to make a prohibitory order, would come within the authority conferred.

The Minister may make regulations for the purpose of prohibiting the exportation of grain.

Here again, a wide authority is conferred. Any regulation may be made, so long as it meets the test—is it for the purpose prescribed? If outside the statutory purpose, it would be ultra vires: but if within the purpose it would be infra vires . . .

Examples of enabling Sections of the three types just discussed are, respectively: The Canada Agricultural Products Standards Act, Section 5(1); The Aeronautics Act, Section 4(1); and the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, Section 3.

Your Committee believes that Mr. Driedger's useful analysis of apparently insignificant language should be borne in mind by Members of Parliament when considering enabling provisions in Bills. It is highly relevant to determining the scope of a statutory power.

(C) Conferring power to make regulations "for carrying out for the purposes and provisions of this Act"

Such a provision, or some variation of it, is found in most Canadian statutes. At page 148 of The Composition of Legislation Mr. Driedger says with respect to such powers: "Such power can, without any harm being done and without causing dispute, be given a fairly liberal interpretation if only administrative regulations are made. But a general power should be narrowly construed (either when drafting the statute or the regulation) if penal regulations are intended. If members of the public are to be punished, or deprived of their rights, by regulations, is it not better to confer the power specifically?" In his evidence Professor H. W. Arthurs said that such powers are "not usually held to sustain anything more than fairly routine procedural regulations." (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence.

page 25). Reference can be made to Frobisher Limited v. Oak, Canadian Pipelines (1956-57), 20 W.W.R. (N.S.) 345 (Sask) holding that the general language there in question could not sustain a regulation creating a substantive legal right and, by way of contrast, to Blackwood v. Bank of Australia (1874), 30 L.T. 45 at p. 47, where a general enabling provision was given a much wider interpretation.

A variation on the usual theme is contained in Section 61 of the Immigration Act which reads:

61. The Governor in Council may make regulations for carrying into effect the purposes and provisions of this Act and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, may make regulations respecting . . . [seven matters are specified].

The evidence of the Legal Adviser of the Department of Manpower and Immigration was to the effect that this general language was authority for Section 32(4) of the Regulations made under the Act—which is the most far-reaching of all of the provisions in the regulations. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, page 200). Briefly, this regulation enables an immigration officer to form a subjective opinion on the basis of which he may refuse a person admission to Canada. Your Committee has referred to it above.

The following are other variations on the usual theme of this type of enabling provision:

The Destructive Insect and Pest Act, Section 4(j):

Generally for any other purpose that may be deemed expedient for carrying out this Act, whether such other regulations are of the kind enumerated in this section or not.

The Emergency Gold Mining Act, Section 7(1)(j):

Generally dealing with any matter arising in the course of the administration of this Act, for carrying into effect the purposes of this Act and the true intent, meaning and spirit of its provisions.

The Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, Section 6(k):

Generally for the due enforcement of the provisions of the Act and regulations.

The Aeronautics Act, Section 13(o):

Providing for the effective carrying out of the provisions of this Part.

The Cheese and Cheese Factory Improvement Act, Section 7(f):

Any other matter deemed necessary for the efficient enforcement of this Act.

The Civil Service Insurance Act, Section 18(i):

Any other purpose for which it is deemed expedient to make regulations in order to carry this Act into effect.

It should be asked with respect to each statute being prepared whether (a) it is necessary to have a general enabling clause in it, and, if so (b) whether the clause would vary the standard formula “for carrying out the purposes and provisions of this Act.”

Your Committee now sets forth ten fundamental principles which it believes must be kept in mind when statutory provisions enabling regulations to the made are being prepared. To our minds, these principles represent desirable constitutional and legal values. In some particular statutes the desirable is not possible. The principles are, therefore, intended as presumptions, and not as hard-and-fast rules which should govern in all cases. Where the occasion demands, it may be necessary to depart from one or more of them. However, in such cases, the onus should be upon the Government to justify to Parliament the necessity for a departure from the usual norm.

Your Committee recommends that all enabling acts for regulation-making authorities should accord with the following principles:

(a) The precise limits of the law-making power which Parliament intends to confer should be defined in clear language.

Under this principle your Committee stresses the importance of precision in the expression of the periphery, or outer boundaries, of the law-making power conferred. Such precision reduces difficulties in determining what falls within, and what without, the scope of the power. This determination logically should precede the assessment of an enabling provision against the background of other relevant principles. It is unnecessary to stress that clearly written enabling provisions tend to avoid litigation involving the validity of regulations.

(b) There should be no power to make regulations having a retrospective effect.

Legislation, whether it be in statute or regulation form, which has retroactive effect is generally not looked upon with favour. It involves changing the rules after the game has started. Section 117(2) of the Income Tax Act is an example of an enabling provision allowing a regulation to be made having retroactive effect:

No regulation made under this Act has effect until it has been published in the Canada Gazette but when so published, a regulation shall, if it so provides, be effective with reference to a period before it was published.

At this point it is useful to refer to a portion of the evidence which refers to this provision in the Income Tax Act and to other principles respecting the preparation of enabling legislation. The following question was put to the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice:

Regarding other matters relating to what you find in the enabling legislation, do you have general working criteria? Say you are asked to draw up a bill that involved regulations which would amend another statute or define terms in the instant statute or give a power to subdelegate the power to make regulations or the power to enact retrospective regulations. Do you have certain rules saying that you will not allow this unless it is absolutely necessary?

He answered:

Absolutely, sir. All of these points are very carefully considered. You have given a number of examples, but let us just take the last one, whether the statute ought ever to confer the power to make retroactive regulations. I think you would concede that you go a long way through the statutes of Canada to find such a power . . . I am thinking particularly of the Income Tax Act which does contain a power to make a regulation which, when it is published, may take effect at a day earlier than the date of its publication. This of course is because of the very special requirements of that law to make regulations that are applicable to entire taxation years. So a regulation that may be made, for example, in January or February may have to be retrospective in its operation apply to an entire taxation year. But that is a very exceptional power, and that kind of power is not lightly bestowed by any draftsman. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 241)

The exception in the Income Tax Act, appears, therefore, to be justifiable, but at the same time it strengthens our belief that there should be a general rule, with an onus on the Government to justify exceptions to it.

(c) Statutes should not exempt regulations from judicial review.

It is basic that a regulation not authorized by statute is invalid. However, some statutory provisions attempt to regulate in one way or another the operation of this principle.

The Excise Act provides in Section 127:

All regulations made under this Act shall have the force of law, . . .

The French Convention Act, Section 3(2) provides:

Any order in council or regulation made under this Act shall have effect as if enacted in this Act but may be varied or revoked by a subsequent order or regulation, and shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament as soon as may be after it is made.

The case law appears to indicate that such "boot-strap" provisions do not turn an unauthorized regulation into an authorized one. See Wade, Administrative Law, (2nd ed., 1967) at p. 306 and Griffith & Street, Principles of Administrative Law, (3rd ed., 1963) at p. 118. Such provisions are, however, potentially dangerous, and, in any event, appear to serve no useful purpose. On this point see Driedger's The Composition of Legislation at page 148.

The Disfranchising Act, Section 11(2), contains a most unusual provision. It reads:

Any general rules and orders so made (by the judges of every court constituted for the purposes of the Act) and not inconsistent with this Act shall be deemed be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if they were herein enacted.

There is obviously a far cry between something which is not inconsistent with a statute, on the one hand, and something which is not authorized by it, on the other. The same provision can be found in the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, Section 83(2). It should also be noted that powers to make regulations which can be exercised on a subjective basis (see subparagraph (i) below) are often immune from effective judicial review. Any statutory provisions which indicate an intention to validate what would otherwise be an invalid regulation demonstrate an unfortunate parliamentary indifference to the legislative process, hardly in keeping with basic constitutional principle.

(d) Regulations made by independent bodies, which do not require governmental approval before they become effective, should be subject to disallowance by the Governor in Council or a Minister.

While independence is the hall-mark of the judicial branch of government, it should be quite alien to the executive branch. The government of the day should be fully responsible to Parliament, and through it to the people, for all subordinate laws which are made, whether or not the policy embodied therein was initiated within the existing departmental structure or elsewhere. On this subject the Report of the Royal Commission—Inquiry Into Civil Rights, at p. 356, observed:

Subordinate legislative power is a law-making power exercised by persons or bodies subordinate to the Legislature. In its exercise rules having the force of law are formulated as a result of a decision or decisions made on grounds of policy. In accordance with constitutional principles discussed earlier, the exercise of powers to make decisions affecting rights of individuals on grounds of policy by persons or bodies other than the Legislature should be subject to political control. As in the case of administrative powers, political control of subordinate legislative power should be maintained by conferment of power on ministers, either singly or collectively, who are responsible to the Legislature, or on persons subject to the supervision and control of ministers.

In his submissions before this Committee the Minister of Justice observed on this point:

There is a basis for delegated legislative power which is related to political feeling, for example, where Parliament makes the effort to defuse some area of administration of the appearance of political considerations. I think this is a contentious matter. It is done by the establishment of a board or tribunal, and this board or tribunal is given a mixture of administrative, quasi-judicial and legislative powers. The exercise of these powers, under the general policy laid down by Parliament is administered by a non-political tribunal or body thereafter. Examples of this approach can be found in the National Energy Board, National Transportation Commission, and recent broadcasting legislation.

The feeling is that where administrative decisions have a high political content, Parliament ought to ensure that politics is taken out of those decisions. I am not so sure that this really achieves the results that we are trying to achieve, because any time there is a choice open to an administrator, that is by its essence a political choice. Where an independent board or tribunal is not responsible through a Minister of the Crown to the House of Commons, then I believe Parliament has forfeited and the people through Parliament have forfeited, some of its rights to supervise those boards and to supervise the administration of government I think it is fundamental that a minister take the heat for every administrative act of the federal jurisdiction. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 228).

Some statutes already provide that regulation-making authorities require the approval of the Governor in Council or of a Minister. See, for example, the Harbour Commissions Act (S.C. 1964-65, ch. 32) which provides by s. 13 (1) that the Harbour Commission “may, with the approval of the Governor in Council, make by-laws respecting the management of its internal affairs and the duties of its officers and employees, and for the management and control of the harbour and the works and property therein under its jurisdiction,” etc.

Where there is not such an affirmative limitation, we believe that there should normally be a power of subsequent disallowance.

(e) Only the Governor in Council should be given authority to make regulations having substantial policy implications.

Out of 601 Acts surveyed for this Committee, 420 provide for delegated legislation. In 225 of these Acts or statutory provisions the Governor in Council is the authority vested with the power to make regulations. In 93

Acts, several authorities are vested with the power to make regulations, but in 74 of these Acts, the Governor in Council is among the authorities given the power. In 36 of the Acts providing for delegated legislation, the power is given to a Board or a Commission, but 17 of these have to be exercised with the approval of the Governor in Council. In 24 other Acts, the Minister of National Revenue is the authority vested with the power; in 8 of them, the power is given to judges; in 7 to the Minister of Agriculture; in 2 to the Registrar General, in 2 to the Secretary of State; in 1 to the Minister of Labour; in 1 to the Minister of National Defence; in 1 to the Postmaster General; in 1 to the Minister of Veterans Affairs; in 1 to the two Speakers of the Houses and in 1 also to the Houses themselves.

Those statistics confirm that the Governor in Council is in Canada the principal regulation-making authority. This fact was also recognized before the Committee by the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice:

I think you are correct again in stating that in most statutes the power to make subordinate legislation is conferred upon the Governor in Council as being the most reasonable and responsible body to perform that function. This will be particularly true, where, for example, the substance of the regulations have substantial policy implication. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 240).

Those statistics also confirm that in Canada much less use is made than in England of ministerial regulations and, also, that the power to adopt regulations is vested in boards and commissions perhaps a little more often than may have been thought.

According to the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice, the choice of the person on whom a rule-making power is conferred "is a matter of judgment in each individual case" (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 240). Nevertheless, your Committee wishes to emphasize that the first safeguard respecting the device of delegating power to legislate is that the power should be given to a responsible authority. This is the reason that your Committee urges that only the Governor in Council be given authority to make regulations having substantial policy implications.

This principle reflects the same policy as that set forth in (d) immediately above. It also appears to be in accordance with the present practice followed by the Department of Justice. The following question was put to the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice:

What considerations are taken into account as to the subordinate law-making body? For example, what choice leads to the Governor in Council, as opposed to the Minister, as opposed to say a government board or commission that may be operating in that area? I think a review of the legislation indicates that in most cases it is the Governor in Council. What determines that decision?

He answered:

I think the simplest answer that I can give you is that this is a matter of judgment in each individual case. I think you are correct again in stating that in most statutes the power to make subordinate legislation is conferred upon the Governor in Council as being the most reasonable and responsible body to perform that function. This will be particularly true, where, for example, the substance of the regulations have substantial policy implications.

If on the other hand we are talking about regulations that are purely technical—I have in mind now the sort of thing dealing with air navigation orders, orders that are made relating to the use of prohibited air space for very limited periods of time, for example, for air force manoeuvres—that is the sort of thing that we would normally regard as being not properly for the Governor in Council but a matter for the Minister to make orders about. One will appreciate that there is often a balance of convenience involved here, that it is somewhat more difficult to obtain readily, and quickly where necessary, regulations by the Governor in Council. It is perhaps more expeditious where the subject matter is of that nature, to provide that the Minister may make the regulation in question.

Further light is thrown on this matter by the Government's answer to question 23 of our questionnaire, which invited suggestions "respecting the improvement of the mode or process of conferring the power to make regulations". The Government replied:

For the most part, power to make regulations is under Federal Statutes conferred on the Governor in Council. This has certain advantages and disadvantages.

It is a disadvantage because it is almost impossible for the Governor in Council (which in Canada must be equated to the Cabinet) to examine proposed regulations even superficially, yet, under our theories of Cabinet and party solidarity, the whole Cabinet and party in power must defend them.

If regulations are made by Ministers, the same considerations do not necessarily apply. For the most part the Minister would make his regulations himself (with the advice and assistance of his staff and the Department of Justice) and he would take responsibility for them. He would, of course, be well advised to consult his colleagues or Cabinet on important matters of policy, but the ultimate responsibility would be his and not that of the Government collectively.

Your Committee believes that the Governor in Council should remain charged with responsibility for regulations having substantial policy implications. But your Committee also recognizes the fact that too many regulations are being made by the Governor in Council. Many witnesses have told your Committee that more use could be made of ministerial regulations in purely technical matters. The processing of technical regulations through the Cabinet appears to some witnesses to be a time-consuming formality. Thus, your Committee is of the opinion that the power to enact technical regulations should be delegated more often to Ministers. Your Committee agrees with the Associate Deputy Minister of Justice's statement on this question:

I do not think as a general rule that it is proper to burden the Governor in Council with the making of what I might call purely technical type of orders that do not have a policy content of any substantial nature. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 241).

(f) There should be no authority to amend statutes by regulation.

"Amend" is a word of wide import. Your Committee, for its purposes, intends to include the legislative acts referred to hereunder. It will be noted that your Committee refers to existing examples of each type of act:

1. The power to define words in the governing statute: the Adult Occupational Training Act, section 12.
2. The power to amend provisions or to add to provisions in the governing statute: the Narcotic Control Act, section 14 and the Dominion Water Power Act, section 12, (the power to pass regulations "to meet any cases which arise, and for which no provision is made in this Act"). Sometimes this may be an open-ended power to add to or delete from a statutory schedule.
3. To proclaim acts into and out of force: the Foreign Aircraft Third Party Damage Act, section 5.
4. The extension of the time that a statute is to remain in force: the Maritime Transportation Union's Trustees Act, section 24(1).
5. The extension of the act to a matter not otherwise covered: the Canada Grain Act, section 57(3).
6. The exemption of something which would otherwise be covered by the act: the Canada Shipping Act, section 12(2). (This Act is replete with this type of provision).
7. The modification of the provisions of an act: the Canada Shipping Act, section 94(7).

The reasoning behind your Committee's recommended principle is stated in the Report of the Royal Commission—Inquiry into Civil Rights, page 348, as follows:

Such delegation of legislative power provokes the comment that the Legislature was not sure what it meant so to avoid making up its mind it delegated the power to decide to another body.... Powers of definition or amendment should not be conferred unless they are required for urgent and immediate action.... The rule should be that the normal constitutional process of amending the parent Act should be followed so that the amendment may be publicly debated in the Legislature.

(g) There should be no authority to impose by regulation anything in the nature of a tax (as distinct from the fixing of the amount of a licence fee or the like). Where the power to charge fees to be fixed by regulation is conferred, the purpose for which the fees are to be charged should be clearly expressed.

This principle, insofar as it bears upon taxation by regulation, is in accordance with well established constitutional principles. Your Committee recognizes that many important aspects of schemes of taxation are governed by regulations and with this practice we have no quarrel. What your Committee objects to is the imposition of the basic liability to taxation by subordinate legislation. Your Committee is of the view that section 7 (1) (r) of the National Parks Act contravenes this principle. It reads:

7. The Governor in Council may from time to time as he deems expedient, make regulations for...

(1) (r) levying taxes upon the interest of any person in land in a Park in order to defray, in whole or in part the cost of the establishment, operation, maintenance and administration of any public works, improvements or utility services referred to in paragraph (j) and prescribing that such taxes may be levied with respect to any or all of the following lands, . . .

Insofar as the charging of fees is concerned (since it has some similarity to the imposition of taxes) it is important that it be confined to the purpose intended in the statute and that, therefore, this purpose be clearly expressed.

(h) The penalty for breach of a prohibitory regulation should be fixed or, at least, limited by the statute authorizing the regulation.

This principle, which your Committee considers to be an obvious corollary of the principle of parliamentary responsibility in the field of civil liberties, is generally honoured in legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada. See, for example, section 13(n) of the Aeronautics Act:

13 . . . The Board may make regulations:

(n) prescribing penalties, enforceable on summary conviction for

(i) contravention of or failure to comply with this Part or any such regulations . . .

but such penalties shall not exceed a fine of $5,000.00 or imprisonment for six months, or both such fine and such imprisonment . . .

In The Composition of Legislation, Mr. Driedger at pages 147-48 gives convincing reasons why the power to fix penalties by regulation, and not statute, is often necessary:

There is a further difficulty in setting out the penalty in the Act. One penalty must be selected for all cases. Yet some of the offences may be trifling and others serious. The tendency, therefore, will be to select a penalty too high for many of the offences.

The only statutory provision which we have found that departs from our principle respecting penalties but contains certain safeguards which are not standard is section 1(2) of the Austria Treaty of Peace Act, which reads:

(2) Any Order in Council made under this Act may provide for the imposition by summary process or otherwise of penalties in respect of breaches of the provisions thereof, and shall be laid before Parliament as soon as may be after it is made, and shall have effect as if enacted in this Act, but may be varied or revoked by a subsequent Order in Council.

(i) The authority to make regulations should not be granted in subjective terms.

Powers to make regulations can be conferred in objective or subjective terms. There is a vast difference between the two following examples in the extent of the power conferred:

The Governor in Council may make such regulations as may be necessary for carrying out the purposes of the Act

The Governor in Council may make such regulations as he deems necessary (advisable, expedient) for carrying out the purposes of the Act.

There are many typical examples of the way in which power to legislate may be exercised on a subjective basis.

The Agricultural and Rural Development Act, section 8 reads:

The Governor in Council may by regulations make provision for any matters concerning which he deems regulations are necessary or desirable to carry out the purposes and provisions of this Act. (Emphasis added.)

The Agricultural Co-operative Marketing Act provides:

4(1) The Minister may, . . . prescribe . . . (c) any other matter deemed necessary for the efficient administration of the Act. (Emphasis added.)

The Canada-Australia Income Tax Agreement Act, section 4 reads:

The Minister of National Revenue may make such orders and regulations as are, in his opinion, necessary for the purpose of carrying out the Agreement or for giving effect to any of the provisions thereof. (Emphasis added.)

In subject matter, undoubtedly the most far-reaching subjective delegation of legislative powers is found in the War Measures Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 288:

3. (1) The Governor in Council may do and authorize such acts and things, and make from time to time such orders and regulations, as he may by reason of the existence of real or apprehended war, invasion or insurrection deem necessary or advisable for the security, defence, peace, order and welfare of Canada; and for greater certainty, but not so as to restrict the generality of the foregoing terms, it is hereby declared that the powers of the Governor in Council shall extend to all matters coming within the classes of subjects hereinafter enumerated, that is to say:

- (a) censorship and the control and suppression of publications, writings, maps, plans, photographs, communications and means of communication;
- (b) arrest, detention, exclusion and deportation;
- (c) control of the harbours, ports and territorial waters of Canada and the movements of vessels;
- (d) transportation by land, air, or water and the control of the transport of persons and things;
- (e) trading, exportation, importation, production and manufacture;
- (f) appropriation, control, forfeiture and disposition of property and of the use thereof. (Emphasis added.)

But perhaps the widest of these powers can be found in section 4(1) of the Migratory Birds Convention Act:

The Governor in Council may make such regulations as are deemed expedient to protect the migratory game . . . that inhabit Canada during the whole or any part of the year.

The word "expedient" confers a wider scope than the word "necessary". It is interesting to note that, since 1962, no further use has been made in New Zealand, on principle, of such expressions as "as in his opinion may be necessary or expedient":

'Any previous restriction on the power of the Court to enquire into the matter is removed' . . . It is clear that the "subordinate" nature of regulations made under [the clause] is preserved and that the rights of persons to test the validity of such regulations in a Court of Law is fully protected. (Report of the Delegated Legislation Committee, New Zealand, 1962, p. 8).

The common criticism of these subjective provisions is that they enable regulations to be made under them which are virtually beyond challenge in the Courts, except as to their constitutionality. The extent of the control of the Canadian Courts of Justice over the legality of regulations is not so extensive, in principle, as that which is exercised by the American Courts of Justice. Under the American doctrine it is for the courts to say whether or not there is a rational relationship between particular delegated legislation and the governing statute; judicial review of the reasonableness of delegated legislation is possible in the United States but not generally in Canada and in Britain. This is why judicial review of delegated legislation is virtually impossible when the power is granted in subjective terms. This point is well made by Driedger:

An even wider authority can be conferred by saying:

The Minister may make such regulations as he deems necessary for the purpose of prohibiting the exportation of grain.

Here the Minister is made the sole judge of the purpose, and, in a practical sense, it is not possible to challenge the validity of the regulation. Thus, the War Measures Act of Canada provides that the Governor in Council may do and authorize such acts and things, and make from time to time such orders and regulations, as he may by reason of the existence of real or apprehended war, invasion or insurrection deem necessary or advisable for the security, defence, peace, order and welfare of Canada. The authority to make laws under the above enactment is virtually unlimited, and there is only a theoretical possibility that a specific order or regulation will be held ultra vires. (The Composition of Legislation (1957) pp. 149-50). (Emphasis added.)

Parliamentary as well as judicial control is made more difficult by subjective grants of regulation-making power. It would be hard effectively to challenge a ministerial discretion if the only standard of judgment were the Minister's own perception of the exigencies of the situation. Parliamentary scrutiny of regulations could not be successfully instituted as a general practice if all enabling provisions were subjectively phrased, and to the extent that there are any such provisions, parliamentary scrutiny would be weakened.

The Associate Deputy Minister of Justice admitted to your Committee that the purpose of subjective grants of power was to prevent "judicial" review:

There are many instances . . . where a power is conferred to take whatever steps the Governor in Council or the Minister deems necessary in order to accomplish a stated objective, and usually the way in which you control the breadth of the power is by narrowing the stated objective.

Suppose the law were to say that the Governor in Council may make such regulations as are necessary in order to accomplish a stated objective. Take that as the alternative way of formulating it. Then, of course, the regulation is open to attack as to the validity of its exercise, if in fact the regulation that was so made was not necessary in the judgment of the court . . .

On the other hand, if it is stated that the Governor in Council may make such regulations as he deems necessary in order to accomplish that objective, then presumably so long as the objective is carefully defined and the exercise of the power is not manifestly unreasonable or unjust in its application, then it will not be open to challenge on that ground, on the ground of its necessity alone. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 242).

To the further question "what policy reason would you have for not leaving it open to court attack?", the Minister of Justice replied:

Because it is a matter of policy. The government has to be responsible for policy and not have that judgment substituted by a court. That is the reason. (Ibid., p. 242).

And the Associate Deputy Minister added:

There are instances when policy on the law is really to accomplish the result intended without endangering the validity of what is being done by an attack in the courts. That is perhaps as simple and bold an answer as I can possibly give you. (Ibid., p. 242).

The McRuer Royal Commission recommended that "powers with subjective limitations should not be conferred except in legislation of an emergency nature" (Royal Commission—Inquiry Into Civil Rights (1968), p. 343). In its lengthy answer to our Question 23 requesting suggestions "respecting the improvement of the mode or process of conferring the power, to make regulations", the Government conceded that "the 'deems necessary' formula could be eliminated in all but a few doubtful cases." The Government answer goes on set out in more detail considerations respecting the different types of grants of power.

Your Committee has decided to recommend that as a general rule authority to make regulations should not be granted in subjective terms. The adoption of our rule would leave it open to the Government to justify its language in a particular case where it felt that subjective language was imperative.

(j) Judicial or administrative tribunals with powers of decision on policy grounds should not be established by regulations.

It is obvious that the establishment of such tribunals is of such importance that it should be provided for by statute.

We do not wish to rigidify the processes respecting the preparation and passage of bills through Parliament and therefore would not recommend any mandatory procedure to be followed with respect to the scrutiny of enabling provisions. However, your Committee recommends that the Minister of Justice should, where he deems it appropriate, refer the enabling clauses in any Government bill to the proposed Standing Committee on Regulations at the same time as the bill is referred to the relevant Standing Committee for Committee consideration.

The repeated reluctance of the Minister of Justice to refer such provisions to the Committee might become subject matter for debate on bills in the House.

In the same spirit of avoiding rigidities we have decided not to recommend such further principles as (a) power should not be delegated to make regulations involving matters of policy or principle or (b) which trespass unduly on personal rights and liberties. We would certainly hope that enabling acts would not allow regulation-making authorities to infringe the civil liberties of citizens, but we are of the opinion that they are not likely to do so if they conform to our ten criteria for enabling acts. Moreover, scrutiny of this general kind is already provided for under the Canadian Bill of Rights. We hesitate also to include a principle as broad as one opposing powers of regulation over matters of policy or principle, because of the interference it might cause to the main operations of the Administration. Again, we felt that our more specific criteria are sufficient.

Chapter 3

Advance Consultation

A common criticism of subordinate legislation is that, unlike Parliamentary legislation, it is, so it is said, made privately and without the benefit of public advice and criticism. We propose to examine the law and practice on this subject in Canada and in other jurisdictions.

Two Canadian statutes provide for a type of formalized consultation, or hearing, prior to the making of regulations. The Broadcasting Act, S.C. 1967-68, ch. 25, s. 16(2) provides:

(2) A copy of each regulation or amendment to a regulation that the Commission proposes to make under this section shall be published in the Canada Gazette and a reasonable opportunity shall be afforded to licensees and other interested persons to make representations with respect thereto.

The Grain Futures Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 140, s. 5(2) provides:

Before any such regulation is made notice thereof shall first be given to The Winnipeg Grain Exchange and The Winnipeg Grain and Produce Exchange Clearing Association Limited, and each of the said associations or any members thereof shall be given an opportunity to be heard in connection therewith.

These are the only two formal requirements which we have found in Canadian legislation respecting consultations or hearings prior to the making the regulations. With respect to the practice of prior consultation, in the absence of legal requirements, this Committee put to the Departments and Agencies the following questions:

11. Does your Department or Agency consult interested or affected persons when preparing regulations so as to obtain their views with respect to the scope and content of the regulations? If so, please advise as to the procedures used, formal or otherwise, for obtaining or implementing this consultation.

12. Are parliamentary committees ever consulted in the formulation of your regulations?

The answers to question 11 show that almost invariably departments and agencies consult interested and affected persons and representative parties through meetings, correspondence, telephone calls and even formal hearings. In some cases the proposed regulations are published in draft form for comment and criticism by those affected. This particular method of obtaining assistance exhibits, perhaps, one feature of making laws in regulation form which gives this form an advantage over statute law, since it is not the practice to circulate draft Government bills prior to their first reading in the House.

The answers to question 12 indicated, generally, that parliamentary committees are not consulted in the formulation of regulations. However, several departments and agencies advised us that the appropriate parliamentary committee has reviewed, with useful effect, existing regulations. During the presentation of its submissions to this Committee, the Department of Manpower and Immigration advised that suggestions made by the Joint Parliamentary Committee on Immigration examining the White Paper on Immigration in 1967 "were in large part incorporated in the resulting regulations of October 1, 1967", even though this Committee did not issue a report. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 178). Three governmental agencies advised us that they consulted statutory advisory committees, which, in some cases, are representative of interested persons, prior to the making of regulations: The Farm Credit Corporation; the Canadian Livestock Feed Board; and the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

The variety of comments made by members of the Department of Transport during this Committee's hearings is instructive both as to existing practices and their utility in varying areas of regulations:

From our experience, I would think, we would get a far better reading of the reaction of the people concerned through informal consultation rather than through a formal public hearing. That is my impression.

I think there are probably two extremes in regulations. One, is the regulation with an extremely complex and highly technical content which affects a relatively small number of people. At the other extreme there are those regulations affecting a large number of people, for example, safety regulations. If it were mandatory to have consultation with these large segments of the population, I think the input from these people would be very beneficial in formulating effective safety regulations and it also would bring to the attention of the public in a very striking manner, I think, by their participation, of the existence and the necessity of having these regulations. Perhaps I would not be prepared to agree that it should be mandatory to have consultation on all regulations, but on specific regulations of a simple nature that affect a large number of people, I think it would, indeed, be beneficial.

There are various types of regulations, administrative directives and that sort of thing that could be made, but one where I do not see advanced consultation as being too practical a possibility would be in the setting of rates and charges—nobody likes a rate increase. Just this past winter we determined an increase in rates and charges for the use of government wharfs which were approved around the beginning of December to take effect April 1. We gave lots of advance notice to the industry that these rates and charges were going up and in this way they were advised, but there were no public hearings or meetings at which we said, 'Do you mind if we raise this rate from 40 cents to 50 cents?'" (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pp. 172-73).

In the United States the Administrative Procedure Act, 1946, provides for certain minimum procedures to be followed by federal agencies before they make laws. Section 4 thereof provides, in part:

Sec. 4. Except to the extent that there is involved (1) any military, naval, or foreign affairs function of the United States or (2) any matter relating to agency management or personnel or to public property, loans, grants, benefits, or contracts—

- (a) Notice—General notice of proposed rule making shall be published in the Federal Register (unless all persons subject thereto are named and either personally served or otherwise have actual notice thereof in accordance with law) and shall include (1) a statement of the time, place, and nature of public rule making proceedings; (2) reference to the authority under which the rule is proposed; and (3) either the terms or substance of the proposed rule or a description of the subjects and issues involved. Except where notice or hearing is required by statute, this subsection shall not apply to interpretative rules, general statements of policy, rules of agency organization, procedure, or practice, or in any situation in which the agency for good cause finds (and incorporates the finding and a brief statement of the reasons therefor in the rules issued) that notice and public procedure thereon are impracticable, unnecessary, or contrary to the public interest.
- (b) Procedures—After notice required by this section, the agency shall afford interested persons an opportunity to participate in the rule making through submission of written data, views, or arguments with or without opportunity to present the same orally in any manner; and after some consideration of all relevant matter presented, the agency shall incorporate in any rules adopted a concise general statement of their basis and purpose. Where rules are required by statute to be made on the record after opportunity for an agency hearing, the requirements of sections 7 and 8 shall apply in place of the provisions of this subsection. (Emphasis added).

We find the exceptions to these minimum requirements are as significant as the requirements themselves.

Professor Abel, of the Faculty of Law in the University of Toronto, who has had considerable academic and practical experience in American administrative law, outlined to this Committee four different methods of obtaining advance participation in the subordinate legislative process in the United States—based substantially on the analysis described in Professor Ralph F. Fuchs' Procedure and Administrative Rule-making, 52 Harvard Law Review 259 (1938). Professor Abel said:

I do not think that categories of concepts can be rigidly adhered to in this connection, but he [Fuchs] indicates four general types: one, investigative, two, consultative, three, conferences, and four, adversary.

The first one, investigative, is the sort of correspondence inquiries that are addressed, when a regulation is intended, to persons who might be thought to be interested. The initiation by the department for requests for information to such other government departments or officials as it thinks can usefully supply information.

The consultative one stresses actually the existence of advisory committees, which undoubtedly are useful devices that can be employed. If there is not an official advisory committee constituted, the trade associations, unions, and other regularly operating groups in the area—who might have sentiments on the matter—are solicited and their opinions are utilized advance at the preparation of the regulation.

The conference method contemplates the assembly of a group of people at a designated time and place, or designated times and places, where they meet to discuss the possible content of regulations in a certain area.

The adversary one, as its name implies, suggests something in the nature of a formal trial or hearing with the presentation of witnesses and the evidences of records. They are in a somewhat ascending order of formality and formalism.

It is suggested—and I think that the suggestion is undoubtedly true—that the propriety of employing one or other of these methods or, perhaps, some variant, is dependent upon a number of factors. You cannot have appropriately the same kind of operation incident to the formulation of every kind of regulation. Such matters as the character of the parties affected, the nature of the regulations, the nature of the agency or department itself, and its personnel, in similar matters will govern, from time to time, the choice of one or the other of the methods. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 67).

He then offered some examples, which in his view, illustrated that advance consultation was not always desirable:

There are undoubtedly types of regulations where nothing in the way of advance consultation, or formal activity outside of the department itself, is required or would be appropriate. I have in mind, for instance, such matters as one sees gazetted year after year, and quite properly, prescribing the open seasons and the game limits for fishing in the various waters of Canada. This is something that must be handled that way but where the matter is repetitive, and where there would seem to be no necessity for going outside for any information.

Take another kind of situation of somewhat the same order. I know it is the policy of the Government of Ontario now—and I should think, perhaps, it is that of the Government of Canada, judging from a casual survey of the legislation—no longer to attempt to fix in statutes a prescribed scale of fees or money levels from time to time but to allow these to be fixed by Order in Council. This takes into account the varying values of money and the circumstances that there have been over the course of years which indicate something of an inflationary tendency. There is certainly no point where we are trying to do something like adjust a scale of fees from time to time to hold hearings on that matter. This is the kind of thing that does not adapt itself well to that.

There are other kinds of matters that one can recognize—although they would certainly be exceptional—where a sudden and grave emergency arises and here there would hardly be time to have any sort of a preliminary consultation. This again, must be taken into account. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 67).

Professor Fuchs, at pages 265-66 of the article referred to, discusses the possible variations in relevant factors, giving examples, bearing on the relevance of formalized prior consultation and hearings:

Administrative rule-making procedure necessarily requires adaptation to the varying circumstances under which general regulations are prescribed by administrative action. Thus a regulation applying to the railroads of the United States permits, if it does not require, an antecedent procedure involving a full hearing to the affected parties, whereas a rule of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation applying to thousands of unknown owners of small boats can scarcely be preceded by an investigation of the same character. It is one thing, moreover, to lay down a simple regulation governing a particular aspect of the use of streets by motorists, and quite another to prescribe the detailed accounting practices of a large group of utilities in matters of great technical difficulty affecting claims to large sums of money. There is an equally important distinction between regulations put forth with an eye single to the maintenance of a smooth-working routine in the conduct of a public service, and the highly discretionary code of financial controls by which it is sought to direct, in part, the workings of a credit economy.

A single official, moreover, who perhaps is only intermittently in touch with the problem to be governed, may proceed quite differently in arriving at a regulation from the way in which a board of experts or of representative character is likely to attach a rule-making problem. Finally, a regulation whose breach entails simply the loss of a minor privilege is quite different from one whose violation may result in a penitentiary sentence.

Between the extremes which these examples represent many shades of difference may be found. The aspects of rule-making which determine the significant categories for procedural purposes may, however, be grouped under the following headings: (1) the character of the parties affected; (2) the nature of the problems to be dealt with; (3) the character of the administrative determination; (4) the types of administrative agencies exercising the rule-making function; and (5) the character of enforcement which attaches to the resulting regulations.

In the United Kingdom the Rules of Publication Act, 1893, provided that public notice should be given to proposals to make "statutory rules" and the departments concerned had to consider representations or suggestions made by interested parties, who were made aware of the proposed rules by the public notice. This provision was repealed in 1946. Dr. Kersell has commented on this pre-1946 practice as follows:

All interested and affected parties were invariably consulted long before it became necessary to consult them under . . . the Rules of Publication Act, 1893. To then publish notification and wait the required forty days simply wasted time. (Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960), p. 8).

While there is now no general requirement in the United Kingdom as to giving notice prior to the making of subordinate legislation, informal and various types of formalized consultations usually take place. Significant use is made of statutory advisory committees which must be consulted prior to the making of regulations. The general practice may well be reflected in the following evidence which was given before the Committee on Ministers' Powers:

No Minister in his senses with the fear of Parliament before his eyes would ever think of making regulations without (where practicable) giving the persons who will be affected thereby (or their representatives) an opportunity of saying what they think about the proposal. (See Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pages 35-36(4). (Quoted on Pages 127-28 of Griffith & Street, Principles of Administrative Law (3rd ed., 1963)).

Professor H. W. R. Wade in his Administrative Law (2nd ed., 1967) at page 317, sums up the British position and offers his own views on compulsory consultation:

Consultation before rule-making though usually not required by law, is in fact one of the major industries of Government. That being so, it is doubtful whether anything would be gained by imposing more general legal obligations and formal procedures. At any rate, no such reform has been demanded.

It may be noted that the recent Report of the Royal Commission—Inquiry into Civil Rights (February, 1968) concluded that "advance publication of regulations before they are made is not required in Ontario as a necessary safeguard of the rights of individuals who may be affected. Compulsory antecedent publication and consultation would cause unnecessary delay and merely duplicate the time already spent in informal consultation." (page 364).

The advantages of prior consultation before the making of regulations is obvious, and your Committee therefore recommends that, before making regulations, regulation-making authorities should engage in the widest feasible consultation, not only with the most directly affected persons, but also with the public at large where this would be relevant. Where a large body of new regulations is contemplated, the Government should consider submitting a White Paper (as in the case of the White Paper on Immigration, discussed above), stating its views as to the substance of the regulations, to the appropriate Standing Committee, which might conduct hearings with respect thereto. It is essential that all relevant facts and viewpoints should be taken into account before regulations are finally made.

Having said this, we should state that we are of the opinion that no useful purpose would be served by laying down in legislation of general application minimum procedures respecting prior consultation or hearings which would apply to the making of all regulations. However, your Committee recommends that, when enabling provisions and statutes are being drawn, consideration should be given to providing for some type of formalized hearing or consultation procedure where appropriate, e.g. where all affected parties may be easily identifiable and the matters to be covered by the regulations lend themselves to a hearing or consultation type of procedure. It should be left to the individual enabling sections, where feasible and practical, to provide for the appropriate type of consultation procedure.

Chapter 4

The Drafting of Regulations

It is difficult to over-estimate the importance of good drafting in the regulation-making process. It is important that regulations be drawn with the same care and attention as statutes. We refer to the following observations on this point:

An administrator who keeps steadily in view the intelligibility of his regulations finds his work facilitated in three ways. First, it is very much easier to bring a measure into operation among people who understand it. Secondly, the area of controversy is defined by the elimination of mere misunderstanding and misrepresentation. Thirdly, but certainly not least important, it is only by carrying the terms of the law down to the particular case of John Smith that the administrator can tell whether he has covered the ground. Omissions disclose themselves, anomalies start to light, and the system, as it gains in adaptability, advances equally towards precision, completeness, and fairness. (A letter in The Times (London), February 22, 1935 quoted in Frankfurter & Davison, Cases on Administrative Law (2nd ed., 1935) p. 211 at page 212).

The importance of good drafting cannot be over-emphasized and the more resort to delegated legislation is practised by Parliament, the more necessary is it that its draftmanship should be uniformly good... Prevention is both better and less expensive than cure. If ten cases of ultra vires regulations occur to-day, and nine of them would be avoided by a general improvement in the standard of drafting, it is obvious that an important public advantage would be achieved, and one peculiarly relevant to the object of our reference. If we assume that legal proceedings result in two or three of the ten cases, the saving of expense direct and indirect which would result is in itself a public economy. But the value of good drafting is not limited to the avoidance of illegalities. In the ordinary life of the community what is above all important is that legislation, whether delegated or original, should be expressed in clear language. (Report of Committee on Minister of Powers, 1932, Cmd. 4060, at p. 50).

Finally, I repeat a point that I have made: regulations should be intelligible to the person affected by them... There is no more important principle than intelligibility when you are dealing particularly with laymen. (Professor H. W. Arthurs, Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pages 14-15).

Before dealing with our recommendations respecting improvement in the drafting of regulations, it is well to repeat the provisions in existing laws on this subject.

P.C. 1954-1787, made under the Regulations Act, provides in Section 4:

Two copies of every proposed regulation shall, before it is made, be submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council who shall, in consultation with the Deputy Minister of Justice, examine the same to ensure that the form and draftsmanship thereof are in accordance with the established standards.

The Canadian Bill of Rights, S.C. 1960, c. 44, s. 3, provides:

3. The Minister of Justice shall, in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the Governor in Council, examine every proposed regulation submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to the Regulations Act... in order to ascertain whether any of the provisions thereof are inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of this Part and he shall report any inconsistency to the House of Commons, at the first convenient opportunity.

Sections 4 and 5 of the S.O.R./61-16, made under the Canadian Bill of Rights, provide:

4. A copy of every proposed regulation submitted in draft form to the Clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to the Regulations Act shall, before making of the proposed regulation, be transmitted to the Deputy Minister of Justice by the Clerk of the Privy Council.

5. Forthwith upon receipt of a copy of a proposed regulation transmitted by the Clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to Section 4, the Minister shall

(a) examine the proposed Regulation in order to determine whether any of the provisions thereof are inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights; and

(b) cause to be affixed to the copy thereof so transmitted by the Clerk of the Privy Council a certificate, in a form approved by the Minister and signed by the Deputy Minister of Justice, stating that the proposed Regulation has been examined as required by the Canadian Bill of Rights; and the copy so certified shall thereupon be transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

6. Where any of the provisions of any Bill examined by the Minister pursuant to Section 3 or any of the provisions of any proposed regulation examined by him pursuant to Section 5 are ascertained by the Minister to be inconsistent with the purposes and provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights, the Minister shall make a report in writing of the inconsistency and shall cause such report to be deposited with the Clerk of the House of Commons in accordance with Standing Order 40 of the House of Commons at the earliest convenient opportunity.

It would appear from the evidence given to this Committee by the Legal Adviser to the Privy Council Office that the examination of regulations pursuant to the Regulations Act regulation is mainly as to legal validity, form and efficacy. He said:

Proposed regulations are submitted either to [the Assistant Clerk of the Privy Council, Orders in Council] or to myself for approval as to form and draftsmanship. At that point I take the draft regulations, try to review them carefully to understand just what they are trying to do in their proposals. Quite often that requires lengthy consultations with officials in the particular department putting them forward. On any particular set of regulations this may require three, four or sometimes ten meetings with the officials in order to get the precise intentions expressed in the regulations. On others they will be shorter and consultations will not be required at all. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 212).

As far as “the established standards” referred to in Section 4 of the Regulation made under the Regulations Act, are concerned, we were advised that these mean “high standards of legislative drafting generally”. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 219). (The transcript, which says “apply standards of legislative drafting generally” is incorrect). Nowhere are any “standards” expressly laid down.

As far as the Canadian Bill of Rights scrutiny is concerned we were advised:

It really comes down to a personal interpretation of the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights appears to be very clearly written. Two main considerations I have to apply which I find most often possibly not observed when a proposed regulation is submitted to me are, first, the one requiring that the person have a fair hearing where a right is going to be taken away from him, and second, discrimination of one form or another. Those are the main violations, if you will, that I find in proposed regulations. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 213).

Two comments may be made. First, it is fair to observe that not all lawyers and parliamentarians would share the same feeling about the ease of application of the Canadian Bill of Rights. Secondly, it appears that the practice is not to report an inconsistency with the purposes and provisions of the Canadian Bill of Rights to Parliament, as provided for in the statute, and the regulations made thereunder, but to continue to work with successive drafts of the regulation until the inconsistency has been removed. We have no fault to find with this technique, but the burden it imposes on the Department of Justice is considerable.

We were advised that in 1968 some 528 draft regulations were presented to the Clerk of the Privy Council and examined by the Legal Adviser. Nearly all of these drafts required revision or reconsideration as a result of examination by the Legal Adviser. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 226). The burden imposed on the Legal Adviser, who now works without any direct assistance, is all the more appreciated when it is considered that regulations may vary from one page to 150 pages and, as we were advised, some drafts require up to ten meetings with departmental officials.

It would appear, generally, that the present form of scrutiny, as far as pure legal draftsmanship is concerned, is serving a useful purpose and is resulting in a better quality of regulations than we would have without it. In answer to one of the questions put to the departments and agencies in this Committee's Questionnaire, we were advised that at some point in the drafting process of a regulation (generally not at the beginning), the Legal Adviser to the department in question, who in most cases is a Department of Justice Officer, either prepares or revises the regulation.

The Minister of Justice advised us, that "the Department of Justice performs primarily a review function in relation to drafting regulations. We perform that review function primarily under the authority of two statutes, the Regulations Act and the Canadian Bill of Rights... Neither of these statutes [gives] the Department a very dynamic or positive role at the drafting stage. . . We [have] very little to do with the preparation of regulations". (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pp. 225 and 227). The Minister further advised us that he intends to institute a programme of training seminars for the benefit of the legal officers coming under the jurisdiction of the Department. Attempts are being made to enlarge the Legislative Section of the Department of Justice and to get the seminars underway. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 226).

By way of answer to a further question in this Committee's Questionnaire we have been advised that the majority of regulations are drafted initially in English and are translated into French after they have been approved by the Legal Adviser to the Privy Council Office. In some cases, in the interest of speed, translation commences much earlier in the drafting process. Most departments indicated that there was negligible delay occasioned by translating a regulation but some answers indicated that there was considerable delay—up to six weeks, in some cases—occasioned by the necessity to translate regulations. We understand that the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism will be reporting in considerable detail on the question of the translation of regulations into French or English, as the case may be. The only observation which we can make at this point is the obvious one that, if insufficient qualified translation personnel are responsible for any significant delay in the making and bringing into effect of regulations, it is a matter which requires urgent attention in the way of increased staff and training.

Your Committee recommends that the Government should take all necessary steps to facilitate the expansion of the Legislative Section of the Department of Justice and to provide thorough training for legal officers in the Department, including those seconded to other departments, in the drafting of regulations. At the present time far too heavy a burden is placed on the Legal Adviser to the Privy Council Office. This burden should be shifted to the departments and agencies responsible for producing draft regulations for examination by this Office and this can only be accomplished by improving the quality of draftsmanship at the departmental level by the Department of Justice lawyers there.

We are of the opinion that the present procedure for examination as to form and draftsmanship should continue. It is a useful device to enable the Government to ensure, to some extent, a uniformly high standard of executive and administrative law-making. The subsequent legislative scrutiny which we recommend later in this Report should in no way relieve the executive from responsibility for producing laws drawn in accordance with the highest standards of draftsmanship.

It is of interest, as far as existing practices are concerned, to refer to a document prepared by the Privy Council Office entitled "Recommendations to the Governor in Council" respecting the procedure laid down by that Office to be followed by departments preparing recommendations which will result in Orders in Council of all types—executive, administrative and legislative. This document has some bearing on the drafting of regulations. We quote the following portions thereof:

2. The usual format for recommendations to the Governor in Council . . . should contain, in as brief a form as is consistent with clarity, a statement of the background to the recommendation, and the reasons for making it. In the last, executive, paragraph, the exact statutory authority (name of act, section, subsection) should be cited, and a complete statement of the action contemplated, following as closely as possible the phraseology of the relevant legislation.

4. . . . It is necessary for Council to understand fully the purpose of the action they are being asked to approve. Departments should therefore send with a recommendation of this kind a very short explanatory memorandum. Such a memorandum should clearly indicate and explain the change from the previous situation which the recommendation is designed to achieve, (e.g. an increase in membership of a government board resulting from changes in legislation; an increase or decrease in licence fees and the reason for it).

12. Departmental officials preparing recommendations to the Governor in Council should consult with the legal adviser of their department to ensure that recommendations meet the requirements of the law.

15. Recommendations in this category should not be submitted to the Minister for signature until they have been approved as to form and draftsmanship by the legal adviser to the Privy Council Office.

16. After a submission in this category has been approved as to form and draftsmanship, it should then be presented to the Minister for signature. After Ministerial approval it should be forwarded to the Privy Council Office together with five copies in English and two in French of the schedule of regulations or amendments to regulations. (Previously the requirement was for five copies in English and one in French). These copies are required in order to process the resulting order in council for publication in the French and English editions of the Canada Gazette Part II. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pages 246, 247, 248.) (Emphasis added.)

We note with interest the instruction contained in recommendation 2 as to the citing of the precise statutory authority for the action contemplated. We are of the opinion that it is more than just a matter of good form for a regulation, itself, to contain a statement of the specific statutory section(s) or sub-section(s), as the case may be, which authorize the making of the regulation. This practice is not always followed: see Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 223.

Two other points relating to the substantive aspects of drafting should be mentioned. First, the draftsmen of regulations pursuant to existing statutes should pay close attention to the criteria respecting the drafting of enabling provisions which we refer to in Chapter 2 of this Report. While some of these existing provisions may be defectively drawn, according to our recommended criteria, this should not afford an excuse for the making of defective (from our point of view) regulations thereunder. Secondly, the criteria which we recommend with respect to the work of the proposed Standing Committee on Regulations should also, obviously, serve as a guide to draftsmen of regulations. The fewer the confrontations with this Committee the more effectively our proposed system will be working.

Your Committee therefore recommends that the present examination of regulations by the Privy Council Office as to form and draftsmanship and by the Department of Justice as to conformity with the Canadian Bill of Rights should be continued, and that the scrutiny by the Department of Justice should also take into account the other criteria for regulations proposed in this Report.

Chapter 5

Commencement of Operation of Regulations

There is nothing in the Regulations Act respecting the commencement of operation of regulations. Reference has to be made to the Interpretation Act, S.C., 1967-68, c. 7, s. 6(2) which provides:

(2) Every enactment that is not expressed to come into force on a particular day shall be construed as coming into force upon the expiration of the day immediately before the day the enactment was enacted.

By virtue of section 2 (1) of the Interpretation Act "enactment" means an Act or a regulation or any portion of an Act or regulation, and "enact" includes to "issue, make or establish" (emphasis added). It is, therefore, clear that unless the enabling statute, or the regulation itself, states that the regulation is to come into force on a particular day, it shall come into force at midnight preceding the day it is made.

With the exception of regulations made in the form of orders in council, which require the signature of the Governor General, there is, generally, little, if any, formality associated with the making and coming into force of a regulation. Regulations become operative law upon their execution by the regulation-making authority and without any further procedure. This lack of formality ill accords with the degree of openness which we believe should be associated with law-making, particularly having regard to the possibility that there may have been no antecedent publicity respecting the making of the regulation. One may contrast the publicity given to Bills passing through Parliament and the formal act of Royal assent which "shall be the date of commencement of the Act, if no other date of commencement is therein provided." (Interpretation Act, s. 5(1)).

Further, in the realm of subordinate legislation itself, this informality may be contrasted with procedures applicable in some, if not all, of the provinces in Canada and those in the United Kingdom. The Regulations Act of Manitoba (R.S.M. 1954, c. 224, s. 3) provides:

3. (1) Every regulation or a certified copy thereof shall be filed in duplicate with the registrar.

(2) Unless a later day is provided, a regulation shall come into force on the day it is filed with the registrar and in no case shall such regulation come into force before the day of filing.

(3) Unless expressly provided to the contrary in another Act, a regulation that is not filed as herein provided shall have no effect . . . (Emphasis added).

See also section 5 of the Regulations Act of Saskatchewan (R.S.S. 1965, ch. 420) and sections 3 and 4 of the Regulations Act of Ontario (R.S.O. 1960, ch. 349) both of which contain similar but more elastic provisions with respect to the coming into force of a regulation.

In the United Kingdom the Statutory Instruments Act, 1946 provides:

4. (1) Where by this Act or any Act passed after the commencement of this Act any statutory instrument is required to be laid before Parliament after being made, a copy of the instrument shall be laid before each House of Parliament and, subject as hereinafter provided, shall be so laid before the instrument comes into operation:

Provided that if it is essential that any such instrument should come into operation before copies thereof can be so laid as aforesaid, the instrument may be made so as to come into operation before it has been so laid; and where any statutory instrument comes into operation before it is laid before Parliament, notification shall forthwith be sent to the Lord Chancellor and to the Speaker of the House of Commons drawing attention to the fact that copies of the instrument have yet to be laid before Parliament and explaining why such copies were not so laid before the instrument came into operation. (Emphasis added).

In Canada there is legislative machinery respecting the processing of regulations after they have been made. The Regulations Act provides:

3. (1) Every regulation-making authority shall, within seven days after it makes a regulation, transmit copies of the regulation in English and in French to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

(2) A copy of a regulation transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council under subsection (1), other than one made by the Governor in Council or the Treasury Board, shall be certified by the regulation-making authority to be a true copy of the regulation.

4. (1) The Clerk of the Privy Council shall maintain a record in which he shall record the regulations transmitted to him under Section 3 and the regulations made by the Governor in Council or the Treasury Board.

(2) Every regulation recorded under this section shall bear a number assigned to it by the Clerk of the Privy Council, but all copies of the same regulation, whether they are in English or in French, shall bear the same number.

5. (1) A regulation is not invalid by reason only that it was not transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council, certified or recorded as required by this Act . . .

P.C. 1954-1787, (S.O.R. Consolidation 1955, p. 2676) made under the Regulations Act, provides:

5. Three copies in English and one in French of every regulation, one copy of which shall be certified, shall be transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council, in accordance with section 3 of the Act.

6. When received and recorded pursuant to section 3 and 4 of the Act, regulations shall have affixed to them by the Clerk of the Privy Council the designation 'SOR' followed by an appropriate number.

Your Committee recommends that the Regulations Act should provide, as a general rule, that a regulation shall not come into force until the date on which it is transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council. (In Chapter 6 we shall consider the provision for, in certain cases, later dates for the commencement of operation or regulations). This would not appear to impose any undue burden on the Administration as, in most cases, a regulation could be so transmitted immediately upon making. It would involve an improvement over our existing law in that a regulation would become a document of public record and integrated into an organized accumulation of delegated public law from the time of its commencement.

There may be cases where, by reason of geographic distances or other factors, it would not be possible to transmit immediately to the Clerk of the Privy Council a regulation concerned with, say, a situation of an emergency nature. In such cases, if the regulation so provided, it should come into effect upon its making and be transmitted to the Clerk "as soon as possible".

Your Committee therefore recommends that in cases of emergency a regulation might come into effect at the time of making. As a precedent for his type of provision reference can usefully be made to the provision to section 4(1) of the Statutory Instruments Act, 1946, set forth above.

Chapter 6

The Publication of Regulations

1. Whether to Publish

The importance of publishing regulations is obvious. If the general purpose of law is to make human actions conform to certain standards then there must be adequate publicity given to laws of all kinds before compliance therewith can be reasonably expected.

We have indicated above in Chapter 2 the ways in which a regulation may avoid being "caught" by the Regulations Act, and hence, being published. We have referred to, and quoted, the Regulations Act, section 9(2) and section 9 of the Regulation made thereunder which provides for the exemption from publication, and from other Regulations Act requirements, of regulations made under thirteen particular statutes. As noted, we understand that the Privy Council Office takes the view that any regulations referred to in section 9 of the Regulation are also exempt from the form and draftsmanship examination required by section 3 of the Regulation. According to the strict language of section 9 of the Regulation, this does not necessarily follow. This approach of the Privy Council Office also has the effect of allowing exempted regulations to avoid Canadian Bill of Rights scrutiny.

The Government has presented us with a combined answer to questions 16 and 18 of our questionnaire. Question 16 asked: "What circumstances do you envisage would make it necessary to extend the time for publication of a regulation under section 6(2) of the Regulations Act?" Question 18 read: "What circumstances would, in your view, justify the exemption from publication of a regulation?"

The Government's answer is as follows:

Extension of the time normally allowed for publication of a regulation under section 6(1) of the Regulations Act, R.S.C. 1952, Chapter 235 and exemption from publication of a regulation may from time to time be justified in the following circumstances:

- (a) where notification or other form of communication would be more appropriate;
- (b) where the safety and security of the country or part of it might be adversely affected;

- (c) where information might be disseminated which could deleteriously affect Canada's foreign relations;
- (d) where the regulation involves the distribution of information which might adversely affect the relations of the provinces inter se;
- (e) where the regulations are of limited application and involve the granting of privileges or the relaxation of rules;
- (f) where other conditions from time to time necessitate that a regulation should be exempt from publication or that its publication be postponed provided that the provisions of the Regulations Act are complied with;
- (g) an extension of the time normally allowed for the publication of a regulation may be necessitated where the matter is one of urgency.

We are prepared to accept the validity of all these circumstances, but we believe that in such cases, as we said above in Chapter 2, there should not be a corresponding exemption from the other requirements of the Regulations Act.

In other words, your Committee recommends that section 9 of the Regulations Act, which allows exemptions from the provisions of that Act, should be amended to provide for exemptions from publication and time of publication only. Hence, all of the other provisions of the Regulations Act, and the Regulations made thereunder, would continue to apply: the examination as to form and draftsmanship (including Canadian Bill of Rights scrutiny), transmittal, certification, recording, numbering and laying. Regulations which are expressly exempted from publication only should be described in Votes and Proceedings of the House of Commons as outlined in Chapter 7, following their laying before the House. The information respecting such regulations which we recommend should be set forth in Votes and Proceedings should be also published in the Canada Gazette. They would then be available for examination notwithstanding their non-publication.

As mentioned above, we were assured by the Assistant Clerk of Privy Council (Orders in Council) that there are, as far as his office is concerned, no Orders in Council which are secret, regardless of non-publication. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, page 222). This is as it should be, and all regulations, regardless of the regulation-making authority, should stand in this position. It is useful to refer to the provisions of section 9 of the Regulations Act of Saskatchewan (R.S.S. 1965, c. 420) which provides as follows:

9. (1) During the regular office hours of the registrar and upon payment of the prescribed fees, every person shall have access to and be entitled to inspect any regulation filed with the registrar.
- (2) No person shall be required, as a condition of his right of inspection under subsection (1), to disclose the name of the person for or in respect of whom such access or inspection is sought.
- (3) The registrar shall, upon request accompanied by payment of the prescribed fees, produce for inspection or furnish a copy or a certified copy, as the case may require, of any regulation filed with him.
- (4) The fees payable for services under this section shall be such as may be prescribed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

We are of the opinion that, subject to one qualification, a similar provision should be enacted in the Regulations Act. We do not believe that a fee should be charged for the inspection of a regulation. It is, however, reasonable that an appropriation fee should be paid to cover the cost of obtaining a copy thereof. Since the great bulk of regulations will be published in the Canada Gazette, we feel that little resort will be held to the rights conferred by such a provision. Nevertheless, we believe that the right to inspect regulations should be statutorily guaranteed with as little qualification as possible. A statement should be inserted at the beginning of Part II of each number of the Canada Gazette to the effect that even unpublished regulations may be examined and copies obtained at the Office of the Clerk of the Privy Council.

Your Committee therefore recommends that all regulations, regardless of the regulation-making authority, should be available for public inspection.

2. The Effect of Publication on the Commencement of Operation of Regulations

As the law now stands, the general rule is that regulations become effective when made (See Chapter 5 above). Section 6 (1) of the Regulations Act requires that every regulation shall be published in English and in French in the Canada Gazette within thirty days after it is made. This, again, is the general rule. Individual statutes often require regulations to be published at times earlier than 30 days. See, for example, the Army Benevolent Fund Act, section 12 ("when made"); the Broadcasting Act, section 27(2) ("forthwith"); the Central Mortgage and Housing Act, section 11(4) ("upon becoming effective"); the Export Credits Insurance Act, section 12(2) ("upon becoming effective"); and the Extradition Act, section 7 ("as soon as possible"). Some statutes specifically provide that a regulation shall not have effect until it is published: the Canadian Forces Act, section 195 (2); the Estate Tax Act, section 52(2) and the Income Tax Act, section 117(2) (although both these statutes make provision for the retro-active operation of regulations); the Hamilton Harbour Commissioners Act, section 20(2); the Immigration Appeal Board Act, section 8(2); and the Public Service Staff Relations Board Act, section 19(2). Thus, the general position is that regulations are in effect for up to thirty days before they are published, except where individual statutes or regulations provide otherwise. A further exception can be found in section 6(3) of the Regulations Act which reads:

(3) No regulation is invalid by reason only that it was not published in the Canada Gazette, but no person shall be convicted for an offence consisting of a contravention of any regulation that was not published in the Canada Gazette unless:

- (a) the regulation was, pursuant to section 9, exempted from the operation of sub-section (1), or the regulation expressly provides that it shall operate according to its terms prior to publication in the Canada Gazette, and
- (b) it is proved that at the date of the alleged contravention reasonable steps had been taken for the purpose of bringing the purport of the regulation to the notice of the public, or the persons likely to be affected by it, or of the person charged.

Having regard to the recommendations which we shall make respecting the principles bearing on the connection between publication and operation, we are of the opinion that this subsection, generally, provides adequate safeguards. However, we feel that it would be improved if clause (b) were amended by inserting "reasonable steps had been taken for the purpose of bringing the terms of the relevant provision in the regulation to the notice of the public" were inserted in the place of "reasonable steps had been taken for the purpose of bringing the purport of the regulation to the notice of the public".

The safeguard afforded by section 6(3) would be buttressed if more enabling provisions provided that regulations made thereunder should not come into effect until publication or some stipulated period of time after publication. Further, even in the absence of such a provision in the enabling legislation, regulations themselves should, where possible, provide that they are not to come into effect until publication or some later point in time.

Your Committee put the following question to the departments and agencies of the Government:

3. What would be the administrative or regulatory effect (or what difficulties of any type would you envisage as far as the work of your Department or Agency is concerned) of a statutory requirement that no regulations made under legislation administered by your Department or Agency would become law until:

(a) published in the Canada Gazette; or

The answers to this question indicate conclusively that the effect of such requirements depends entirely on the nature of the regulation in question. Some regulations are of a benefit-conferring nature only. They can only benefit affected persons. The answers indicated that there would be no useful purpose delaying the operation of such regulations until they were published. Other regulations are required to be passed quickly in the interest of public health and safety. To require such regulations as these to be published before they become effective could well defeat the purpose of delegating the power to make such regulations in the first place. Some regulations, of their nature, have to become effective when made. It is useful to reproduce, by way of example, the answer of the Department of Finance to question 3:

In some cases such as regulations dealing with matters of procedure under the guaranteed loan legislation, a statutory requirement that a regulation could not become law until published or until some time after publication would probably have no harmful effect other than to further delay the already time-consuming process of enacting subsidiary legislation. There are, however, certain areas where such delays could be harmful. The following are some examples:

- (i) Because of the nature of capital markets and the need for last minute decisions to tailor the Government's borrowing program to market conditions, it would not be possible, administratively, to wait until Orders in Council passed under Part IV of the Financial Administration Act authorizing borrowings had been published in the Canada Gazette. A day or so after such Orders are passed, the terms and conditions of new bond issues are made public. It is important at that stage to proceed expeditiously with the issue and there can be no suggestion that the terms and conditions of the issue could be changed.

- (ii) The guaranteed loans legislation provide that interest rates are to be prescribed by regulations. It would seem essential that once an interest rate has been established, it should be applied immediately. Otherwise the lending institutions, knowing of a pending increase, would suspend further loans until the new rate became effective.
- (iii) Another example relates to the imposition or removal of surtax under section 7 of the Customs Tariff. It would obviously be undesirable to have advance publicity of any such changes. The same difficulty is encountered with respect to any regulation changing excise, tariff or other rates.
- (iv) In some areas of the Department's responsibilities the time factor may be critical where the regulations are made to remedy specific problems. For example, an Order exempting goods or classes of goods from the application of anti-dumping duty to meet contingencies or the application of an emergency surtax to deal with injurious imports.
- (v) The above comments are also applicable with respect to the Government's financial relationship with the Crown corporations.

In the Committee's view, the decision as to whether or not a regulation is to become effective only on publication, or some time thereafter, should be left, as it now is, to the individual statutes. However, your Committee recommends that statutes should resort more than they now do to the use of provisions stating that the regulations made thereunder, or under specified sections thereof, do not become effective until published or some specified period thereafter. Even if it felt in some cases that this type of decision cannot be made when the statute is being prepared, careful consideration should be given to the question when the regulations are being drawn and the practice of inserting in the regulation that it is not to become effective until published, or some time thereafter, should be encouraged. This is now done in some regulations. The Department of Transport, Marine Regulations Branch, advised us, as part of its answer to question 3, that:

The remaining 20 of our regulations cover such non-safety matters as pollution, registry, licencing and the imposition of fees for services rendered by the Department; and there would be no particular administrative difficulties arising out of delaying their effective date until publication in the Canada Gazette or even 30 days thereafter. Even now, such regulations are frequently given an effective date some weeks or months after enactment.

A good example of the type of regulation which should not become effective until some time after publication is afforded by the Patent Rules relating to the organization of the Patent Office and the procedures respecting applications for patents, etc. These rules were amended by P.C. 1969-1319, on Friday, June 27, 1969, which came into effect on that date. The amendments made substantial changes in the law. We were advised that, at the outset of the operation of these amendments, copies were not available for those affected by them. Some were advised by an official in the Patent Office that no copies would be available until the amendments were published in the Canada Gazette two or three weeks later. On being apprised of the situation, the Commissioner of Patents arranged for the mimeographing and distribution of copies to patent practitioners immediately, on an urgent basis. The amendments were eventually published in the Canada Gazette—on the 23rd day of July, 1969.

The commencement date for the operation of a regulation should be one of the stipulated subject matters for scrutiny by the proposed Standing Committee on Regulations. Each department should have valid reasons why a regulation does not contain a provision to the effect that it is not to become effective until publication or some time thereafter.

3. Time within which Regulations are to be Published.

It may be queried whether the thirty day period provided for in section 6(1) of the Regulations Act is not too long. As far as the mechanics of publishing a regulation are concerned, we were advised to the following effect: A regulation has to be submitted to the Queen's Printer at least the second Friday before the Wednesday of publication—i.e. 12 days prior to the publishing date. In exceptional cases a regulation may be received for printing in the Canada Gazette if it is furnished to the Queen's Printer on the morning of the second Monday, prior to the date of publication. The Canada Gazette is now published on the second and fourth Wednesday of each month. (See section 3(1) of the Regulation made under the Regulations Act). It would appear, therefore, that the soonest a regulation can be published is 12 days after making and that it is possible for a regulation to be published as long as 25 days after it is made, even if it is furnished to the Queen's Printer the day it is made. The only apparent solutions to the problem respecting shortening the time for publication appear to be (a) shortening the 12 day period required by the Queen's Printer and (b) requiring that the Canada Gazette, or at least Part II thereof, be published every week—even more often.

In some cases special editions of the Canada Gazette have been published on days other than every second Wednesday. See for example the Canada Gazette published on Friday, January 10, 1969, setting forth regulations made under the Anti-Dumping Act. This practice should be encouraged, where appropriate.

The Government's reply to question 17 of our questionnaire ("Is there any reason why regulations could not be published within fifteen days of being made?") was as follows:

Regulations could be published within fifteen days provided all the necessary personnel and facilities were available. This would involve considerable additional expense both to the Departments and Agencies involved and for the central Agencies. The current inhibiting factors are purely administrative.

If the expense is not prohibitive, we would encourage earlier publication of regulations.

4. Consolidation and Indexing.

Section 9(1) of the Regulations Act provides that the Governor in Council may make regulations providing for, inter alia, the publication of consolidations and the indexing of regulations.

Section 7 of the Regulation made under this provision provides:

7. A consolidation of all regulations then in force shall be published from time to time when determined by the Governor in Council.

Pursuant, apparently, to this power, P.C. 1955-539, SOR/55-138 was passed ordering that a consolidation of all regulations in force on January 1st, 1955, be published, the said consolidation to be entitled, "Statutory Orders and Regulations, Consolidation, 1955". The regulations have not been consolidated since that time. Your Committee has been advised that the regulations now in force will be so consolidated again after a new issue of the Revised Statutes of Canada has been completed. This project is now under way.

Your Committee recommends that regulations should be consolidated (which involves, perforce, revising each regulation so that all of its amendments since its first enactment are incorporated in its text) on a much more regular and frequent basis than has been the practice in the past, and at least once every five years. Consolidation makes it much easier to find the law.

We would also refer to section 19 of the Canada Grain Act which provides:

19. The Board shall, during the month of August in each year, publish in the Canada Gazette in consolidated form all regulations made by the Board under this Act and in effect on the first day of that month.

This is a useful precedent which could be used in other statutes which provide for the making of regulations which are frequently amended. We suggest that more resort be had to such provisions in the statutes, where appropriate, that is where a regulation is subject to frequent amendment.

Section 8 of the Regulation made under the Regulations Act provides:

8. The Clerk of the Privy Council shall cause to be published quarterly a consolidated index and table of all regulations and amendments, revocations or other modifications made since the last preceding consolidation.

The quarterly consolidated index and table of statutory orders and regulations which is published pursuant to this regulation is a very useful document. Regulations are listed therein alphabetically according to their title, subject matter or title of the Act under which they are made. Further, this publication contains a table of statutory orders and regulations according to the enabling statutes under which they were made. This table enables one searching the law to satisfy himself that he has the titles and numbers of all regulations passed under any given statute (which are not exempted from the Regulations Act) up to the point in time covered by the table.

In keeping with our previous recommendation, your Committee recommends that the present quarterly consolidated index and table of statutory orders and regulations should include reference to all regulations which have been exempted from publication, according to their title (which should be as descriptive as possible), the Act under which they were made, their date, and the date of their transmittal.

Chapter 7

Laying of Regulations Before Parliament

Section 7 of the Regulations Act provides:

7. Every regulation shall be laid before Parliament within 15 days after it is published in the Canada Gazette [which should be within 30 days after it is made, s.6(1)] or, if Parliament is not then in session, within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session.

This provision applies to all regulations covered by the Regulations Act. It may be noted, however, that approximately twenty-five other statutes of the Dominion of Canada provide for the laying before Parliament of regulations made thereunder. Some of them provide that the regulations made thereunder shall be laid "as soon as may be after they are made", "forthwith", "fifteen days after the making thereof", "as soon as possible" and "at the session next after the making thereof".

The subject of the laying of regulations before Parliament should be considered, to some extent, together with the scrutiny of regulations, Parliamentary action with regard thereto, and publication. All of these are considered in other parts of this Report. E. A. Driedger has observed that the purpose of Section 7 of the Regulations Act is twofold:

To acquaint the public with the law, and to provide an opportunity for comment. Publicity and freedom of discussion are probably the best safeguards against the abuse of power. ("The Enactment and Publication of Canadian Administrative Regulations", 19 Administrative Law Review 129 at p. 134).

It is useful, in assessing whether or not the present laying procedure provided for in Section 7 has an practical value, to describe what in fact is involved when a regulation is laid.

A regulation is now laid when a member of the Privy Council tables Part of the Canada Gazette in the House. Reference in this respect may be made to Standing Order 41(1) of the House of Commons which provides:

(1) Any return, report or other paper required to be laid before the House in accordance with any Act of Parliament or in pursuance of any resolution or standing order of this House may be deposited with Clerk of the House on any sitting day, and such return, report or other paper shall be deemed for all purposes to have been presented to or laid before the House.

Members may thereupon consult or obtain a copy in the Parliamentary Returns Office. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, pp. 235-36). Standing Order 41(3) provides that a record of any regulations so laid "shall be entered in the Votes and Proceedings of the same day". It may be thought that Votes and Proceedings brings regulations to the attention of members. This is not the case. Reference may be made, by way of a typical example, to Votes and Proceedings dated May 29, 1969 at p. 1085 where the following appears:

Returns and Reports Deposited with the Clerk of the House

The following papers having been deposited with the Clerk of the House were laid on the Table pursuant to Standing Order 41(1), namely: . . .

by Mr. Macdonald, a Member of the Queen's Privy Council,—Copies of Statutory Orders and Regulations published in the Canada Gazette, Part II, of Wednesday, May 28, 1969, pursuant to Section 7 of the Regulations Act, chapter 235, R.S.C., 1952. (English and French).

Such a statement obviously does not inform the Members, in any respect, of the nature of the regulations laid.

There are other reasons why this procedure, as a matter of law, appears to be useless for bringing regulations to the attention of Members. The provisions of P.C. 1954-1787, the Regulation made under the Regulations Act, provides in Section 3(2) thereof as follows:

(2) Copies of Part II [of the Canada Gazette] and of all consolidations of regulations shall be delivered to such persons as are entitled to receive copies of the Statutes of Canada, . . .

It appears from Section 10(3) of the Publication of Statutes Act, R.S.C. 1952, c.230 that the members of the two Houses of Parliament are to receive copies of the Statutes of Canada. The Queen's Printer has adopted the practice of distributing the statutes and Part II of the Canada Gazette "on written request only" according to a manual prepared for use by this agency. This requirement, insofar as it relates to Members of Parliament, does not appear in the Publication of Statutes Act, in Order in Council P.C. 1953-609 (April 27, 1953) as amended by P.C. 1953-1661 (October 28, 1953), which are said, in the manual, to contain "regulations governing the free distribution to authorized categories." Nor does it appear in P.C. 1955-538 which further amends P.C. 1953-609, but which is not mentioned in the manual.

Members of Parliament should receive Part II of the Canada Gazette automatically, as is contemplated by section 3(2) of P.C. 1954-1787. Premising such receipt, it would appear that the laying procedures contemplated by Section 7 of the Regulations Act would not be necessary (assuming Votes and Proceedings contained more particulars with respect to regulations laid), to inform Members of the existence of the regulations. Further, it is obvious that the present laying procedures do not in any way further publicize regulations, or their existence, beyond the publicity already given to them by their publication in the Canada Gazette.

As far as the legal effect of laying is concerned, it is of interest to note by way of contrast, the general position in the United Kingdom where regulations must be laid before they come into force. See section 4(1) of the Statutory Instruments Act, 1946, quoted in Chapter 5.

It is fair to say that the present laying procedure provided for in Section 7 of the Regulations Act is an empty formality. In our opinion, there is constitutional value in the formal notification of Parliament of laws made pursuant to powers it has delegated to the executive and the administration. Apart from the convenience of being able to table regulations in their Canada Gazette form there appears to be no reason why a regulation should await a potential total of 45 (30 days for publication, then 15 days thereafter) days before it is laid before Parliament. Your Committee recommends that all regulations should be laid before Parliament forthwith after their transmittal to the Clerk of the Privy Council and their recording and numbering by him. Any delay in the laying of the regulation pursuant to such a provision should be subject matter for scrutiny by the proposed Standing Committee on Regulations and, where appropriate, report to the House. Your Committee recommends that Votes and Proceedings should list under "Returns and Reports Deposited with the Clerk of the House" the title of each regulation (which should be as descriptive as possible), the Act under which it is made, its date and the date of its transmittal.

When Parliament is not sitting, by reason of dissolution, prorogation or adjournment, the regulation should be laid forthwith upon the resumption of sitting of the Parliament. Alternatively, in cases of prorogation and adjournment, it could be provided that depositing a regulation with the Clerk of the House on any day (and not just a sitting day), should be deemed for all purposes to laying the regulation before the House. This would require an amendment to Standing Order 41(1).

We think that it would be advisable if the Regulations Act were amended to expressly empower each House to decide for itself what constitutes "laying". Such an amendment would have the effect of confirming the present practice. Reference may be made to the United Kingdom Laying of Documents before Parliament (Interpretation) Act, 1948, c. 59, which makes such a provision with respect to the United Kingdom Houses of Parliament and which was enacted "for removal of doubt".

Chapter 8

The Scrutiny of Regulations

1. General.

It seems obvious to us that, as a general principle, Parliament should be concerned with the nature and quality of laws made pursuant to powers which it has granted to the Governor in Council, to Ministers and to other persons and bodies. "The grant of general powers, however justified, implies a responsibility for close legislative attention to the course of administration". (Louis L. Jaffe, Judicial Control of Administration Action, (1965) at page 41). It is not possible for Parliament, as an institution, to keep directly under satisfactory review all subordinate legislation.

It is of value to review the institutional machinery which has been established by legislatures in other jurisdictions to deal with the review of this type of legislation. We should state, at this point, that the central problem relating to legislative review of executive and administrative law-making is the degree to which Parliament should involve itself in attempting to influence and control the course of administration. If Parliament goes too far into the substance of day-to-day administration it defeats many of the underlying reasons for delegating powers to make laws in the first place: lack of parliamentary time; lack of parliamentary knowledge on technical matters; the need to make rapid decisions in cases of emergency, etc.; (see Chapter 1). It is against this background that it is useful to examine, briefly, the experience of other jurisdictions.

2. History of Parliamentary Scrutiny of Regulations.

In England in 1925 the House of Lords, being concerned with the rather routine nature of the manner in which it was accustomed to approving, where required by statute, subordinate legislation, established a Special Orders Committee to examine regulations requiring an affirmative resolution before coming into effect and to report to the House thereon. As described by Dr. Kersell, the Committee considers these four matters:

- (1) Whether the provisions raise important questions of policy or principle;
- (2) How far the special order is founded on precedent;

(3) Whether the instrument can be passed by the House without special attention and whether there ought to be further special inquiry before the House proceeds to a decision, and if so, what form that inquiry might take;

(4) If the Committee has any doubt as to whether or not an instrument is intra vires it must report to the House accordingly. (Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960) p. 29).

In 1931 the Senate of Commonwealth of Australia established a Standing Committee on Regulations and Ordinances to examine regulations to ascertain:

- (1) that they are in accord with the statute;
- (2) that they do not trespass unduly on personal rights and liberties;
- (3) that they do not make rights and liberties of citizens dependent on administrative and not judicial decisions;
- (4) that they are concerned with administrative detail and do not amount to substantive legislation which should be a matter for Parliamentary enactment.

It should perhaps, be noted that the Australian Senate is not an appointed, but an elected, body.

In 1932 in the United Kingdom the Committee on Ministers' Powers (the Donoughmore Committee), paying scant attention to the existing House of Lords Committee, made the following recommendations respecting scrutiny of regulations by both Houses:

XIV. Standing Orders of both Houses should require that a small Standing Committee should be set up in each House of Parliament at the beginning of each Session for the purpose of . . . considering and reporting on every regulation and rule made in the exercise of delegated legislative power, and laid before the House in pursuance of statutory requirement . . .

Every regulation or rule made by a Minister in the exercise of delegated law-making power, and laid before the House in pursuance of statutory requirement, would stand referred to the Committee. It would be the duty of the Committee to consider the regulation or rule forthwith, and to report to the House within fourteen clear days of the day on which the regulation or rule was laid. The Committee would not report on the merits of the regulation or rule but would report:

- (1) whether any matter of principle was involved;
- (2) whether the regulation or rule imposed a tax;
- (3) whether the regulation or rule was
 - (a) permanently challengeable; or
 - (b) never challengeable, i.e., unchallengeable from the commencement; or
 - (c) challengeable for a specified period of time and thereafter unchallengeable and, if so, what was the specified period;
- (4) whether it consisted wholly or partly of consolidation;
- (5) whether there was any special feature of the regulation or rule meriting the attention of the House;
- (6) whether there were any circumstances connected with the making of the regulation or rule meriting such attention;
- (7) whether the regulation or rule should be starred, on the grounds that it was exceptional, and subjected to the procedure described below. (Report, pp 67-69).

These recommendations bore no immediate fruit. However, in 1944 the British House of Commons established a Select Committee on Statutory Rules and Orders. Its function is to consider subordinate legislation "with a view to determining whether the special attention of the House should be drawn to it on any of the following grounds:

- (i) that it imposes a charge on the public revenues or contains provisions requiring payments to be made to the Exchequer or any Government department or to any local or public authority in consideration of any licence or consent or of any services to be rendered, or prescribes the amount of any such charge or payments;
- (ii) that it is made in pursuance of an enactment containing specific provisions excluding it from challenge in the courts either at all times or after the expiration of a specified period;
- (iii) that it appears to make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the Statute under which it is made;
- (iv) that it purports to have retrospective effect where the parent Statute confers no express authority so to provide;
- (v) that there appears to have been an unjustifiable delay in the publication or in the laying of it before Parliament;
- (vi) that there appears to have been unjustifiable delay in sending a notification to Mr. Speaker under the proviso to subsection (1) of section 4 of the Statutory Instruments Act 1946, where an Instrument has come into operation before it has been laid before Parliament;
- (vii) that for any special reason its form or purport calls for elucidation;
- (viii) that the drafting of it appears to be defective;"

In South Africa in 1949 a Select Committee of the House of Assembly of the Parliament of the Union of South Africa recommended the appointment of "an officer" to examine regulations and report to the House thereon on any one of the following grounds:

- (a) That they appear to make any unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the statute under which they are framed.
- (b) That they tend to usurp control of the House over expenditure and taxation.
- (c) That they tend to exclude the jurisdiction of the courts of law without explicit enactment.
- (d) That for any reason their form or purport calls for elucidation or special attention.

In 1953, in India the House of the People established a Committee on Subordinate legislation. The general function of this Committee is to scrutinize and report to the House "whether the powers to make regulations, etc., conferred by the Constitution or delegated by Parliament are being properly exercised within such delegation." In scrutinizing regulations the Committee is to consider:

- (1) whether the Order is in accord with the general object of the Constitution or the Act pursuant to which it is made;
- (2) whether it contains matter which in the opinion of the Committee should more properly be dealt with in an Act of Parliament;
- (3) whether it contains imposition of any tax;
- (4) whether it directly or indirectly bars the jurisdiction of the courts;
- (5) whether it gives retrospective effect to any of the provisions in respect of which the Constitution or the Act does not expressly give any such power;
- (6) whether it involves expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of India or the public revenue;
- (7) whether it appears to make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the Constitution or the Act pursuant to which it is made;

(8) whether there appears to have been unjustifiable delay in its publication or the laying of it before Parliament;

(9) whether for any reason its form and purport call for any elucidation.

In New Zealand Standing Order 360 of the House of Representatives provides:

360. Statutes Revision Committee—At the commencement of every session a Statutes Revision Committee shall be appointed to consider all Bills containing provisions of a technical legal character which may be referred to it; and to consider any regulation within the meaning of and published pursuant to the Regulations Act 1936 which may be referred to it, with a view to determining whether the special attention of the House should be drawn to the regulation on any of the following grounds:

(a) That it trespasses unduly on personal rights and liberties:

(b) That it appears to make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the statute under which it is made:

(c) That for any special reason its form or purport calls for elucidation:

The Committee to have power to sit during any adjournment or recess; to require any Government department concerned to submit a memorandum or to depute a witness for the purpose of explaining any regulation which may be under its consideration; and to report to the House or the Government from time to time.

In the Province of Manitoba in 1960 a Standing Committee on Statutory Orders and Regulations was established to examine regulations referred to it under the Act. This Committee applies the following principles in assessing regulations:

(a) The Regulations should not contain substantive legislation which should be enacted by the Legislature, but should be confined to administrative matters.

(b) The Regulations should be in strict accord with the statute conferring the power and unless so authorized by the statute, should not have any retroactive effect.

(c) The Regulations should not exclude the jurisdiction of the Courts.

(d) The Regulations should not impose a fine, imprisonment or other penalty or shift the onus of proof of innocence on to the person accused of an offense.

(e) A Regulation in respect of personal liberties should be strictly confined to things authorized by the statute.

In 1963 the Province of Saskatchewan established a system whereby the legislature appoints at the beginning of each session a Special Committee on Regulations. Its scrutiny criteria are:

(a) That it imposes a charge on the public revenues or prescribes a payment to be made to any public authority not specifically provided for by statute.

(b) That it is excluded from challenge in the courts;

(c) That it makes unusual or unexpected use of powers conferred by statute;

(d) That it purports to have retrospective effect where the parent statute confers no express authority so to provide;

(e) That it has been insufficiently promulgated;

(f) That it is not clear in meaning.

It is of interest to review the highlights of Canadian Parliamentary history respecting legislative review of regulations. In 1943, in a speech in the Throne Speech Debate, the Honourable Brooke Claxton stated (Debates 1943, Vol. I, p. 297) that ... the "practice of tabling orders in council, is, for all practical purposes, an empty form. I suggest that orders in council be referred to a committee for consideration—not all the orders but orders having the effect of legislation of a general nature. Even when they get to the committee, all the orders of that kind would not be discussed; but if the committee felt that one particular matter should be discussed it could take up that order, have the departmental officials there to explain it, and make its report to the House. This could be done exceedingly quickly. In this way there would be an opportunity of improving the drafting of the orders, which sometimes leaves a great deal to be desired; there would be exercise of control over the executive, opportunity for ventilating grievances, and also observance of the important principle of the supremacy of Parliament.”

In 1950, when the present Regulations Act was passing through Parliament, the Prime Minister observed (Debates, 1950, Vol. III, p. 3040):

We do not believe we should recommend at this time that sort of committee because most of the statutory regulations have to be made by the governor in council, and that gives considerable time for checking, whilst in the United Kingdom most of these things are done by boards or other agencies of the crown. No one who is responsible to parliament or to the public hears of these regulations until they have become law. This United Kingdom Committee has strictly limited terms of reference that probably would not fit our situation. They have to report on whether or not the order infringes seven stated principles. If it does not, the committee has nothing to do with it. If it does, they call attention to that fact. We do not believe that would be a remedy that would fit our situation.

This statement implies that it was the view of the Government at that time that legislative scrutiny and executive scrutiny would, in fact, fulfill the same basic function.

In 1964 the Special Committee on Procedure and Organization of the House of Commons issued its Fifteenth Report (paragraphs 10 and 12 tabled in the House on December 15, 1964) which read, in part:

12. Your Committee recommends the establishment of the following six Standing Committees, described for the purposes of this Report as other Standing Committees, with the functions described below: . . .

(e) Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation

The function of this committee would be to act as a “watchdog” over the executive in its use of the powers conferred by statute, with the duty of reporting to Parliament any tendency on the part of the executive to exceed its authority. The committee’s terms of reference should exclude it from considering the merits of or the policy behind delegated legislation, but it would be expected to draw the attention of Parliament to any regulations or instruments which impose a charge in public revenues, which confer immunity from challenge in the courts, which have an unauthorized retro-active effect which reveal an unusual or unexpected use of a statutory power, or which otherwise exceed the authority delegated by the parent statute.

The Ontario Royal Commission Inquiry into Civil Rights Report, 1968 at page 378, recommended the appointment of a legislative committee to scrutinize regulation having regard to these principles:

- (a) They should not contain provisions initiating new policy, but should be confined to details to give effect to the policy established by the statute.
- (b) They should be in strict accord with the statute conferring the power, particularly concerning personal liberties.
- (c) They should be expressed in precise and unambiguous language.
- (d) They should not have retrospective effect unless clearly authorized by statute.
- (e) They should not exclude the jurisdiction of the courts.
- (f) They should not impose a fine, imprisonment, or other penalty.

- (g) They should not shift the onus of proof of innocence to a person accused of an offence.
- (h) They should not impose anything in the way of a tax (as distinct from fixing the amount of a licence fee, or the like).
- (i) They should not make any unusual or unexpected use of delegated power.
- (j) General powers should not be exercised to establish a judicial tribunal or administrative tribunal.

The Report stressed at page 377:

The terms of reference for the Committee should exclude from review any consideration of the policy of the parent Act or of the merits of the regulations. The policy of the Act, having been settled by the Legislature after full debate and discussion, ought not to be re-opened for discussion in the Committee. The merits of the regulations, i.e., an evaluation of the need for them and their efficacy within the framework of the policy approved and provided for by the Act, are matters for which the government is responsible to the Legislature. It is not proposed that the functions of the Committee should be to supervise the operations of departments of government. Elimination of the consideration of policy or merits should permit the Committee to proceed in a non-partisan way as it has done in the United Kingdom and Manitoba.

Following this recommendation the Ontario Government has introduced Bill 125 into the Legislature. At the time of writing, it has had two readings, April 17, 1969 and May 2, 1969. It reads in part:

|---|---|
| R.S.O. 1969, c. 349, amended | 1. The Regulations Act is amended by adding thereto the following section: |
| Special Committee on Regulations | 12. (1) At the commencement of each Legislature, a special committee of the Assembly shall be appointed for the duration of the Legislature, to be known as the Special Committee on Regulations, with authority to sit throughout each session of the Assembly. |
| Regulations referred | (2) Every regulation stands permanently referred to the Special Committee on Regulations for the purposes of subsection 3. |
| Terms of reference | (3) The Special Committee on Regulations shall examine the regulations with particular reference to the scope and method of the exercise of delegated legislative power but without reference to the merits of the policy or objectives to be effected by the regulations or enabling statutes, and shall deal with such other matters as are referred to it from time to time by the Assembly. |
| Authority to call persons | (4) The Special Committee on Regulations may examine any member of the Executive Council or any public servant designated by him respecting any regulation made under an Act that is under his administration. |
| Report | (5) The Special Committee on Regulations shall, from time to time, report to the Assembly its observations, opinions and recommendations. |

3. Functioning of a Scrutiny Committee.

The function of the United Kingdom House of Commons Scrutiny Committee has been thus described by one of its chairmen:

If Members of Parliament were all perfect and able to do an inestimable amount of work, they would read all [the statutory instruments] through themselves and, if they desired, they could put down a prayer against any particular one but to save them doing that, this Committee is set up. Our function is to go through them and report to the House for their action if we think there is anything unexpected or any unjustifiable delay or something that calls for elucidation. (Minutes of Proceedings for Third Report of Select Committee on Procedure (H.C. 189-1 of 1946) Para. 4704 (Sir Charles MacAndrew). Quoted on p. 93 of Griffith & Street, Principles of Administrative Law (3rd ed., 1963).

All the scrutiny committees have the following features in common: they are relatively small committees; they rely heavily upon preliminary examinations and reports of their legal counsel; they are more concerned with the form, language, and operation of regulations than their substance; they are objective and non-partisan; and they report the results of their examinations to the Legislature. The action which may be taken by the Legislature with respect to a regulation depends upon the terms of the applicable statutes and Standing Orders.

Most of the available literature relates to the British House of Commons Committee. We quote the following observations with respect to its work:

To sum up: the amount of work, most of it drudgery, which is done by the Committee with the assistance of Counsel to the Speaker is considerable. The value and importance of this work are undeniable. The very existence of the Committee must prevent more shortcomings than the Committee detects; unjustifiable delay in publication and laying before Parliament has almost ceased; statutory instruments have become more intelligible. (Griffith & Street, Principles of Administrative Law, (3rd ed., 1963) at p. 99).

Since [1944] it [the Select Committee on Statutory Instruments] has been in continuous existence and has done valuable work contrary to a good deal of expert and official opinion to the effect that its tasks were impracticable, undesirable, and so forth. (H.W.R. Wade, Administrative Law (2nd ed., 1967) at p. 319).

Although sharply restricted in its terms of reference, the [Select Committee on Statutory Instruments] has had a considerable measure of success in inspiring legislation which tidied up the process of delegation reducing sharply objectionable uses of the device, arousing an informed public opinion, and even in curbing the verbosity of the framers of delegated legislation. The government departments are more careful in their later framing of new delegated legislation after the Committee has chided them . . . The civil servants fear it, and Cabinet respects it. (J. A. Corry, "The Prospects for the Rule of Law," Hodgetts and Corbett ed. "Canadian Public Administration." (MacMillan Company, 1960) pages 547-48). Further the Committee on its own has achieved great improvements in the performance of departments with regard to lucidity in drafting and with regard to use of powers. Its very existence has had a salutary effect in these important matters. Delay in publication, laying and notification has been virtually eliminated for the past six years. No other serious abuses have really required the attention of the House. (John E. Kersell, Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960) at p. 60).

4. A New Standing Committee on Regulations.

We should comment, at this point, on the adequacy of the existing form and draftsmanship scrutiny being conducted by the Privy Council Office, described in Chapter 4. Within the scope of its defined purposes this scrutiny fulfills a useful role and we have not hesitated to recommend its continuance. Its significant feature is that it is executive review of executive law-making. As such it is not, in our view, a substitute for legislative review of executive law-making.

On the basis of the evidence which we have heard and the submissions which we have examined, we are firmly of the view that: (a) Parliament has a particular role to play in the examination of certain aspects of the regulation-making process and (b) this role requires the instrumentality of a Committee, the chief function of which would be to isolate for the attention of the House matters pertaining to regulations which relate to the criteria which we set forth further on in this Chapter.

Your Committee therefore recommends that a new Committee on Regulations (hereinafter called the Scrutiny Committee) should be established with the following particulars:

(1) It should be a Standing Committee of the House of Commons.

As we have seen, the first scrutiny committee established in the Commonwealth was the Special Orders Committee of the House of Lords, which came into being in 1925, and the comparable House of Commons committee, the Select Committee on Statutory Rules and Orders, was not established until 1944. In November, 1952, Viscount Stansgate suggested that a joint committee of both Houses should be set up to examine delegated legislation. However, the fact that the scope of review has always been different in the two Houses apparently made this proposal politically unacceptable.

Sir Cecil Carr suggests a further reason for two committees:

Why, it may be asked, cannot the two Houses set up a Joint Committee instead of having two separate committees working independently? Well, we must not expect British institutions to operate on rigidly logical lines. In the past a Joint Committee has not been enthusiastically favoured by the Commons House, and anyhow a First and Second Chamber will have a different approach. In 1950 the affirmative resolution for approving a draft Order in Council affording immunities and privileges to the Universal Postal Union sailed serenely through the Commons but ran into heavy weather in the Lords, where the Government withdrew it, the Commons then having meekly to cancel the approval they had given. Maybe Second Chambers are better equipped for sifting and reporting: our House of Lords has plenty of members with executive experience; the peers are 'less encumbered with the pressing distractions of everyday work' and are 'less dedicated to party allegiance'; their service can contribute the element of continuity. Two sieves must be better than one. ("Parliamentary Control of Delegated Legislation", Public Law, 1956, p. 200 at pp. 210-211).

In Australia the only scrutiny committee, the Standing Committee on Regulations and Ordinances, was set up by the Senate in 1931. Dr. Kersell analyzes the advantages of Upper-House scrutiny as follows:

It would appear . . . from a comparison of the Australian Senate Committee and the British House of Commons Committee that, useful as the House Committee is, an upper chamber Committee enjoys a number of significant advantages, even over a joint committee, which make it more effective. Undoubtedly the most important of these advantages is that its actions and utterances do not threaten the stability of the Government. Thus the Committee can be left free to scrutinize instruments on broad terms of reference, initially, perhaps, of its own choosing, which do not exclude substantive matters. Its reports, even when highly critical of the substance of delegated legislation, are likely to be considered on their merits and not on party lines. The Australian Government has on at least four major occasions found it possible to meet the criticisms of the Senate Committee by making appropriate concessions rather than by 'stone-walling' for a time before quietly implementing necessary changes.

A second chamber and its committees, in addition, are not as squeezed by clock or calendar as are a lower house and its committees. They are not as distracted by the urgencies of political and governmental problems. Their memberships include, in each of Britain, Australia and Canada at least, a generous proportion of able men some of whom have had long executive and administrative experience. Particularly in Britain and Canada, but in Australia to a considerable degree, there is in second chamber committees the valuable element of continuity which is often difficult to maintain in the complexion of House Committees...

The question now arises, could a committee of the Canadian Senate be as effective as that of the Australian, for the Australian Senate is elective, the Canadian is appointive. The Canadian Senate is understandably a much more reserved chamber than its Australian counterpart, but it does not necessarily follow that reports of a Canadian scrutiny committee made up of Senators would be ineffective. Much would depend on the quality of reports which in turn would depend on the quality of the Senators serving on the Committee and on the ability of the Committee's adviser or advisers. The Canadian Senate has in the past established committees of outstanding merit and there is no reason to believe it will cease to be able to do so in the future. If a Senate Scrutiny committee could produce reports of quality similar to reports from other Canadian Senate committees and to reports from the Australian Regulations Committee, they would carry much of their own conviction. This might be enhanced by making reports from a scrutiny committee easily available not only to Senators but also to M.P.s... (Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960), pp. 76-79).

In India the scrutiny committee is of the Lower House, which is also necessarily the case in New Zealand where there is only the one House. The McRuer Commission recommendations are intended for a unicameral legislature and so provided no assistance on this point.

The Committee was divided over the question of the desirability of a Joint Committee of both Houses as opposed to a Standing Committee of the House of Commons alone, as some members felt that the non-elective and non-representative character of the Senate made it unsuitable for this role; but in the light of its terms of reference, which required it "to report on procedures for the review by this House of instruments made in virtue of any statute of the Parliament of Canada" (emphasis added), we have decided that we must in any event limit our recommendation in this respect to the setting up of a House of Commons committee. We therefore recommend the establishment of a new Standing Committee of the House of Commons charged with the scrutiny of regulations.

We should also state that we gave serious consideration to the scrutiny of regulations by the existing standing committees of the House—each committee examining regulations within its particular field of competence. Such committees would, of course, be much better suited to reviewing the policy content of regulations than would a specialized committee concerned chiefly with the processes respecting the exercise of delegated legislative powers. We came to the conclusion, however, that the continuous and sustained examination of regulations necessitates the establishment of a new Standing Committee on Regulations. We shall deal later with the substantial role which we believe Standing Committees should play with respect to the substantive aspects of regulations.

(2) All regulations should stand permanently referred to it.

The Regulations Act should provide that all regulations, as defined in that Act, including existing regulations should stand permanently referred to the Scrutiny Committee. This is the basic rule in Australia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba and it may be noted that Ontario Bill 125 makes a similar provision. Specifically, each regulation should stand referred to the Scrutiny Committee forthwith upon its transmittal to the Clerk of the Privy Council. Such a rule enables the Committee to scrutinize the same regulations more than once, if it should so desire. It should be noted that under your Committee's proposed definition of "regulation", the Committee will have a broad subject matter: departmental directives, orders in council which add to or delete from statutory schedules, prerogative orders in council, regulations by independent agencies, regulations which are exempt from publication, as well as standard instances of regulatory power, provided always that they are exercises of legislative power.

(3) It should strive to operate in an objective and non-partisan way.

The Scrutiny Committee should approach its work in as objective and non-partisan a manner as possible. This appears to be one of the most significant features of Scrutiny Committees in other jurisdictions and we shall elaborate its implications in the course of the Report.

(4) It should have a small membership to enable it to operate effectively.

The Scrutiny Committee should be composed of a minimum of seven members and a maximum of twelve. It may be noted that in the United Kingdom the Scrutiny Committee of the House of Commons, which is much larger than the Canadian House, is composed of eleven members. The Committee itself should be empowered to decide what its quorum should be. Standing Order 65(6) now provides that a majority of the members of a Committee shall constitute a quorum. The English Committee has a quorum of three. It is important that the work of the Committee not be frustrated by the lack of a quorum.

(5) To make the objectivity of the Committee apparent, there should be some rotation among parties in the chairmanship.

The objectivity of the Committee should be made apparent in its selection of its chairman.

In the United Kingdom the House of Commons Committee has a tradition of appointing an opposition member as Chairman. In most other jurisdictions it appears that a government member is the chairman.

In India the Chairman of the scrutiny committee is appointed by the Speaker, but the Deputy Speaker, if he is a member, ipso facto becomes chairman. On one occasion, at least, the Chairman has been a member of the Opposition. See M. P. Jain, "Parliamentary Control of Delegated Legislation in India", (1964) Public Law 3 and 152, at pp. 172-175.

It has been suggested that the British practice recognizes the theory that "as the Committee scrutinizes the handiwork of the government departments, a member of the ruling party may feel embarrassed in the Chair due to his conflicting loyalties" (Jain, supra, at p. 172).

On the other hand, Dr. Kersell gives the following evidence in favour of having a government member as Chairman:

... The advantage of having a senior member of the government's own party as chairman, I think, would be in the same terms as Senator Wood told me, that he would have much readier access to any minister or to the minister chiefly responsible for an Order in Council in the Cabinet. If there was something that needed tightening up in an instrument, it would be more easily possible for him to get this done informally. I am convinced that it is better to do things informally, if at all possible, than to have a "knock 'em down, drag 'em out" fight in public. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, p. 90).

It should be observed that this suggestion was made in the context of a submission that a majority of the members on the Committee should be from the Opposition.

We do not think that any binding rule should be laid down on this point but would hope that a tradition would develop which would allow some alternation in the chairmanship between government and opposition members.

(6) It should normally sit in public session.

The Scrutiny Committee should normally meet in public, but have the power to sit in camera where necessary. The British Committee does not meet in public, but it appears from information furnished to one of our members that some members of the present British Committee feel that it might be advisable to have some public meetings. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan the general rule is that the Scrutiny Committee meets in public. We feel that while public meetings might, in some cases, impinge upon the objective nature of the Committee's approach, the paramount interest is the openness of the legislative process. It should be remembered that the Scrutiny Committee is dealing with regulations which have become law and are part of the "public domain".

(7) It should be empowered to sit while Parliament is not sitting.

The Scrutiny Committee should be empowered to sit during vacations and, if possible, during prorogations of the House. This is provided for in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but not in England. The work of the regulation-making authorities goes on all year and work of the Scrutiny Committee would be seriously hampered if it did not have the power to sit during prorogations of the House.

Beauchesne states that committees cannot be empowered to sit after prorogation (Parliamentary Rules and Forms 4th ed., 1958, p. 243). We are not convinced that this is sound parliamentary law, and we should like to deal with this point further in a later report.

(8) It should have adequate staff.

The Scrutiny Committee should be provided with adequate staff, including, in particular, counsel with appropriate legislative experience. In other jurisdictions which have scrutiny committees, the importance of the work of counsel is repeatedly stressed. Counsel should examine all regulations referred to the Committee, prepare reports thereon for the Committee, communicate with the various government departments and agencies on behalf of the Committee and assist the Committee in the preparation of its agenda. To emphasize his or their, as the case may be, objectivity, counsel should be appointed by Mr. Speaker, after consultation with the Committee, and not by the Government.

(9) It should examine regulations on the basis of six criteria.

The most important single question respecting the terms of reference of the Scrutiny Committee is whether or not it should be empowered to examine into and report upon matters of "policy". The avowed position in other jurisdictions having scrutiny committees is that such committees do not consider the policy or merits of a regulation—but only certain aspects which may loosely be referred to as matters of form relating to the application of policy. It is said that the avoidance of policy in the scrutiny of regulations results in a more objective and business-like review of regulations and enables the Committee to get through all of the regulations referred to it within a reasonable time after the referral thereof; if committees were to consider form and policy they would become hopelessly bogged down.

After some consideration, we have concluded that these observations are valid and we would recommend that the main thrust of the Scrutiny Committee's work should be with respect to certain criteria which would exclude policy matters from direct consideration. While it is difficult to define "policy", we understand it generally to mean something which relates directly to the substantive solutions embodied in regulations as a result of the content and purpose of the enabling statutes. Certainly that policy in a regulation which is a direct reflection of the guides set forth in the enabling legislation should not be debated by the Scrutiny Committee, since this would amount to a re-consideration of the statute itself. Also, since one of the chief purposes of conferring the power to make regulations is to enable the Administration, which is supposed to have certain first-hand expertise, to devise solutions to problems as they arise, it could strike at the root of this purpose if the Scrutiny Committee had a general power to second-guess the Administration.

Having come to this general conclusion with respect to matters of policy, we do not, by any means, wish to state that there is no proper scope for Parliamentary review of the policy content of regulations. Obviously there is. In our view, for the reasons given above and also, more significantly, because the Scrutiny Committee would lack the necessary substantive expertise, such review could not properly be carried out by it. Policy review should be conducted by the appropriate Standing Committee of the House, and the Scrutiny Committee should be empowered to refer questions of policy in regulations to them. We would hope and expect that the Scrutiny Committee would gradually develop an expertise in the expeditious handling of policy matters beyond its terms of reference.

In order to determine the proper scrutiny criteria, we have considered the various criteria used in other jurisdictions. It may be noted that our recommended criteria do not contain as many points as those in some jurisdictions. We would expect that the members of the Scrutiny Committee would adopt a common-sense approach to the standards to be applied, within the general framework of a non-policy approach, and it seems to us that there would be no advantage in a proliferation of scrutiny items, such as has led to an over-lapping of criteria in some other jurisdictions (and we readily admit that there are some in our proposed list). Also many of the points covered in other jurisdictions appear to be questions relating to the terms of the statutory authority to make the regulation in question.

The Standing Committee on Regulations should therefore consider regulations referred to it with a view to determining whether the special attention of the House should be drawn to it on any of the following grounds, which should be set out in the Standing Orders:

(a) Whether they are authorized by the terms of the enabling statute.

We recognize that the courts have the ultimate power to decide upon the legal validity of regulations, and that this criterion must not in any way interfere with judicial review. However, there are logical reasons why at the outset of the life of a regulation Parliament should review it to satisfy itself that it is within the scope of the power granted. Private litigants should not have the sole responsibility for challenging unauthorized regulations.

(b) Whether they make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the statute under which it was made.

It is obvious that this criterion would allow, to a certain degree, an examination of the policy contents of a regulation. It envisages that while a particular regulation may, from a logical point of view, be within the language of the enabling provision, it may nevertheless, from a practical point of view, contain a policy which is generally felt not to have been intended when the enabling statute was passed.

It may be observed that this is the most commonly used criterion in the United Kingdom. See John E. Kersell, Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960), page 170. See also M. P. Jain, "Parliamentary Control of Delegated Legislation in India", (1964) Public Law 152 at p. 152:

Under this provision [unusual or unexpected use of rule-making powers], however, the Committee comes nearest to consideration and scrutiny of policy and merits of the rules, and this is regarded as the better way to approach the scrutiny of policy. This ingenious formula has been found to be quite useful in England; it has been used to catch cases of ultra vires, sub-delegation, cases of commission or omission by a department which, had it occurred in a Bill, would certainly have been pounced upon by the common sense of members of Parliament.

(c) Whether they trespass unduly on personal rights and liberties.

The basic idea behind this criterion is that, if personal rights and liberties are to be encroached upon, then this should be by statute and not by subordinate legislation. This criterion should be considered with (b) above, because it may be that the enabling legislation will expressly authorize regulations to be made which will, or may trespass unduly on personal rights and liberties. This, however, is particularly a matter to be taken into account when the statute is being framed and as to which reference should be made to Chapter 2 of this Report.

(d) Whether they have complied with the provisions of the Regulations Act with respect to transmittal, certification, recording, numbering, publication or laying before Parliament.

It may be noted that the general position is that non-compliance with these provisions in the Regulations Act does not result in the invalidity of a regulation. We have recommended that the operational effect of a regulation depend upon compliance with transmittal or publication requirements, depending on the nature of the regulation. We think that there is no useful purpose in treating a regulation as void for non-compliance with the Act. Such non-compliance would be kept to a minimum if it were the subject matter for scrutiny and report.

(e) Whether they (i) represent an abuse of the power to provide that they shall come into force before they are transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council or (ii) unjustifiably fail to provide that they shall not come into force until published or until some later date.

The explanation for this criterion can be found in Chapters 4 and 6 of this Report.

(f) Whether for any special reason their form or purport calls for elucidation.

This is a further useful catch-all criterion which would be particularly relevant in the cases where the Committee is unable to obtain a satisfactory explanation of a regulation from the Department concerned.

(10) It should have the usual investigative powers of a Standing Committee.

The Committee should have the usual powers of Standing Committees to call for persons, papers and records. It should, further, have the power to request from regulation-making authorities memoranda supporting, explaining or otherwise clarifying regulations.

(11) It should have the same power as other Standing Committees to report to the House.

The Scrutiny Committee should have the same power as other committees to report to the House. Its reports should cover not only individual regulations scrutinized by it but also, from time to time, the regulation-making process generally—with an emphasis on constructive criticism. This type of report has been a useful feature of the British House of Commons Scrutiny Committee. See John E. Kersell, Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960) at pages 56-58. We would suggest that the reports of this Scrutiny Committee on regulations examined by it either draw the attention of the House to the regulations, where necessary, with some expression of opinion on them. The nature of the report is for the Committee to decide at the appropriate time, but will obviously be limited by the powers of the House itself, which we shall take up in the next Chapter.

We are of the opinion that no report adverse to a regulation should be made to the House unless the attention of the regulation-making authority has been drawn to the Committee's criticism and the authority has been given an opportunity to either explain, amend or withdraw the regulation, as the case may be.

5. Policy Scrutiny.

We have suggested that policy scrutiny is more appropriate for substantive Standing Committees than for the Scrutiny Committee. Your Committee therefore recommends that the Scrutiny Committee should have the power, in its discretion, to refer regulations to other Standing Committees and that they should then stand referred to such committees for consideration. This would require an amendment to the Standing Orders. Such a provision should not stand in the way of other means whereby Standing Committees could consider the policy contents of regulations. It is your Committee's view that the review of significant subordinate legislation by Standing Committees is one of the most important means of exercising parliamentary scrutiny and control. Such review would be exercised by appropriate committees whose members can be assumed to have acquired expert knowledge on the subject matter of the legislation in question.

Chapter 9

Parliamentary Action Respecting Regulations

The matter of the various control procedures which Parliament may give itself over regulations is interrelated with issues respecting laying procedures and, much more importantly, with the procedures and institutions established by Parliament for the scrutiny of regulations, both of which we have considered.

In existing Canadian law there are relatively few statutory provisions empowering Parliament to affect, by way of annulment or affirmative resolution, the operation of a regulation. We shall refer to these. In the United Kingdom, Parliament has reserved to itself much more power over subordinate legislation. It has adopted the following variety of legislative controls: requiring a regulation to be laid before Parliament and made subject to annulment within 40 days; requiring a regulation to be laid and made subject to an affirmative resolution before it becomes effective; requiring a regulation to be laid in draft and made subject to an affirmative resolution to bring it into force; requiring a regulation to be laid in draft and made subject to annulment within 40 days; and, merely requiring a regulation to be laid before becoming operative. The negative resolution procedure is the most common.

In the Province of Saskatchewan the Regulations Act, R.S.S. 1965, ch. 420, s. 17, provides:

17. Where under the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly or in accordance with the procedure otherwise prescribed by the Legislative Assembly, a member of the Executive Council or other authority making a regulation, or, in the case of a regulation made by order in council, the member of the Executive Council recommending it, receives from the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly a copy of a resolution of the assembly showing that the assembly disapproves the regulation or any part thereof, or requires it to be amended, the member of the Executive Council or other authority or the Lieutenant Governor in Council, as the case may require, shall revoke the resolution in whole or in part or amend it as required by the resolution.

A virtually identical provision may be found in section 12 of the Manitoba Regulations Act, R.S.M. 1954, ch. 224.

It may be noted that these provincial rules subject all regulations, indiscriminately, to revocation or amendment, as the occasion may require. It is of interest to note that Ontario Bill 125 (first reading, April 17th, 1969, second reading, May 2nd, 1969) which makes provision for appointment of a Special Committee on Regulations to scrutinize regulations referred to it, makes no provision for any type of legislative action respecting the operation of a regulation.

Returning to legislation of the Parliament of Canada respecting parliamentary action over regulations, we feel that it is of value to set forth verbatim provisions from eleven statutes which portray the variety of restrictive techniques which Parliament has seen fit to provide for, from time to time. Amongst other comparisons and contrasts which may be made respecting these provisions, it is of interest to note those which require the action of both Houses of Parliament and those which require the action of one only, and also to note those which guarantee a debate on a motion to annul a regulation:

Copies of all rules and orders made under this section shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within ten days after the opening of the session next after the making thereof, and at any time within thirty days after they have been laid before Parliament they or any of them may, by joint resolution of both Houses of Parliament, be suspended or repealed, in which event during suspension or after repeal no suspended or repealed rule or order has any force or effect.

A proclamation issued under this section shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament as soon as may be after it is issued, and a notice of motion in either House signed by ten members thereof and made in accordance with the rules of that House within seven days of the day the proclamation was laid before that House, praying that the proclamation be revoked, shall be debated in that House at the first convenient opportunity within the four sitting days next after the day the motion in that House was made; and if both Houses of Parliament resolve that the proclamation be revoked, it shall cease to have effect and the provisions of this Part shall thereupon cease to be applicable to oil.

Every order and regulation made under this Act shall be laid before the Parliament forthwith after it has been made if Parliament is then sitting, or if Parliament is not then sitting, forthwith after the commencement of the next ensuing session and if the Senate and the House of Commons within the period of forty days beginning with the day on which any such order or regulation is laid before Parliament and excluding any time during which Parliament is dissolved or prorogued or during which both the Senate and the House of Commons are adjourned for more than four days, resolve that it be annulled, it ceases to have effect, but without prejudice to its previous operation or anything duly done or suffered thereunder or any offence committed or any penalty or punishment incurred.

The Export Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 103, s. 5:

The Customs Tariff Act, R.S.C. 1952, ch. 60, s. 4(4):

(4) Where any order is made after the coming into force of this subsection under the authority of paragraph (b), (d) or (f) of subsection (1) [respecting the withdrawal of tariff benefits] the order shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, cease to have any force or effect with respect to any period following the one hundred and eightieth day from the date of its making, unless not later than the one hundred and eightieth day from the date of its making the order is approved by Parliament; . . .

(5) If either House of Parliament resolves that the order be annulled, the order shall stand annulled and have no effect.

The foregoing provisions represent all of the provisions in federal legislation which we have been able to find respecting parliamentary power over the operation of a regulation. It will be noted that only the Export Act and the Customs Tariff Act require affirmative resolutions of Parliament and the other statutes provide for negative resolutions.

In this Committee's Questionnaire to Government Departments and Agencies the following questions were asked:

4. What would be the administrative or regulatory effect (or what difficulties of any type would you envisage as far as the work of your Department or Agency is concerned) of a statutory requirement that no regulations made under legislation administered by your Department or Agency would become law until approved by an affirmative resolution of the House of Commons within thirty days of being laid before the House—assuming, for the purpose of your answer, that the regulation is laid within fifteen days of being published?

5. What would be the administrative or regulatory effect (or what difficulties of any type would you envisage as far as the work of your Department or Agency is concerned) of a statutory requirement that regulations made under legislation administered by your Department or Agency would become law when made but would be subject to being annulled by a resolution of the House of Commons within forty days of being laid before the House—assuming them to be laid within fifteen days of being made?

With respect to question 4, relating to affirmative resolutions, most of the answers indicated that such a procedure would not be satisfactory because it would have the effect of delaying the operation of laws carrying out useful policies. Many of the answers pointed out that if the House was not sitting at the time the regulation was laid this would further delay the operation of the regulation and some answers said that a regulation could well lapse if time were not found in the House to pass the required affirmative resolution. Practically all of the answers were critical of the annulment procedure referred to in question 5—primarily on the ground that such a procedure would cause intolerable uncertainty as to the state of the law. Some answers indicated that for all practical purposes the regulation would not become operative until the time for its annulment had gone by.

We are of the view that there is, on balance, a significant value in some forms of parliamentary control over subordinate legislation. We regard the following observations as stating the obvious:

If Parliament is accepted as the sole legislative authority, and if by force of circumstances it must delegate some of its authority to others, then it stands to reason that the public will expect the Parliament to exercise something more than a merely nominal supervision over the work of those to whom law-making powers have been delegated. (Report of the Delegated Legislation Committee, New Zealand (1962), page 6).

It is a primary function of the Legislature to make the laws, and it is responsible for all laws it makes or authorizes to be made. A failure by the Legislature to find some specific place in the legislative calendar for supervision of subordinate legislation is, in our view, a dereliction of duty on its part and a failure to protect the fundamental civil rights of the individual. (Report of the Royal Commission—Inquiry into Civil Rights, 1968, page 370).

As far as “control” is concerned we would agree with the insight expressed in Bernard Crick’s Reform of Parliament (1964) at page 76 ff:

Thus the phrase ‘Parliamentary control’, and talk about the ‘decline of Parliamentary control’, should not mislead anyone into asking for a situation in which Governments can have their legislation changed or defeated, or their life terminated.

A distinguished American scholar with considerable experience in government work, the late Dean J. M. Landis, has commented on the advantages, generally, of the United Kingdom techniques of Parliamentary control over subordinate legislation, as follows:

These techniques have several virtues for one thing, they bring the legislative into close and constant contact with the administrative. Objections by individual members of the legislature to particular regulatory measures can easily and openly be made. With us [the United States], individual legislators who object to the particular administrative regulations, place their objections before the administrative . . . By giving the legislative a definitely recognized share in the exercise of the regulatory power of the administrative, a much more open responsibility of the administrative to the legislature is obtained.

Again, the English technique permits the administrative to call upon the legislature to assume some of the responsibility attendant upon action. The legislative thus can help to overcome a hesitancy to take responsibility for action that sometimes makes the administrative process stagnant... It would be unwise, of course, to require the adoption of the English techniques in all cases. But when the anticipated administrative action is of large significance, value attaches to their employment... (The Administrative Process, (1938) pages 77-79).

We are of the view that the benefits of the English system, which has been resorted to infrequently in Canada, as indicated above, can be enjoyed without any substantial resort to provisions giving Parliament absolute control over the operation of a regulation. We would refer to the following observations which have been made on this issue by thoughtful students of the Parliamentary process and other responsible observers:

In practice instruments are never annulled, because the Minister can count on the Government's majority. Even if the Government were 'caught napping' the Minister could introduce another instrument in identical terms. The procedure by negative resolution was seldom used before 1943. Its value has been questioned, but it has in recent years led to interesting and important debates. No amendment of the instrument is possible, although as a result of criticism the Minister may withdraw it and submit another in a modified form. A better procedure might be to allow motions that a Statutory Instrument be referred to the Government for consideration. (O. Hood Phillips, Constitutional and Administrative Law (4th ed., 1967) at pages 579-80).

One common feature to all these procedures is that neither House has power to amend the statutory instrument. Although some feel that this should be possible, it might involve the House too closely in detailed consideration of matters which Parliament has already decided should be delegated to a Minister it might give rise to complications and delay if each House introduced different amendments. It seems better that if a House is not satisfied with an instrument as it stands, the Minister should withdraw it and start again. (Wade and Phillips, Constitutional Law (7th ed., 1965) at page 618). (This observation is relevant, in part, to the procedure obtaining in Manitoba and Saskatchewan where the Legislatures (which are unicameral) are empowered to require that regulations be amended).

Motions for consideration seem a priori to be a realistic technique for gaining some Parliamentary influence over subordinate legislation. British prayers for annulment and Australian motions for disallowance seem on the surface to give Parliament more effective powers of control, but as we have seen, such motions have little chance of success in doing more than can be done by the New Zealand counterpart—the motion for consideration.... In New Zealand Members of Parliament can, if they are disposed, put their views and objections regarding sub-legislation just as forcefully and just as effectively to the Minister, and through him to the departmental officials who, of course, in practice, administer and amend subordinate laws. (John E. Kersell, Parliamentary Supervision of Delegated Legislation (1960) at page 110).

Dr. Kersell in the period of time between the publication of his book and his submissions to this Committee had not changed his views. He advised as follows:

I am not in favour of the annulling procedure at all. I think it would be more meaningful and more realistic to have a procedure whereby instruments would be referred to the government for consideration, as is the term in New Zealand. You are not telling the government that it cannot have this regulation. It is going to put the whips on it and acquire it in any case. That is referring to experience. (Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, page 96).

The Hon. James C. McRuer has expressed similar views:

If all regulations were required to be laid before the Legislature in Ontario for approval before becoming effective, or to be subject to a resolution of the Legislature which could disapprove of them after they become effective, the exercise of subordinate legislative power would be destroyed for practical purposes. Frequently periods of six months or more elapse between sessions of the Legislature. Regulations passed between sessions of the Legislature would either have no effect until affirmed or would be temporarily effective but subject to disapproval. In the former case prompt action under regulations would be impossible, and in the latter case the risks of disapproval would attend any action taken under the regulations (Report of the Royal Commission—Inquiry into Civil Rights, February 1968, page 367).

Having given the matter due consideration, your Committee recommends that normally Parliament should exercise its power of review by a resolution that a questionable regulation be referred to the Government for reconsideration. We should like to give further consideration to the nature of the amendment to Standing Orders which we would recommend respecting the type of debate on Committee report respecting such a resolution. We should also like to give further consideration to the question of whether there should be some provision in Standing Orders for any group of at least ten members to have the right to require a short debate on a particular regulation provided that this did not interfere with the progress of Government business. The chief attribute of a resolution that a matter be referred to the Government for reconsideration, and to the debate on the motion preceding it, should be its persuasive influence on the Government.

Your Committee also recommends that Parliament should continue to provide, where appropriate in individual statutes, for a procedure by way of affirmative or negative resolution, but we cannot lay down any definitive guidelines as to when it is "appropriate" for Parliament to require such restrictive controls. However, reference might be made to the precedents which may have been established by the ten Canadian provisions quoted in full earlier in this chapter. It may be said, generally, that the more stringent controls should be resorted to when Parliament is enabling subordinate legislation to be made in new areas affecting matters of large consequence to the public. It would appear from most comments on the United Kingdom system that there is no systematic or clear pattern as to the type of controls selected with respect to different types of subordinate legislation. It is of some value to refer to the opinion of a Parliamentary Counsel in the United Kingdom—referred to at page 84 of Dr. Kersell's book, op. cit., as follows:

According to the memorandum submitted by Sir Alan Ellis, then First Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury, to the Select Committee on Delegated Legislation, the question whether the exercise of a particular power of delegated legislation is to be subject to affirmation, negation, or laying without further provision, is answered in the course of preparing the enabling Bill in the same way as other questions of policy, namely, 'on the responsibility of the Minister... subject to the ordinary processes of consultation with his colleagues. The level of the Government organization at which the question is decided on any particular Bill varies as in the case of other questions of policy; it can, however, be said that the question is one on which the draftsman regularly receives express instructions from the Department or asks for them if he does not.' Sir Alan went on to state his opinion that it is right there are no express rules for the decision of this question of the type of Parliamentary control to be provided in particular instances. 'Rules for the settlement of questions such as this, which must arise in circumstances of infinite variety, are nothing but an embarrassment tending to encumber the task of arriving at the right answer in any particular case. The matter is, however, regulated in large measure by precedent.'

It is also of interest to note Dr. Kersell's own assessment of the state of English legislation on this issue. At page 85 he says:

Contemporary practice, it is reasonably safe to say, is to provide controls according to the following scheme:

For legislative statutory instruments having general effect—

Affirmative procedure if the instruments,

1. alter the effect of the enabling Act,
2. make financial provisions,
3. put all the 'meat' on a statutory skeleton,
4. may prejudice persons or classes of persons or for some other reason are of special importance.

Negative procedure for all the remainder.

For legislative statutory instruments having local effect—

Affirmative procedure if the instruments,

1. put all the 'meat' on a statutory skeleton,
2. may prejudice persons or classes of persons, or for some other reason are of special importance.

Negative procedure for virtually all of the remainder.

For administrative instruments having general effect—

Affirmative procedure if they may prejudice persons or classes of persons or are of special importance for some other reason.

Negative procedure or 'informative procedure' (requiring laying only) for most of the remainder.

For administrative instruments having local effect—

'Informative procedure' in some important cases, but generally there is no laying requirement, the only safeguard being the requirements for publicity.

It would appear difficult to engraft such a complex formula on the Canadian scene, but after a certain amount of experience the new Scrutiny Committee might be able to make recommendations in this area. Your Committee therefore recommends that the Scrutiny Committee should have the power to report at any time on general matters affecting the law or practice with respect to regulations.

Your Committee further recommends that it should be reconstituted in the next session to allow further consideration of certain matters referred to in this Report.

Chapter 10

Summary of Recommendations

The following is a summary of your Committee's recommendations:

1. Regulations made in the exercise of the prerogative power of the Governor in Council, insofar as they are of a legislative character, should be subject to the same procedures and requirements as other regulations of a legislative character. (Page 10).
2. Except in the interests of national security, there should be no exemptions from the requirements of the Regulations Act other than as to publication. (Page 20).
3. Rules governing practice or procedure in judicial proceedings should not be excluded from the requirements of the Regulations Act. (Page 21).
4. The Regulations Act should be amended to provide a more inclusive definition of the word "regulation". (Page 27).
5. The Minister of Justice should be charged with the responsibility of deciding for all regulation-making authorities which documents should be classified as regulations. (Page 29).
6. All departmental directives and guidelines as to the exercise of discretion under a statute or regulation where the public is directly affected by such discretion should be published and also subjected to parliamentary scrutiny. (Page 29).
7. All enabling acts for regulation-making authorities should accord with the following principles: (Page 33).
 - (a) The precise limits of the law-making power which Parliament intends to confer should be defined in clear language. (Page 33).
 - (b) There should be no power to make regulations having a retrospective effect. (Page 33).
 - (c) Statutes should not exempt regulations from judicial review. (Page 34).
 - (d) Regulations made by independent bodies, which do not require governmental approval before they become effective, should be - subject to disallowance by the Governor in Council or a Minister. (Page 34).

- (e) Only the Governor in Council should be given authority to make regulations having substantial policy implications. (Page 35).
 - (f) There should be no authority to amend statutes by regulation. (Page 37).
 - (g) There should be no authority to impose by regulation anything in the nature of a tax (as distinct from the fixing of the amount of a license fee or the like). Where the power to charge fees to be fixed by regulations is conferred, the purpose for which the fees are to be charged should be clearly expressed. (Page 38).
 - (h) The penalty for breach of a prohibitory regulation should be fixed, or at least limited by the statute authorizing the regulation. (Page 38).
 - (i) The authority to make regulations should not be granted in subjective terms. (Page 39).
 - (j) Judicial or administrative tribunals with powers of decision on policy grounds should not be established by regulations. (Page 42).
8. The Minister of Justice should, where he deems it appropriate, refer the enabling clauses in any Government bill to the proposed Standing Committee on Regulations at the same time as the bill is referred to the relevant Standing Committee for Committee consideration. (Page 42).
 9. Before making regulations, regulation-making authorities should engage in the widest feasible consultation, not only with the most directly affected persons, but also with the public at large where this would be relevant. Where a large body of new regulations is contemplated, the Government should consider submitting a White Paper, stating its views as to the substance of the regulations, to the appropriate Standing Committee. When enabling provisions and statutes are being drawn, consideration should be given to providing some type of formalized hearings on consultation procedures where appropriate. (Page 47).
 10. The Government should take all necessary steps to facilitate the expansion of the Legislative Section of the Department of Justice and to provide thorough training for legal officers in the Department, including those seconded to other departments, in the drafting of regulations. (Page 52).
 11. The present examination of regulations by the Privy Council Office as to form and draftsmanship and by the Department of Justice as to conformity with the Canadian Bill of Rights should be continued, and the scrutiny by the Department of Justice should also take into account the other criteria for regulations proposed in this Report. (Page 53).
 12. The Regulations Act should provide, as a general rule, that a regulation shall not come into force until the date on which it is transmitted to

- the Clerk of the Privy Council. In cases of emergency a regulation might come into effect at the time of making. (Page 55, 56).
13. Section 9 of the Regulations Act, which allows exemptions from the provisions of that Act, should be amended to provide for exemptions from publication and time of publication only. (Page 58).
 14. All regulations, regardless of the regulation-making authority, should be available for public inspection. (Page 59).
 15. The statutes should resort more than they do now to the use of provisions stating that the regulations made thereunder, or under specified sections thereof, do not become effective until published on some specified period thereafter. (Page 61).
 16. Regulations should be consolidated on a much more regular and frequent basis than has been the practice in the past, and at least once every five years. (Page 63).
 17. The present quarterly consolidated index and table of Statutory Orders and Regulations should include reference to all regulations which have been exempted from publication. (Page 63).
 18. All regulations should be laid before Parliament forthwith after their transmittal to the Clerk of the Privy Council and their recording and numbering by him. Votes and Proceedings should list under "Returns and Reports Deposited with the Clerk of the House" the title of each regulation (which should be as descriptive as possible) the Act under which it is made, its date and the date of its transmittal. (Page 66).
 19. A new Committee on Regulations should be established, with the following particulars: (Page 74).
 - (1) It should be a Standing Committee of the House of Commons. (Page 74).
 - (2) All regulations should stand permanently referred to it. (Page 75).
 - (3) It should strive to operate in an objective and non-partisan way. (Page 76).
 - (4) It should have a small membership to enable it to operate effectively. (Page 76).
 - (5) To make the objectivity of the Committee apparent, there should be some rotation among parties in the chairmanship. (Page 76).
 - (6) It should normally sit in public session. (Page 77).
 - (7) It should be empowered to sit while Parliament is not sitting. (Page 77).
 - (8) It should have adequate staff. (Page 77).
 - (9) It should examine regulations on the basis of six criteria: (Page 78).
 - (a) Whether they are authorized by the terms of the enabling statute. (P. 79).
 - (b) Whether they appear to make some unusual or unexpected use of the powers conferred by the statute under which it is made. (Page 79).

- (c) Whether they trespass unduly on personal rights and liberties. (P. 79).
- (d) Whether they have complied with the provisions of the Regulations Act with respect to transmittal, certification, recording, numbering, publication or laying before Parliament. (Page 79).
- (e) Whether they
 - (i) represent an abuse of the power to provide that they shall come into force before they are transmitted to the Clerk of the Privy Council or
 - (ii) unjustifiably fail to provide that they shall not come into force until published or until some later date. (Page 80).
- (f) Whether for any special reason their form or purport calls for elucidation. (Page 80).
- (10) It should have the usual investigative powers of a Standing Committee. (Page 80).
- (11) It should have the same power as other Standing Committees to report to the House. (Page 80).
- 20. The Scrutiny Committee should have the power, in its discretion, to refer regulations to other Standing Committees and that they should then stand referred to such Committees for consideration. (Page 81).
- 21. Normally Parliament should exercise its power to review by a resolution that a questionable regulation be referred to the Government for reconsideration but Parliament should continue to provide, where appropriate in individual statutes, for a procedure by way of affirmative or negative resolution. (Page 88).
- 22. The Scrutiny Committee should have the power to report at any time on general matters affecting the law or practice with respect to regulations. (Page 89).
- 23. Your Committee should be reconstituted in the next session to allow further consideration of certain matters referred to in this Report. (Page 89).

Mr. Speaker communicated to the House the following letter:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

October 17, 1969

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Right Honourable John R. Cartwright, P.C., M.C., Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber at 4.45 p.m. on Wednesday, October 22nd, for the purpose of proroguing the First Session of the Twenty-eighth Parliament of Canada.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

LOUIS-FRÉMONT TRUDEAU,
Assistant Secretary to the Governor General.

The Honourable

The Speaker of the House of Commons.

At 4.19 o'clock p.m., the sitting was suspended.

At 4.48 o'clock p.m., the sitting resumed.

A Message was received from the Right Honourable John R. Cartwright, P.C., M.C., Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General, desiring the immediate attendance of the House in the Senate Chamber.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, with the House went to the Senate Chamber where the Honourable the Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the First Session of the Twenty-Eighth Parliament with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The first session of the twenty-eighth Parliament was noteworthy both for the importance of the measures carried into law, and for the preparations set under way for further action in this Parliament.

Canadians were saddened during this session by the death of a distinguished and much respected former Governor General, Field Marshal The Right Honourable The Earl Alexander of Tunis. His gallant leadership in war and his devoted public service in peace won His Lordship the respect and affection of all Canadians.

Appreciative of the need for the effective administration of our public affairs, you approved far-reaching changes in the organization of the Government and its departments, and procedures by which each of the chambers of Parliament discharges its public duties. The Departments of Regional Economic Expansion, Communications, and Supply and Services were established. The rules of the House of Commons have undergone fundamental reform so that the Members of that chamber may undertake a more profound scrutiny of public affairs. Research assistance was provided to the leaders of the Opposition parties to enable them to better discharge their vital responsibilities.

Amongst the most important legislative contributions to the preservation of Canadian unity were steps taken to reduce inequalities of language rights and economic opportunities. The Official Languages Act recognized the right of Canadians to deal with federal government institutions in French or English. To combat regional economic disparities, you sanctioned the creation of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and the enactment of the Regional Development Incentives Act.

During the session, the Government re-convened the Federal-Provincial Constitutional Conference to consider changes which a century of experience and the challenges of our time demand in our basic constitutional structures. Wide ranging proposals for constitutional reform continued to be studied by heads of governments and by their official representatives.

In pursuance of its objectives of justice and equality, the Government proposed a policy within which Canada's Indian peoples might overcome the discrimination, economic, legal and social, under which they have long suffered.

The Government has, as a result of its review of external and defence policies, undertaken fresh departures in foreign policy. It decided to re-align Canadian forces within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Negotiations were commenced with representatives of the People's Republic of China with the aim of establishing formal diplomatic relations with that government. Discussions between Canada and the Holy See resulted in the decision to exchange representation at the ambassadorial level. Canadian ministerial missions visited Japan and Latin America to explore possibilities of increased trade, investment and closer co-operation.

The Prime Minister attended the Conference in London of Commonwealth Prime Ministers and visited Washington at the invitation of the President of the United States. He and his colleagues received a number of leaders of other countries, including the Presidents of Niger and Tanzania; the Prime Ministers of Barbados, Lesotho, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand; the Foreign Ministers of the United Arab Republic, Belgium, Israel, Germany, Britain, Dahomey, Gabon, the Soviet Union, Italy and Burma; and the Secretaries-General of the United Nations and NATO.

Inflation continues to threaten the economy. Through fiscal and monetary policies, the establishment of a Prices and Incomes Commission, and strict control of its own expenditures, the Government is attempting to reduce the upward pressure on prices. Continued care by the Government and matching concern at other levels of government and in the private economy will be necessary, however, to contain cost and price increases within the limits of increased productivity.

The Canadian dollar has remained strong during a period of uncertainty in world foreign exchange markets. As one step toward the establishment of a larger liquidity base for international trade, you have approved changes in the Bretton Woods Agreement to establish special drawing rights.

You have also approved amendments to the Customs Tariff for the purpose of implementing Canadian undertakings in the Kennedy Round Trade negotiations. At the same time, you approved the Anti-Dumping Act and the creation of an anti-dumping tribunal to protect Canadian producers from unfair trading practices. As a further aid to the competitive position of Canadian producers on world markets, you have established the Export Development Corporation with broad financial powers to facilitate sales to foreign customers.

You have approved amendments to the Estate Tax Act, and to the gift tax provisions of the Income Tax Act, which will ensure a fairer distribution of the burden of taxation. Other amendments to the Income Tax Act with relation to insurance and banking institutions will have the same effect.

The Government has initiated a thorough review of the present social security system and of veterans' pensions. Parliament has approved amendments to the National Housing Act to expand the powers of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to assist limited dividend and non-profit housing companies. You also increased the funds available for housing loans to individuals and revised the terms on which such loans may be made.

At no session since the Criminal Code was introduced in Canada have there been such extensive and fundamental amendments of the criminal law. The amendments which you approved reflected the concern of Canadians that criminal sanctions be employed to protect public order, but not to enforce private beliefs.

It was this concern about the use of legal controls to regulate private conduct which caused the Government to establish a committee of enquiry into the non-medical use of drugs.

You have directed your attention to the high cost of the medical use of drugs and by assuring competition in their production and sale without prejudice to safety standards, you have strengthened the position of Canadian consumers.

You have also approved legislation that will protect Canadian consumers from the dangers of certain hazardous products which may be available on our markets.

In order to improve the quality of health, recreation and competitive sport in Canada, the Government tabled the Report of the Task Force on Sport and implemented a substantial number of its recommendations.

Labour disputes of major concern to the national interest were considered by Parliament. Anxious to improve many aspects of management-labour relations, the Government tabled a Task Force Report on Labour Relations which will provide the background for legislation to be introduced in the next session.

During this session, you have enacted a number of measures to give financial assistance to the farming community. You have extended the provisions of the Prairie Grain Advance Payment Act to provide further liquidity to the farmers of Western Canada. The Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Farm Syndicates Credit Act, and the Farm Credit Act have all been expanded in their application. You have approved a measure to regulate plant quarantine, and to provide or extend compensation for losses due to pesticide residues, animal contagious diseases, and plants destroyed to prevent the spread of disease.

A new measure which you have enacted established the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation to improve marketing opportunities for the fisheries industries of Western Canada. The Government has also provided special assistance to the producers of the Atlantic fisheries to help them through a difficult period.

The creation of the new Department of Communications sought to consolidate the responsibilities of the Government of Canada in that field and to assure that recent advances in technology would be made available to Canadians. You approved amendments to the Post Office Act, and a study of the future development of the Post Office was undertaken. An imaginative piece of legislation established Telesat Canada which will provide this country with communications from a synchronous satellite early in the next decade.

In the face of encouraging prospects of resource development in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, you have approved the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act which will provide a new system for the orderly development of oil and gas resources.

A number of other important items of legislation were approved in this first session of the twenty-eighth Parliament which has been distinguished by innovation and reform. This creditable record is the beginning of a comprehensive program of legislation which must be enacted if we are to achieve our common goals of peace, justice and national prosperity.

1. Ordered,—That rules and procedures in effect prior to dissolution on Apr. 23, 1968, shall be in effect for present session until House resumes sittings after Christmas recess with following exceptions: S.O. 15-A re Business Committee and allocation of time procedure, not to be in effect; modification of resolution adopted Apr. 26, 1967, relating to S.O.'s 56 and 57 re business of supply for 1968-69 to the effect that estimates for all departments shall be deemed entered for consideration on their referral to Committee of Supply, there shall be one supply motion, business of supply shall be limited to 17 days exclusive of final supplementaries, and the questions to dispose of all proceedings under this order shall be put without further amendment at the ordinary time of adjournment on the 17th day; and for the duration of the current session S.O. 65 shall be amended re change of Committee names and procedures, etc., 58-60.

4. Notice of Motion to amend Standing Orders of the House, called and point of order raised that the proposed motion was substantially the same as recommendations in the Third Report of the Procedure and Organization Committee, 1284. Motion (Mr. Macdonald, Rosedale), that Standing Orders be amended by adding new Standing Orders 75-A, -B and -C: moved, and point of order raised that consideration of proposed motion would block consideration of motion for concurrence in Third Report of Procedure and Organization Committee, 1316. Mr. Speaker ruled the point of order not well taken as the anticipation rule would block whichever motion had not been moved, 1316-8. Debate on the main motion resumed, and point of order raised that the proposed motion raises a point already decided in this session; debate interrupted, 1318.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements:Adjournment of the House (Special Order); Amendment:

During debate on the motion to adjourn the House (debate on the constitutional conference), Mr. Fortin proposed to move,—That the House do not adjourn at 5.00 p.m., but that the debate be continued until 6.00 p.m., 708. Mr. Acting Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as a substantive motion, 708.

Adjournment Motions under S.O. 26 for Debates of Urgent Public Importance:

Mr. Korchinski sought leave to discuss the bottleneck at Vancouver of grain shipments, 610. Mr. Speaker ruled that the question did concern the administrative responsibilities of the government, was important, urgent, did not impede public business, and there was no other opportunity for debate, 610-1.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements — (Continued)Bills, Government; Second Reading Amendments:

Mr. Macquarrie during debate on motion for second reading of Bill C-116 (Post Office Act amendment), proposed an amendment; to defer until subject-matter has been considered by Transport and Communications Committee, 147. Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment out of order in that it does not oppose the principle of the bill but merely attaches a condition, 148.

Mr. Woolliams during debate on motion for second reading of Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment), proposed an amendment; to instruct Standing Committee to present four separate reports on bill, 616. Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as contrary to S.O.'s 74, 75 and various citations. Also because similar opportunity exists at report stage proceedings under revised Standing Orders, 616-8.

During debate on motion for second reading of Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), Mr. Latulippe proposed an amendment to clause 13, 697. Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment out of order, in that it could not be moved at that stage of the bill, 697-8.

Mr. Schreyer during debate on motion for second reading of Bill C-184 (Telesat Canada Act), proposed an amendment; House should consider establishing as crown corporation with provision for participation by provincial governments as well as federal, 895. Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as not being declaratory of a principle but proposing an alternative scheme, therefore not in conformity with a reasoned amendment, 895.

Bills, Government; Committee of the Whole Amendments:

See Chairman's Decisions Appealed.

Bills, Government; Report Stage:

During debate on Bill C-195 (Fisheries Improvement Loans Act amendment), Mr. Crouse raised a point of order regarding changing the title of the bill. Mr. Speaker ruled that he did not see how the proposal would bring the bill inside or outside the scope of the Interpretation Act or make it more acceptable, although the argument might be of interest to the law officers of the Crown, and that he was doubtful if the motion would be in order at this stage of proceedings, but would submit it to the House, 1171-2.

Bills, Government; Report Stage Amendments:

During debate on Bill C-102 (Patent Act, Trade Marks Act and Food and Drugs Act amendment), Mrs. MacInnis proposed an amendment to clause 5 which Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled out of order as being irrelevant and beyond scope of clause under consideration, 862-3. Mrs. MacInnis proposed a further amendment to clause 5 which Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled out of order as purporting to amend another statute, 863. Mr. Saltsman proposed an amendment to clause 5 which Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled out of order as creating a new public charge, 864.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), Mr. Laprise proposed an amendment to divide Committee Report into four sections which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order as being in the nature of a reasoned amendment which might have been moved at the second reading stage, 906-7. Mr. Laprise proposed a further amendment to defer clause 7 until the words "act of gross indecency" be defined by the Committee which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order on the same grounds as the prior proposed motion, 907.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), Mr. Gilbert proposed an amendment to clause 7 which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order on the grounds that it was irrelevant and beyond the scope of the bill, 907.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), amendments to clause 18 proposed by Mr. Rodrigue (2), Mr. Laprise, Mr. Valade, were ruled out of order by Mr. Speaker as being reasoned amendments which could be moved at the second reading stage, 946-7.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), amendments to clause 18 proposed by Mrs. MacInnis (2), Mr. Woolliams, Mr. Rodrigue, were ruled out of order by Mr. Speaker on the grounds that they went beyond the scope of the bill, 947.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), Mr. Burton proposed a subamendment to clause 18; on which a point of order raised by Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton) on admissibility, Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled the subamendment consistent and relevant to the motion and therefore admissible, 959.

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), Mr. Laprise proposed a subamendment to clause 18, which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order on the grounds that it was not relevant, in that it proposed to amend the Bill rather than the motion before the House, 968.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements – (Continued)Bills, Government; Report Stage Amendments – (Concluded)

During debate on Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), two amendments proposed by Mr. Gilbert to clause 75 were ruled out of order by Mr. Speaker on the grounds that they went beyond the scope of the bill and purported to amend the statute rather than the bill, 1017-8.

During debate on Bill S-29 (Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act), an amendment was proposed by Mr. Howard (Skeena) to substitute a new clause 58, on which a point of order was raised by Mr. Chretien as to its regularity, Mr. Acting Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as being a substantive motion which seeks to introduce new clauses into the bill, 1125.

During debate on Bill C-184 (Telesat Canada Act), an amendment to clause 3 was proposed by Mr. Saltsman to delete certain words and add others, on which a point of order was raised as to its interdependence with another proposed amendment. Mr. Acting Speaker suggested that if the prior motion were negatived, the latter motion would become a nullity, and that consideration of the latter amendment could be deferred until the prior amendment had been disposed of, 1126.

During debate on Bill C-195 (Fisheries Improvement Loans Act amendment), Mr. Crouse proposed an amendment to clause 1 which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order as infringing the financial initiative of the Crown, 1172-3. Mr. Crouse and Mr. Howard (Skeena) proposed further amendments to clause 2 which Mr. Speaker ruled out of order as going beyond the scope of the bill, 1173-4.

An amendment having been moved by Mr. McQuaid to clauses 28, 29 and 30 of Bill C-120 (Official Languages Act), Mr. Speaker stated that each amendment should relate to a specific clause of a bill, and not several clauses, 1218.

Bills, Government; Third Reading:

On a point of order raised by Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West), Mr. Speaker ruled that third reading may be given on the same day bill is reported, provided there is no amendment at the report stage, 738-9.

Bills, Government; Third Reading Amendments:

Mr. Gilbert, during debate on motion for third reading of Bill C-173 (Government Organization Act), proposed an amendment to recommit to Committee of the Whole for the purpose of providing for a Department of Housing and Urban Affairs. Mr. Acting Speaker ruled the amendment out of order in that it went beyond the scope of the bill, 829.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), during debate on motion for third reading of Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), proposed an amendment to defer and refer back to Justice and Legal Affairs Committee to amend clause 13. On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as not consistent with clause it purported to amend and also was in nature of an expanded negative, 1024.

Mr. Caouette, during debate on motion for third reading of Bill C-150 (Criminal Law Amendment Act), proposed an amendment to defer and refer back to Justice and Legal Affairs Committee to add a clause providing that clause 18 shall be approved by means of a referendum. Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment out of order as not relevant to the motion, beyond the scope of the bill and introduced expenditure of public moneys, 1024.

During debate on motion for third reading of Bill C-120 (Official Languages Act), Mr. McIntosh proposed an amendment to defer and refer to Supreme Court of Canada for an opinion as to the constitutionality of the said bill. Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton), raised a point of order as to the regularity of the proposed amendment. Mr. Speaker ruled that as the rules of the House regarding third reading have been materially changed, former relevant precedents are no longer valid, the proposed amendment should be accepted as a reasoned amendment, 1314-5.

Bills, Private; Report Stage Amendments:

During debate on Bill S-6 (Canada Trust Company), Mr. Saltsman proposed an amendment to delete clause 1. On a point of order, Mr. Speaker ruled that it would be difficult to distinguish between an amendment to a one-clause bill and an amendment to a bill containing two or more clauses, and that he would accept the amendment, 698-9.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements – (Continued)Bills, Public (Private Members); Introduction and First Reading:

On the 7th sitting day of the Session when the first list of Private Members Public Bills appeared for Introduction on the Order Paper, Mr. Speaker stated that all such Bills would be scrutinized for defects prior to the second reading stage because the Chair was not yet in a position to review them to judge their acceptability under the rules, and in order to save time all Bills will be deemed to have been introduced and given first reading, 54.

Budget Debate Amendments:

See ruling under heading Ways and Means (Budget).

Cabinet Ministers, Attendance in House during Question Period:

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. MacInnis, Mr. Speaker deferred his decision until the next sitting, 125. Mr. Speaker referring to a previous ruling on June 1, 1966, Hansard, page 3756, ruled that questions to Ministers must relate to departments for which they have a responsibility or an acting responsibility, and not as a representative of a province, etc., and that a member cannot insist on an answer. He further ruled that the question of privilege was not raised at the first opportunity and the motion following was a substantive motion, requiring notice, therefore was not acceptable, 132-4.

Chairman's Decisions Appealed:

During debate in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-111 (Farm Improvement Loans Act amendment), Mr. Horner proposed an amendment to clause 1. Mr. Bechar (Deputy Chairman) ruled the amendment out of order, upon which objection was taken and an appeal made to Mr. Speaker pursuant to provisional S.O. 59(4), 118. Mr. Speaker ruled that the amendment affects the conditions and qualifications set out in the resolution, therefore he confirmed the Chairman's decision, 119.

Closure of Debate:

A point of order being raised by Mr. Aiken as to the validity of the motion proposed by Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) for closure of debate on the motion for concurrence in the Procedure and Organization Committee third report and the amendment thereto, Mr. Speaker ruled that as all precedents support the viewpoint that any amendment to a main motion comes under the provisions of the cut-off time set out in S.O. 33, the point of order could not be accepted, 1393-6.

Committees, Special; Reports:

On a point of order raised by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) on Dec. 9, 1968, suggesting that the motion for concurrence in the Procedure Committee's fourth report should be debated in Committee of the Whole rather than with Speaker in Chair, Mr. Speaker ruled that he did not have power to determine such a procedure, and that the scope for debate is as great with the Speaker in the Chair as it is in Committee of the Whole, 511-3.

Committees, Staff and Facilities:

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. Laprise on Oct. 31, 1968, protesting against the lack of committee personnel and facilities, Mr. Speaker stated that in co-operation with House officials, steps would be taken with a view to improving the situation, 197.

Committees, Standing; Reports:

On motion for concurrence in External Affairs and National Defence Committee second report, Mr. Fairweather proposed an amendment to the report by adding paragraphs 10 and 11, 394. Mr. Speaker stated that he was allowing the amendment because of the wording in the special order which set up the debate on the report, but that this should not be considered a precedent, 394.

Mr. McGrath rose on a question of privilege concerning the omission of a resolution from second report of Transport and Communications Committee and proposed to move, —That the matter be referred to Privileges and Elections Committee, 513. Mr. Speaker questioned the wisdom of one committee examining the affairs of another, however, on the question before the Chair there was a prima facie case of privilege, 513.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements — (Continued)Committees, Standing; Reports — (Concluded)

On a point of order raised on March 25, when the order for concurrence in the fifth report of the standing committee on Transport and Communications was called, after objection taken as to the appropriate time in proceedings to discuss procedural aspects, Mr. Speaker ruled that it was in order to question the form of the committee report before the motion was put. He suggested motion be stood to give members an opportunity to discuss substance of points raised by the President of the Privy Council, 854-5. On order being called, after arguments advanced, Mr. Speaker ruled that it was not the duty of the Chair to judge if report offends statute or clause thereof, as the matter may be dealt with by the House itself by means of a motion. As to irregularity of committee proceedings, there is no reference in the report and it is not competent for this House to go back of the report which is now in its possession. Although wording of recommendation is a departure from established practice it is accepted at this time as it is tantamount to the normal form, but should changes from the usual procedures come in question the matter could be considered by the Procedure Committee, therefore motion for concurrence could now be put, 873-4.

On motion for concurrence in Transport and Communications Committee fifth report Mr. Allmand moved an amendment to refer back to Committee to delete recommendation concerning suspended rail passenger service in Newfoundland. After point of order raised by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre), Mr. Deputy Speaker ruled that report of a Committee is considered final only when adopted by House, and until then can be referred back with instructions to amend in any particular, therefore amendment in order, 880.

During debate on the motion of Mr. Blair for concurrence in the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, a point of order was raised by Mr. Baldwin that the proposed Standing Order 75-A was not consistent with the constitutional provision that questions arising in the House shall be decided by a majority of voices. Mr. Speaker stated that it was not the duty of the Chair to rule on points of law and constitutional matters, and that the point of order might be more properly advanced as a point of debate, 1319-20.

On motion for concurrence in Procedure and Organization Committee third report, Mr. Deachman proposed a subamendment by adding certain words, 1333-4. Mr. Speaker ruled the subamendment out of order on the grounds that it went beyond the scope of the amendment, 1334.

During debate on the motion of Mr. Blair for concurrence in the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, a point of order was raised by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) that the proposed motion was contrary to the rights and privileges of Parliament and should be so declared by Mr. Speaker under provisions of S.O. 51. Mr. Speaker stated that the duty of the Chair was to rule according to the rules the House adopts, and that he was not prepared to substitute his judgment and ruling for that of the House, 1397-9.

Committees, Standing; Reports—Amendments:

During debate on the motion for concurrence in the fifth report of the Transport and Communications Committee, Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) moved that the report be amended by deleting the fourth paragraph, 879. On a point of order, Mr. Speaker ruled the amendment defective and out of order, 880.

Documents, Tabling of, etc.:

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Speaker ruled that while S.O. 41(2) provides for the tabling of documents relating to ministerial responsibilities, it does not provide for the tabling of a report in response to questions asked orally, therefore the question of privilege was justified, 655-7.

On a question of privilege being raised by Mr. Baldwin re tabling of notice of Ways and Means motion to amend the Income Tax Act and the Estate Tax Act, Mr. Speaker ruled that matter was within administrative responsibility of government in view of S.O. 41(2), however, Procedure and Organization Committee could review particular S.O., if interpretation beyond its original intent, 655-7.

Government Motions:

The order being called on the proposed motion of Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) to amend S.O. 75, Mr. Baldwin raised a point of order that the motion was substantially the same as recommendations in the third report of the Procedure and Organization Committee and should not be proceeded with until the report had been disposed of. Mr. Speaker deferred his decision and directed that the motion stand, 1283-4. Mr. Speaker ruled that it is not contrary to the rules or practice of the House to set down similar motions on the Order Paper, and that as S.O. 21(2) vides for automatic transferral of the Government notice of motion to Government Orders, its further progress became a Government decision. At this point, the anticipation rule might become operative in that the later motion might block consideration of the earlier one. However, priority of the earlier motion cannot be used to block consideration of the later one. Priority on the Order Paper should not be confused with the rule of anticipation, 1289-90.

During debate on the motion of Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) to amend S.O. 75, a point of order was raised by Mr. Baldwin that the said motion anticipated a motion on the Order Paper. Mr. Speaker ruled that the anticipation rule, if applied, would block whichever of the motions had not been moved, but as the government motion had been put before the House, it must be considered. He also stated that the duty of the Chair was to rule according to the rules the House adopts, and it would be a dictatorial act for the Chair to substitute its judgment and ruling for that of the House, 1316-8.

Motions:

During debate on motion for second reading of Bill C-116 (Post Office Act amendment), Mr. Skoberg proposed to move,—That the House proceed to another government order, 156. Mr. Speaker ruled that a motion to so proceed may be moved only by the House Leader, 157. Statement by Mr. Speaker on filing of various notices when House is suspended, 623-4.

Privilege, Question of:

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. Roberts on Mar. 27, 1969, concerning terminal gratuity when leaving Public Service, Mr. Speaker ruled in favour of the member, 853.

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. Woolliams on Mar. 28, 1969, and the subsequent proposed motion to refer “the question of information of the announcement of the new Montreal international airport having been given prior to said announcement....” to the Privileges and Elections Committee, Mr. Speaker ruled that insofar as the technical and procedural aspects of the matter were concerned, allegations against a Minister on the performance of ministerial duties did not come within the purview of parliamentary privilege. If the matter was to be dealt with further, it should be by way of substantive motion or by motion of non-confidence in government. Therefore motion not accepted, 869-73.

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. Saltsman on June 3, 1969, concerning advanced information on the presentation of the Budget being given to the press and not to Members of Parliament, Mr. Speaker ruled that the entire matter of advanced briefings could be considered by the Executive for future budgets, however there was not a prima facie case of privilege, 1105-6.

On a question of privilege raised by Mr. McGrath on June 9, 1969, and the subsequent proposed motion to refer “the article in the Montreal Star of Tuesday, June 3 by John Gray...” to the Privileges and Elections Committee, Mr. Speaker ruled that as the question had not been raised immediately, and as the proposed motion was a substantive motion requiring notice, the motion could not be accepted, 1136-8.

Quorum:

During debate on Motions (Papers) standing in the name of Mr. Orlikow, a point of order was raised by Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) that a quorum was absent, whereupon the House was counted and a quorum was found to be lacking. The names of Members present being taken down, there was found to be a quorum. A further point of order was raised by Mr. Knowles that as the original count of the House had shown lack of a quorum, the House must stand adjourned. Mr. Speaker stated that Members had been entering and leaving the Chamber during the taking of the count making accuracy difficult. However, for the purposes of Citation 60 of Beauchesne, it cannot be the number of names inscribed in the record which is decisive but the number of Members present at the time of the original count. Mr. Speaker ruled that he could reach no other conclusion than to apply the provisions of Citation 60 and adjourn the House, 1329-30.

Speaker's Rulings and Statements – (Concluded)Sittings of the House:

On a motion, "That this House do not adjourn at 5.00 p.m." (Discussion of Federal-Provincial Conference), Mr. Acting Speaker ruled the amendment out of order on the grounds that it was a substantive motion, 708.

A point of order being raised on the motion of Mr. Woolliams—"That the House adjourn at 4.00 p.m.", Mr. Speaker stated that he was not convinced by the precedents cited either for or against the motion, and the question should be put to the House, 1386-7.

On the proposed motion of Mr. Fortin—"That the House do now adjourn", Mr. Speaker ruled the motion out of order as no intermediate proceeding had taken place as required by S.O. 25, 1388-9.

Supply Motion:

On a point of order being raised by Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Speaker stated that voting on opposition motion on final supplementaries, brought before House under S.O. 58 and a special order, will be governed by procedure for allotted days which does not allow for a vote. Statement not to be regarded as a decision as further consideration of question is deemed advisable, 762-3.

Ways and Means (Budget) Amendments:

Mr. Caouette during debate on the Budget proposed to move a subamendment, 212. Mr. Acting Speaker ruled that under S.O. 45 a second subamendment was not allowed, 212.
